"Now, as Member-in-charge of the Home Department, I am directly concerned with only five Services or groups of Services recruited in India. I do not think these Services were referred to by the Hon'ble Member specifically, but the facts in regard to them ought to be put before Council; they are the Provincial Civil and Judicial Services, the Provincial Police Services, the class of Civil Assistant Surgeons and the Services of Registration Officers. The facts regarding these Services are stated by the Commission as follows :—In the Provincial Civil and Judicial Services the percentage of Indians was 91 excluding and nearly 98 including Anglo-Indians; in the Provincial Police Services omitting Burma, where special conditions prevailed, the percentage was 82 excluding Anglo-Indians. The Commission do not give figures for Anglo-Indians separately, and so I cannot say what the percentages would be if they were included, but it is safe to say that the percentage would have been materially increased. In any case, the employment of a percentage of Europeans in the Provincial Police Service, for quasi-military works and in large towns where there is a considerable European population, is a practical necessity. The Commission went on to say that Civil Assistant Surgeon Services were almost exclusively Indian, while in the Registration Services the percentage of Indian employés was 98 per cent. and 100, including Anglo-Indians. The great majority of the personnel of the Services recruited in India, with which the Home Department is connected, is, therefore, Indian in the narrowest sense of the word. If Anglo-Indians were included, it is almost exclusively Indian. I am not in a position to deal definitely with other Services with which the Home Department is not directly connected, but I understand that the position in regard to some of them will be explained by my Hon'ble Colleague. I can, however, point to some in which the position is already satisfactory, and to others in which great progress has been made in the direction which the Hon'ble Member desires. In the Indian Finance Department, more than half the recruitment is at present made in India if promotion from subordinates is included, and I understand that in recent years practically all the officers directly recruited have been Indians of unmixed descent. I observed myself the other day three new candidates were admitted, all of whom were pure Indians. A recent calculation shows that in the Provincial Services of the Public Works Department over 73 per cent. are Indians, excluding Anglo-Indians; if the latter were included, the percentage would be higher. The Commission stated that the Provincial Education Services were preponderatingly Indian. I can give the Council more definite figures. Five years ago the percentage of Indians was 85, now it is 89. In the last five years 145 Indians have been appointed against four Europeans and Anglo-Indians. In the Postal Department, the Commission found that Indians of unmixed descent held only 5 out of 46 or 11 per cent. of the appointments on Rs. 500 and over, but taking the Service as a whole, it was found that they held 132 out of 277 appointments, or 48 per cent. of the posts. The position has changed very considerably since these figures were collected, and the facts now are that Indians of unmixed descent hold approximately 28 per cent. of the appointments on Rs. 500 and over. Taking the Department all round, they hold 170 out of 303, or roughly 56 per cent. of the superior posts. These percentages exclude Anglo-Indians. The Commission express their approval of the progress made in employing,

[27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Sir William Vincent.]

Indians in this Department. They do not give figures for the Telegraph Department, but an examination of the departmental lists in recent years shows that Indians have very freely been recruited to the superior grades. I am not familiar with the Northern India Salt Department, and so I can offer no remarks about it, but I have no doubt that my Colleague, who is in charge of that Service, will either deal with the matter now, or take the remarks of the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri into consideration.

"I want to impress on the Council another point, namely, that figures of percentages based on cadres, taken as a whole, do not fairly represent the progress that has been made. It is in recent years that the increase in the recruitment of Indians has been marked, and to ascertain the real progress, we should have to split up the cadres into five or ten yearly recruitment periods. If the figures of the whole cadre are taken, they necessarily include figures for 20 and 25 years ago, when Indians were not recruited as freely as now. My contention is that as regards a number of the Services the position aimed at by the Resolution has been largely attained, and that there has been great progress towards the Indianisation of all Services recruited in India so far as such Indianisation is possible. I hope I have been able to satisfy the Council that the Government has dealt, and will continue to deal fairly and adequately, with Indians in this matter. The second part of the Resolution recommends that the educational qualifications prescribed for admission into the Services concerned should be sufficiently high and the same for all candidates irrespective of race or creed. It raises, as the Hon'ble Member said, delicate questions and, if I may say so, I think he has made his points with considerable moderation and with every desire to avoid raising any racial feeling. If I depart from that attitude in any way, I hope that the Council will believe me when I say that I do not do so intentionally, and that my sole desire is to put the facts plainly before it.

"The practice of the Government in regard to educational qualifications varies a good deal, and in some cases at least the rules are designedly elastic but, I believe, I am safe in saying that whatever the rules and practice, they are inspired by two main objects. On the one hand, the Government are not prepared to make any educational qualifications indispensable which would not give them a reasonably wide field of candidates from all communities, castes and religions to select from. And, on the other, they aim at making it certain that the candidates are sufficiently educated for the duties they have to perform. The Commission recommend that all recruits by nomination should possess a certain minimum educational qualification, and this clearly accords with the Government's present practice. The Hon'ble Member goes further than this, and desires to have the same educational standards for all communities in the different Services, and the adoption of this part of the Resolution would, I think, involve a radical and immediate modification of the present system with far-reaching results. I fear that the Hon'ble Member by his Resolution would set up an exclusive barrier in favour of the best educated men alone, and that this would be bound to work in favour of communities and castes which are educationally advanced to the exclusion of those not so well advanced, whether Muhammadans, Sikhs, Rajputs, Uriyas, Anglo-Indians, or whatever other class they may belong to. The principle of equivalent standards of educational qualifications for all communities alike is one that is obviously attractive theoretically, and it is, as I have said, supported by the Public Services Commission.

"But when we come to consider this principle from a practical point of view and not merely as an abstract theory, there are great difficulties in the application of it which cannot be overlooked. In the first place, it proceeds on the assumption that educational qualifications are for all Services and for all Departments the best test of a candidate's fitness. This is a proposition with which, I think, many will not agree when it is considered in its practical application to particular departments, such as the Railway, Customs, Police and other departments. There are in such Services many other qualities upon which the fitness of a candidate must depend, particularly in Services connected with technical departments. What the Government seek to obtain generally is a supply of candidates who are not only educationally fit, but are also by reason of their character, disposition, physique and technical aptitude best suited for the particular Services concerned. In many departments the possession of educational qualifications in so far as that can be tested by examination must be the main factor. In other departments once a certain standard of education is attained, other qualities are of greater importance and indeed essential to the effectual discharge of the duties of the Service. Where experience has shown that these qualities are more readily found in one class than in others, and where they are essential in the interests of efficiency, it would be folly to insist on unduly high educational qualifications from that class if the result of requiring such qualifications would be the entire exclusion of candidates, who are intellectually well equipped to perform the duties of the offices to which they are appointed, and are otherwise better suited for that particular employment than other candidates who may be educationally their superior.

"The Hon'ble Member has made a great point of the fact that the educational qualifications for admissison into Government Service are lower in the case of Anglo-Indians than in the case of Indians, because this enables them to enter the Service on somewhat easier terms than candidates who do not go through the curriculum of the European or Anglo-Indian schools. Well, it is true the qualifications required in the case of members of the domiciled community are different from those required for Indians But the fact is that the level of education in so far as this can be assessed by the possession of University Degrees is probably lower among Anglo-Indians than among Indians, and this is due to many causes into which I have no time to enter. This ought not, however, I submit, to be made a reason for excluding them from Services in which they have proved that in practical capacity and efficiency they are as good or if not better than Indians who may hold superior educational certificates. I do not for a moment suggest that Indians should not be employed, as far as possible, in Services recruited in India, even at the sacrifice in some cases of efficiency. Indeed the facts and figures which I have quoted negative any such idea, for Indians have monopolised at present many of the Services in this country. The number of Indians so employed is rapidly increasing. But the point that I wish to make is, that in present conditions it would not, in my judgment, be either fair to the domiciled community or conduce to the public interest to insist on their possessing identical educational qualifications with other communities. In any circumstances, it would obviously be impossible to give immediate effect to this recommendation without great hardship and injustice to that community, and I cannot believe that the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri would invite Government to follow any course which involves such consequences. I am informed that the present educational policy of Government is calculated to facilitate in great measure the attainment of the object which the Hon'ble Member has in view. I understand that an increasing proportion of the Anglo-Indian community now proceeds annually to the Universities, and that an impetus is now being given to this tendency by the establishment of hostels for them. I am informed, indeed, that the number of students from the Anglo-Indian community reading in colleges has recently doubled in the last ten years. The difficulty to which the Hon'ble Member alludes is, therefore, likely to solve itself in time, but it is a process which must take time. In present circumstances, I do not think that it is either possible or fair to a community which has rendered loyal and great services to the Government in the past to give an undertaking of the nature which the Hon'ble Member desires because, I believe, that such an undertaking would result in the immediate exclusion from Government Service of a very capable and deserving class of men. Whether it will be possible in the future to demand identical educational qualifications from all communities, is a matter on which I cannot offer any opinion.

"I trust that in making this statement I have been able to show the Council that a very great advance towards Indianizing Services recruited in

[27TH FEBRUARY, 1918] [Sir William Vincent; Sir Robert Gillan.]

India has been made, that in fact the advance already made satisfies to a great extent the test contained in the first part of the Resolution for many Services, and that if regard is paid to the recruitment of Indians in recent years, the p sition is still more satisfactory.

"As regards the question of educational qualifications, for reasons already given, the Government are unable to accept the recommendations contained in the Resolution. The Government are willing to insist upon, and does insist upon, sufficient educational qualifications, but they are not prepared to make any sudden change in the system which would result in the total and immediate exclusion of a deserving class. I have said more than once before, further, that it is quite impossible to lay down any general formulæ for all the different services and I hope that the Council will agree when it is realized how widely the conditions of the different Services vary, that the only sensible way of dealing with the question is to consider the case of each Service on its merits, and I do submit that the Resolution in so far as it attempts to deal with all Services on uniform lines, is a little lacking in attention to the practical difficulties. I have explained the policy of Government in the matter of raising the standard of Anglo-Indian education, and I trust that in a short time the standard of that community will be so raised that any attacks on the educational level that prevails in it will be impossible. In conclusion, I desire to say that I much regret that there is no member of the Anglo-Indian community present here to assist us in the discussion of this question to-day. I feel that the views and aims of that community could have been put forward with greater force by one who was more intimately connected with it, but I have explained the facts and the difficulties as clearly as I am able.

"The position of the Government is one of considerable difficulty; they desire to be fair to all classes; they do not desire merely for the sake of educational qualifications or anything else to exclude men who are the best fitted for their Services. If the Hon'ble Member intended in his Resolution merely to ventilate the subject, I venture to submit that his object has been fully attained, but it is clear from what I have said that, if the Resolution is pressed to a division, I shall be constrained to oppose it on behalf of the Government. I will only say, Sir, in regard to other technical services of which I have little or no special knowledge, my Hon'ble Colleague will speak later."

4-2 P. M.

The Hon'ble Sir Robert Gillan:—"Sir, the Railway services which are recruited wholly in India are the Engineering (Provincial) and the Stores Department. In the light of what the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent has said, it is desirable that I should place the position in regard to these departments before the Council, and at the same time I may refer to the portion, which is about one-third of the Traffic Department, which is recruited in India. The Provincial Engineering Service is recruited from three sources, mainly from Roorkee and Sibpur Engineering Colleges, but partly by promotion from the subordinate class, and partly by transfers from the temporary engineering establishment. The recruitments in the last ten years have been as follows:—

From the first source, that is from Roorkee and Sibpur, the number of Indians recruited was 15.

Domiciled Europeans and Anglo-Indians 3.

By promotion of subordinates Indians 3 and domiciled Europeans and Anglo-Indians 3.

From the temporary engineering establishment 3 also were taken under each class.

The total is 21 Indians and 9 domiciled Europeans and Anglo-Indians.

"As regards promotion of upper subordinates and transfers from the temporary engineering establishment, the departmental capacity of the men has already been fully tried by experience and the best have to be taken irrespective of race. From Roorkee and Sibpur also, it is the men who pass out highest who get the appointments. But as nearly all the men entering those Colleges are Indians, the great majority of the appointments go to Indians as the figures show. In the Traffic Department two years ago we introduced a scheme of nomination by Local Governments. That is we asked Local Governments each to nominate one candidate, and it is only from those candidates that the Railway Board make their selections Under this scheme none but Indians have, as a matter of fact, been hitherto appointed, and it is probable that they will continue to obtain the great majority of the posts. The Stores Department has a very small cadre of 20 officers, and at present only 2 are Indians. The Board have, however, had in mind the desirability of obtaining Indians. They appointed one last year, and hope shortly to appoint another. It must be remembered also that in the past the Service has been largely recruited by transfers from other departments, and as the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent said, those departments at the time were mainly manned by Europeans or Anglo-Indians. Some also came from business firms. The system, however, undoubtedly was somewhat haphazard, and the Board have recently examined the question of putting matters on a more satisfactory footing. The case is not yet complete, but they incline to the opinion that, in the future, the recruits should either be taken from the Colleges, such as Roorkee and Sibpur, or by a system of nomination such as I have described as now applicable to the Traffic Department, and in either case it seems certain that the great bulk of the appointments would go to Indians."

4-6 P. M.

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes :—"The Hon'ble Member's Resolution covers two Services which are under the control of the Commerce and Industry Department namely, the Northern India Salt Revenue and the Post Office. My Hon'ble Colleague who dealt with this Resolution on behalf of the Government dealt in part with the Post Office, but there are a few points which I should like to add with regard to that and with regard to the Salt Revenue.

"The Salt Revenue Department is a small Service to which the remarks of my Hon'ble Colleague the Home Member on the subject of literary qualifications particularly apply. Life in the Department is hard, the climatic conditions are usually not good and the nature of a Salt Revenue officer's duties, whether at the mines or salt sources, or on preventive service, gives him usually a lonely life away from the large centres of population. On the frontier in Kohat, for instance, an armed establishment has to be maintained, and the officers of the Department must be liable from time to time to exposure to risks in repelling attacks by raiders from over the frontier. A career in the Department requires good physique, active habits, power of control, and commonsense rather than literary qualifications, and I observe that the Public Services Commission have advised that the present system of recruitment by competitive examination from amongst nominated candidates should be maintained. And it may be assumed from their recommendations, as I think we must recognise, that this is not a Service in which although improvements in the methods of nomination may very possibly be made, the majority of the nominees should necessarily be Indians We must take the men whether Indian or European who are best suited to the Service.

"As regards the Post Office, the Director-General has placed in my hands a striking table showing the number of appointments of Superintendents of Post Offices held by Indians during the past 25 years. 25 years ago in 1893 the total number of Superintendents' appointments was 118, and the number held by Indians was 34, being a percentage of 29. By 1909 the total number of appointments had risen from 118 to 172, and the number of appointments held by Indians had risen from 34 to 92 and the percentage had risen from 29 to 53 per cent. Since 1909 the percentage of Indians employed has risen from year to year.

In 1910 the percentage was	55

[27TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Sir George Barnes ; Nawab Ali Chaudhri.]

This is one side of the picture, and I think, Sir, that my Hon'ble friend the Mover of this Resolution will acknowledge that it shows a consistent and earnest effort to increase the number of Indians employed as Superintendents of Post Offices. But there is another side of the picture. When war broke out, volunteers for field service were called for from among the Superintendents of Post Offices. From the figures I have just given you, it appears that the total number of posts held by Indians was in the early days of the war nearly double those held by non-Indians, and in the present year is exactly double, that is 114 posts held by Indians, and 57 held by non-Indians. The number of volunteers called for for field service was 30, only 2 Indians volunteered for field service and the remaining 28 volunteers had to be obtained from among the Superintendents who were non-Indians.

" These figures seem to me of high importance and, I think, point the moral that while literary qualifications are of great value they cannot be taken as the final and only test for every form of employment under Government."

4-11 P.M.

The Hon'ble Nawab Ali Chaudhri :—" Sir, I have nothing to say against the first portion of the Resolution. In fact, I have full sympathy with the spirit of the Resolution, and I fully agree with Mr. Sastri's dictum that immediate steps should be taken to ensure the appointment of Indians to the great majority of the posts in the Services recruited in India Sir, I am fully confident and I have great faith in His Excellency's Government that it will not be very long before His Excellency will be in a position to give effect to the assurance so often given in this Council.

" Hon'ble Members are perhaps aware that the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State in Council has decided not to appoint any Europeans as Assistant Engineers in the Indian Public Works and State Railways in 1918

" But, Sir, I cannot see my way to support the second part of the Resolution which seems to me a direct blow to the legitimate aspirations of the community to which I have the honour to belong. The term 'sufficiently high is vague, and I would like to see other qualifications besides those of education given due weight in the making of appointments. Good breeding and social status count for a good deal. No education, however elaborate, can compensate for the loss of such advantages. A youth brought up in a respectable family necessarily imbibes the sense of honour and duty indispensable for an officer holding a high post. Besides, owing to the tradition of the country, a person of good social status commands respect and obedience

" Sir, the standard of higher education should not be the only criterion for the selection of candidates for Government posts. I do not think that educational qualification alone is a sufficient test of a man's capabilities and his fitness to occupy positions of trust and responsibility. You can never correctly measure a man's capabilities by the marks that he gets in any Indian University Examination The test employed by our Universities has never been, nor can ever be, a fully reliable standard in these matters. As it stands at present, it is largely a test of memory.

"Sir, this standard of higher education as a stepping stone to appointments is derogatory both to the cause of education and to dignity and efficiency of the Government Service. It is an artificial standard doomed to failure. The second point which I would press, is the due representation of different interests and classes. Among the clases which are in danger of being swamped by this Resolution, it is my particular duty as a Muhamedan to press the claims of Mussalmans. The public money expended in paying various posts should be more evenly distributed among the tax-payers of the various communities. But it is not the question of loaves and fishes with which I am most nearly concerned. The word 'Indians' does not merely mean Hindus. and the posts reserved for Indians should be wide enough to include Muhamedans also. If the claims of Indians are based on their knowing better the condition of the country and the needs and requirements of the people, then, I say, every community has a right to be represented in its administration because they are the best judges of their own needs and requirements. It is not my intention to set up any new claims in depreciation of those of any other community. My aim is that each community characterized as it is by peculiarities of its own would feel secure in its position. In India, at present, we have to recognize two distinct principal parties, the Hindu and the Muslim communities, the latter being in a minority as regards higher education.

" It is not more than half a century since the Mohamedans were thought the most capable administrators, and held high responsible positions in various Mohamedan monarchies. Those monarchies, however, were always ready to employ Hindus of ability in the highest posts, and we have only to regard the history of Akbar's Court to see how far he relied on the advice of Hindu ministers for the conduct of the government of his Hindu subjects. During the early period of British occupation of India, the Mohamedans occupied almost all the principal judicial and executive appointments. The knowledge of Mohamedan literature was held in high esteem and was eagerly sought after both by Moslems and Hindus. At first Persian and then Urdu continued to be the Court language till gradually a knowledge of the English language became essential for employment under Government, with the result that the Mohamedans were gradually driven out of office by members of other communities. The Mohamedans were for a considerable period labouring under the wrong impression that Western education would interfere with their religious beliefs, while other communities took advantage of their position and rapidly ousted them from all Government offces. The Hindus who were accustomed to foreign languages took easily to English education, while the Mohamedans found it difficult to adapt themselves to the new method and gradually lost Government patronage on account of their conservative ideas. Their pecuniary condition became worse and worse till they reached a stage when they became alive to their shortcomings, and in spite of their desire they could not afford English education. But thanks to the admirable services rendered to the cause of Mohamedan English education by Sir Syed Ahmed, there was a general awakening among the community. But, Sir, this awakening from the lethargic sleep of a century caused a bitter remorse in their hearts. They found the doors of Government Service practically closed to them. Try as we can we cannot keep pace with the progress made by other communities.

" I am not one of those who look upon the successful securing of a post in Government Service as the only laudable ambition of a youth's career. I am convinced that too much craving in a young man for service is incompatible with the existence of those high aspirations and lofty ideals which lift us to excellence as useful members of society. I deprecate this frame of mind quite as strongly as anybody, but the fact remains that a considerable number of our youths must choose Government Service as their career in life, which with all its drawbacks has got certain obvious advantages. It satisfies the ambition in a young man to be associated in the work of the administration of his country; it relieves him from pressing pecuniary wants; it is an inducement in educational competition, for the securing of honourable posts in Government Service, and helps them to educate their children.

" Sir, we are often charged with seeking favouritism. Let me assure Hon'ble Members that we do not want any partiality. We do not want to lower the standard of service; our only claim is that, so long as we do not occupy our proper share in the services of the country, suitable Muhammadan candidates should have preference over those of other communities. This is what we ask for, and I do not care whether you call this a favour or our natural right. We have often received assurances, but their Redemption has been fraught with difficulties. From the time of Lord Dufferin many Resolutions have been passed and circulars issued by the Government. They have increased the number of files in the Government Record Department, but the practical effect has for one reason or another been small.

" I am well aware that it is often complained that, when it is considered desirable to fill a post with a Muhammadan, Muhammadans of suitable education are not found. I do not know whether the cause of this is that the standard of qualification has been pitched unnecessarily high. But of this I am convinced, that educational qualification should not, in the interests of the community as a whole, and of its various parts, be regarded as the sole test. If the Hon'ble Member who moves this Resolution means that it should be the sole test, still more if he means that it should be the deciding factor in a competition, then I oppose this part of the Resolution.

"In Bengal, the percentages of various communities represented in the graded posts, ranging from Rs. 200 and onward to Rs. 1,000, the figures come to something like the following :—

Posts on Rs. 200 to 300—Europeans 4 per cent., Anglo-Indians 8 per cent., Hindus 74 per cent., Muhammadans 13 per cent., Indian Christians 1 per cent. ; Rs. 500 to 600—Europeans 51 per cent., Anglo-Indians 1 per cent., Hindus 43 per cent., Muhammadans 5 per cent. and Indian Christians nil ; Rs. 600 to 700—Europeans 35 per cent., Anglo-Indians 4 per cent., Hindus 58 per cent., Muhammadans 3 per cent. and Indian Christians nil ; and Rs. 900 to 1,000—Europeans 94 per cent., Anglo-Indians nil, Hindus 6 per cent., Muhammadans nil, and Indian Christians nil.

"This is indeed a record. That is to say, in a Province where the Muhammadans are 52·2 per cent. of the whole population, the proportion of Mussalmans in the Public Services is deplorably low, amounting in the grades between Rs. 600 and Rs. 800 to only 3 per cent.; in the grade from Rs. 800 to 900 to 2 per cent., and in that from Rs. 900 to 1,000 to nil per cent.

"Sir, my excuse for dwelling on these statistics is to drive away the wrong impression that in matters of employment in Public Service Muhammadan claims have met with indulgent consideration. I have stated the statistics of appointments in Bengal where the principle of favouritism to Muhammadans is alleged to have been carried very far. Officials in India seem to have an idea that Mussalmans press for a preferential treatment of their youths in the matter of employment in the Public Services in disregard of the requirements of efficiency. But let our critics be assured that we are convinced as well as any body else that it would be detrimental to the cause of the proper administration of the country if incompetent men are pitchforked into posts without due regard to their abilities to perform the duties assigned to them, and I wish it to be distinctly understood that I have no desire to make any proposal which will have the effect of impairing the efficiency of the various branches of the Public Services. What we want is that, provided Mussalman candidates satisfy a reasonable test required for efficiency, they may be freely admitted in preference to the candidates belonging to advanced communities. To insist on more than a necessary requisite of qualifications for due discharge of the duties of a post would be to insist on what is perhaps a superfluity, and when a Muhammadan is found to possess qualifications and is competent, he should be given preference to candidates belonging to advanced communities, and this policy may be continued till such a time as the proportion of Muhammadans in the service comes up to the proportion to which they are entitled by their numbers and their political and historical importance in the country."

The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri :—"Sir, the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent has gone and done it ! I little expected that he would venture so far as to say that if Indians of pure Asiatic descent have been practically excluded from certain departments, it is a sort of return for the fact that in certain other departments they seem to have obtained more than their due share. He instanced Indian finance ; he instanced the Provincial Educational Service, where Indians, in the sense in which the word is used in the Commission's Report, have obtained a dominant footing Is that a reason ? Could you say that because the Indians are established well here let them be disestablished elsewhere ? Is it a case of quid pro quo ? I could not quite understand the relevancy of the 4-24 P.M.

first part of his speech. It seems to me, Sir, in all these discussions to be too easily assumed without the slightest approach to evidence that because a community is educationally backward, therefore it is rich in the possession of certain qualities which are not discoverable in a community which does well where educational tests are concerned I was astonished to hear my Hon'ble friend Nawab Ali Chaudhri come very near saying this extraordinary thing. He seems to forget that in the matter of this Resolution, the second part, I venture to inform him, no less than the first part, he is on just the same footing as any other community embraced in the description 'Indian.' The lowering of the educational qualifications, which he seems to recommend, has hitherto not benefited his community at all; and I prefer, Sir, in this matter to accept the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim as a more trustworthy exponent of Moslem opinion than the Hon'ble Nawab Ali Chaudhri. The Hon'ble Nawab seems to think that if a uniform educational test were prescribed his community would stand to lose. The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim is emphatically of the contrary opinion He thinks that if a fair educational test were imposed, his community would get their due chance. I prefer to take his opinion on that matter.

"The whole of this business illustrates in a most marked manner the evils of the system of nomination. Now, on this point I wish to be particularly frank. It may be in violation of one of the rules that I have imposed upon myself in the whole of this discussion; but I wish to draw attention to a fact that comes out very prominently. The present state of affairs has been brought about by a system of nomination which allows officers to exercise preferences and partialities in favour of certain communities. Now, Sir, let me point out that one of the prominent advantages which a European bestower of patronage has in this country is, and has been claimed to be, his comparative freedom from what has been described as nepotism. It should be so. But there may be nepotism without nephews, and there may be partiality without individuals being favoured. Now, Sir, the whole of this business is a striking proof that officers who have patronage are in the exercise of that patronage actuated by principles which cannot be very far in spirit from nepotism. Particular classes are favoured, and when challenged the reply comes, 'Oh, they may not be good educationally, but they have qualifications which we alone have the capacity to discover.' Now my point is, I do not want the absence of those other qualifications. How can it be said that a whole community enjoys the monopoly of certain qualifications, and another community as a whole does not enjoy those qualifications? If that be the fact, let individual stand against individual. When you nominate persons to an examination, the only thing to safeguard against ill-qualified persons entering is to see that they are physically qualified, that they are endowed with those virtues of social status and family reputation upon which the Hon'ble Nawab Ali Chaudhri enlarged so much. Now, social status and family reputation exist in all communities. There is no community embraced in the description 'Indian' which is unable to produce persons of good family status. Does the Hon'ble Nawab Ali Chaudhri mean that social status is a thing which cannot be found in those who have educational qualifications also? It is a most extraordinary statement which one often hears, but which one would like to have proof of by persons who confront each other. I would really ask whether it is after all a benefit to the community itself. Now, there are in the Anglo-Indian community which has enjoyed this particular preference for these years, many members, worthy representatives of the class, honourable representatives of the class, who say that they are backward now because they have always been spoon-fed by a too kind Government. If they had been thrown on their own resources amidst the people among whom they lived, compelled to stand shoulder to shoulder and fight their battle evenly, there are many who think that the Anglo-Indian community would not stand in need of these artificial props which now keep up their supremacy in these services. The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent thinks that they have almost a prescriptive right to certain Services because they have hitherto enjoyed for many years undue entry therein. Now injustice does not become justice, impropriety cannot become propriety, partiality cannot become even-handed justice merely because it has antiquity behind it. And if I understand the spirit of British Administration, it is the courage with which it puts down those vices which have the prestige of age behind them. Now, I ask those who, like Sir William Vincent, have the benefit of this community in their hearts to come forward and completely deprive them of this artificial advantage. Then that community itself will be obliged to take its place educationally with the rest of the community. I am perfectly certain if an Anglo-Indian lad of average parts were not sure of getting a very good billet the moment he got the school-leaving certificate, he would get into college and perfect his education and give a very good account of himself indeed. It is because they are prematurely attracted from their educational career by billets and promises to them in preference to other classes, it is because of this that this community stands in the position where it does to-day.

"Now, Sir, there is only one more point that I will refer to, and that is the matter of Sir George Barnes' reference to the amount of recruitment which members of the Anglo-Indian community in these Services have shown as compared with that of Indians of pure Asiatic descent. I am perfectly sure that that fact taken by itself may seem to imply that we were wanting in certain qualities, that the Indians for whom I am pleading were wanting in certain qualities in which the other persons were pre-eminent. Now, there are various reasons why the offer of services from our people might not have been so profuse. If the Hon'ble Sir George Barnes were to examine patiently along with me the conditions offered to them, the publicity made of those conditions, the way in which Indians seeking voluntary service with the forces in front might have been received, if he were patiently to examine with me the whole of these matters, I can show him that there was relatively speaking in such an affair ample cause for the Indians not enrolling to the same extent as Anglo-Indians; but if it were otherwise what does it show? That hitherto under British dispensation we have been kept in such a position in military matters that when war, when service in the war and braving the risks of war are concerned, we are a little more backward than other classes. If we had been freely allowed to volunteer (I am not going into that question now and His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief need have no misgivings) if hitherto the ordinary Indian of pure Asiatic descent had been in these matters treated with the confidence, with the trust to which he has been always entitled, if his loyalty had never been distrusted, then the difference which Sir George Barnes pointed out would never have been in existence."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Sir, I rise only to answer one or two points in the last speech of the Hon'ble Mover. I understood him to suggest that I quoted the proportion of Indians in the Services which I cited as a sort of compensation for the fact that Indians were not admitted in the same proportion in other Services. I do not know if I understood the Hon'ble Mover correctly. Well, he is silent and I take it that I did not misunderstand him. I hasten to correct that impression. My view was that a reference to four or five particular Services only, in which the percentage of non-Indians was large, might create an incorrect impression of the actual state of affairs in the minds of the Council. I submit that, if you put the Council in possession of the figures as regards certain departments, it is only right and fair that they should also have the figures of other departments, so as to arrive at a correct estimate of the number of Indians employed in all the Services recruited in India. 4-36 P.M.

"Then, there was another suggestion which I was sorry to hear, namely, that in their nominations to the Public Services, the Government are guilty of nepotism and have not been fair towards Indians. I do assert very definitely that there is no ground for such an allegation. The very figures which I have quoted to-day showing the large number of Indians appointed to the Services recruited in India indicate clearly the fairness of the Government in this matter, and I must say that I was surprised to hear such a suggestion made in this Council.

"Again, it has been said that I argued as if Anglo-Indians had a prescriptive right to certain Services, and it is suggested that I seek to create a special preserve for them. It is not so. What I do deprecate is a sudden change which might deprive the less fortunate communities, including the Anglo-Indian community amongst others, of a right to enter Services which they have enjoyed for many years. It has never been the intention of Government to create any special preserve for this community. Indeed, such a policy would be entirely inconsistent with that of the declared policy of Lord Curzon which he enunciated in 1900, and which has, I believe, been adopted ever since by the Government of India. It is the desire of Government to be fair to the domiciled community and also fair to others.

" What I do submit, however, is that it would not be fair on general considerations to set up unnecessarily high educational standards for Anglo-Indians who seek to enter Government Service when we know that such a policy would result inevitably in the exclusion of this community entirely from appointments in which they do perform and have rendered efficient service and for which they are eminently suited otherwise.

" Finally, I desire to add that it has been assumed throughout this discussion that all the non-Indians in Government Services recruited in this country are necessarily members of the domiciled Anglo-Indian community. I am not at all certain that that assumption is correct. I believe that a considerable number of them are not domiciled in this country in the strict sense of the word."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Council then adjourned to Thursday, the 28th February, 1918.

APPENDIX C.

[Referred to in answer to Question No. 23.]

Letter No. 3-Q.-2, dated 31st January 1918.

From—The Agent, Great Indian Peninsula Railway,

To—The Secretary, RAILWAY BOARD.

Re Conditions of 3rd class travel.

With reference to the Railway Board's letter No. 552-T.—17, dated the 17th January 1918, I beg to state in regard to the first question, that Mr. Gandhi in his letter to the Press stated that he joined the mail train for Madras at Bombay, that the carriage was marked to carry 22 passengers, and that if not more than 22 passengers did not find their way into the carriage before Poona, it was because the bolder ones kept the others at bay, but that after reaching Raichur the pressure became unbearable, and that it was on the journey subsequent to Raichur, namely, on the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway, that 35 passengers were in the carriage during the greater part of the night. It would therefore appear that overcrowding over this railway did not occur in this particular instance.

I may remark that on this section, the second fast train, the Manmad-Madras Express has, in consequence of the measures taken to conserve material, etc., during the War, been discontinued, and this has increased the demand on the Bombay-Madras Mail in which the accommodation for third class passengers is limited. Previous to the discontinuance of this service, there was no overcrowding, but since then it is feared there has been so at times. Guards have been instructed that when they find their trains full, they should wire to stations ahead to stop booking, but I fear this order is not acted up to as often as it should. The attention of the staff has again been drawn to the need of preventing overcrowding as far as possible, but in considering the position the existing conditions under which railways have to be worked must not be overlooked.

2. The second question is very difficult to deal with unless the stations at which the tea complained of was supplied are named. A good deal of attention has been given to the quality of tea supplied to Indian passengers on this system. In 1916 we availed ourselves of the services of Mr. Luddy, representative of the Tea Cess Committee, who visited our stations, and gave us a very valuable report on the questions, one result of which was that the particular brands of tea to be kept were laid down. Detailed instruction in English and vernacular as to the manner in which the tea should be made are issued to all vendors, and every endeavour is made by frequent inspections to ensure that the standard is maintained. The journey made by Mr. Gandhi was performed in day light from Kurduwadi to Raichur. On this section the stations at which tea is supplied are :—

Kurduwadi, Sholapur, Hotgi, Gulbarga and Wadi.

In consequence of Mr. Gandhi's complaint, the stations named have been inspected and the tea, sugar and milk supplies overhauled.

3. In regard to question (iii) that not during the whole of the journey was the compartment once swept or cleaned, I beg to state that we have fixed arrangements for the cleaning of carriages on trains at certain stations en route, a copy of which I attach from which it will be seen that the carriages on the down Bombay-Madras Mail are to be cleaned at Sholapur and Raichur. The carriage staff complain that they are often defeated in carrying out their work by passengers themselves, who will not move or vacate carriages to permit cleaning being done.

4. Regarding question (iv), I do not think I can do better than attach a copy of our orders on the subject. The Great Indian Peninsula Railway has been to the front in the attention that they have given to the improvement in the supply of food for Indian passengers, and their arrangements have been held up by the Vernacular Press as an example to other railways as to what should be done. On stalls on which sweetmeats are exposed for sale, the sweetmeats have to be kept in glass or gauze cases, so that flies cannot get on the food, and gauze covers have to be used on the dishes from which articles are sold to passengers in the train. Inspection on the Kurduwadi-Raichur section, since the receipt of Mr. Gandhi's letter, shows that all stations, where sweetmeats are sold, have the gauze cases and covers, so that there was no excuse for their not being used. In the absence of the names of the stations it is difficult to deal with the matter further. There is always difficulty in making vendors appear in clean clothes, but I would point out that that is not only confined to railway stations; it is evident in every Indian bazar. Renewed attention has, however, been given to the question.

5. In regard to question (v), there are sweepers to attend to the lavatories on the Bombay-Raichur Section at Poona, Dhond, Sholapur and Raichur, and these men should have attended to the particular train referred to at Sholapur and Raichur. All lavatory tanks are filled at Victoria Terminus and replenished at Poona, Dhond and Sholapur. The difficulty in regard to the latter is the excessive use some passengers make of the water quite oblivious of the limitations of the tanks that can be carried.

(INCORPORATED IN ENGLAND.)

Slip No. 60.

SUPPLEMENT TO TRAFFIC INSTRUCTIONS BOOK.

Order No. 270 (Slip No. 54), dated 29th July 1915, is cancelled and revised as follows.

Order No. 270. Refreshment for Indian Passengers, Indian Food-stuffs, Sweetmeats, Fruit, Tea, Coffee, Mineral Waters, Cakes, Biscuits, etc.

1. Food both for Hindus and Mahomedans, sweetmeats, chapatis, puris, bread of kinds, fruit, parched grains, nuts, tea, coffee, cakes and biscuits, mineral waters, tobacco, gurako, cigarettes, pan, matches, etc., is sold at the principal stations on the line, stalls being provided at those stations where the traffic indicates that this convenience for the public is necessary.

The sale of wine, beer, or spirituous liquors of any kind within the premises of the Company by the Lessees is prohibited.

2. Licenses will be granted on the following principles, either :—

(a) to a local man, by which means local public opinion can be brought to bear on the vendor, or

(b) where found more suitable, to a salesman whose wares have been found by experience elsewhere to be of good and approved quality.

If it is decided to grant the license to a local vendor, inquiries should be made by the District Traffic Superintendent, personally, or by his District Traffic Inspectors, through the Local Government officials, to ascertain what respectable local man can be recommended out of those who tender for the license.

Refreshments for Hindu Passengers.

3. (a) Stalls for the sale of sweetmeat and fruit, and other selected edibles. including tea and coffee, for Hindus, are provided at the principal stations named below at which the mail and other trains halt a sufficient time to enable passengers to get out and partake of food :—

Victoria Terminus	Hoshangabad	*Kurduwadi
Kalyan	*Bhopal	Sholapur
Igatpuri	*Bina	Hotgi
Nasik	*Jhansi	Shahabad
*Manmad	*Gwalior	Wadi
*Chalisgaon	Dholpur	*Shegaon
*Jalgaon	*Agra Cantonment	*Akola
*Bhusawal	*Muttra	Ahmednagar
*Khandwa	Jubi	*Badnera
*Harda	Lonavla *	*Wardha
*Itarsi	*Poona	*Nagpur
Sohagpur	†Dhond.

NOTE.—At the stations marked * the stalls are off the station platforms.

† In waiting shed south end of platform.

(b) The selection sold will depend on the local demand and custom, governed by the possibility of obtaining the articles locally in a fresh state and of good quality (see paragraph 12*a*).

All articles for sale must be shown on a list exhibited at the stall (see paragraph 11) with the prices thereof.

The prices should be the same as the local bazar rates for good quality articles.

(c) At the stations referred to above, articles of food, besides being sold from the stalls, will also be taken round the train on thalis and trays by the vendors' servants.

(d) At the smaller stations, where stalls are not provided, articles of food will be vended alongside of the carriages.

Refreshments for Mahomedan Passengers.

4. (a) At the more important stations, viz :—

Manmad	Bina	Poona
Bhusawal	Jhansi	Dhond
Khandwa	Agra Cantonment	Wadi
Itarsi	Muttra Junction
Bhopal	Nagpur

where trains halt for a sufficient time to allow of a meal to be taken, or passengers have to change, special provision will be made for Mahomedans.

These stations will be classed as 1st grade stations, and the vendors will provide the following articles :—

Chapatis	Pulao	Kabab
Parathas	Korma	Kheer or Halwa.
Boiled rice	Tarkari Gosh	Tea, coffee and milk
(See paragraph 6).

(b) At less important stations which will be classed as 2nd grade stations, where the wait is not sufficient for passengers to have a full meal, Mahomedan vendors of tea and coffee are provided who will sell articles such as bread, biscuits, chapatis and such cooked food as can be eaten on the platform during the wait or in the train, or such articles as demand indicates, are required, or the District Officer requires him to provide.

Other such articles, as sweetmeats and fruit are purchaseable from the general vendor who purveys for both Hindus and Mahomedans.

These can be bought either at the stalls or from trays carried up and down the platforms.

The 2nd grade stations at present are:—

Burhanpur
Akola Jalamb.
Sholapur.
Gulbarga.

General.

5. (a) At the stations given in paragraph 3 (a) where stalls are provided—also at the stations where food for Mahomedan passengers is sold, if stalls are provided, all food of all description on the stalls must be enclosed in cases. Food hawked up and down the platforms on trays or barrows must be covered by gauze-wire drums to keep off flies.

(b) Cut fruit (like melons and pomegranates), sugarcane, also shev, bajea, and the like, must also be similarly covered.

(c) Biscuits, bread, fancy cakes, Europe sweets, and such like things should be kept in glass bottles, stoppered.

(d) Drawings and photos of the standard type of stall case, and of the standard gauze drums have been furnished to each District Traffic Superintendent. It rests with the District Traffic Superintendent with the aid of his District Inspectors and by personal inspection to see that the standard is followed and that the cases and covers are fly-proof, efficient and stoutly made, and that the food is covered.

6. When a passenger requests the Guard of a train to wire on his behalf to any of the principal stations where there is a Lessee for the sale of food to Mahomedan passengers, for a 1st or 2nd class meal to be provided for him, the Guard must do so on service.

7. The Lessees are prohibited from sub-letting their licenses. If this rule be broken, the license will be cancelled.

8. (a) The Lessee must employ within the Company's premises only such person or persons from time to time as may be approved by the Company, and each person so employed will be provided with, and will wear, at all times, when on the Company's premises, a uniform, consisting of a khaki pugree, a khaki jacket, an arm badge, and a white dhotie, which must be provided by the Lessee at his own expense.

This uniform must be clean.

(b) Any servant in dirty clothes will be expelled from the station by the Station Master.

9. Vendors are prohibited from calling out their wares either during the day or night under the penalty of having their salesmen turned off the platform and license cancelled, if the noise caused by their servants is not abated on warning being given.

10. The Lessee must provide such articles and of such different or other kind as may be specified by the officers of the Company from time to time.

11. The Company will fix the prices and rates at which the Lessee shall sell his wares within the Company's premises. Station Masters are personally responsible that a Tariff signed by the Deputy Traffic Manager, "Coaching," showing rates at which fruit, sweetmeat, tea and coffee, etc., are sold, is exhibited at the stall. The rates to be charged must not exceed the rates prevailing in the bazar.

12. (a) Station Masters must see that these instructions are strictly carried out, and they must also make a point of having the food, sweetmeats, and the staff who will sell the same, paraded, before them daily, and they should see that the Lessees' servants are clean and properly clad according to the rules, and that the sweetmeats, foodstuffs, etc., are of good quality, fresh and wholesome so far as they can see.

(b) Station Masters must make it their business to see that vendors cover all food exposed for sale, also cut fruit, such as melons, cut sugarcane, cut pomegranates, etc.

Oranges, plantains, apples, pears, and the like when in their whole skin, do not require covering.

(c) Any unwholesome and stale food, sweets, or fruit, should be rejected and removed from the station immediately.

(d) If the necessity for this measure occurs more than once, the Station Master will take samples of the stuff and seal it up in clean paper and submit it to the Medical Officer, and report the case to the District Traffic Superintendent, who should deal with the matter and report.

(e) Station Masters may invite the assistance of the Medical Officer (Government and Railway) if there are any at the stations, to check the purity and quality of supplies.

(f) Any complaint made by the Medical Officer of the District or his Assistants on the quality of the articles should be at once reported.

13. (a) European troops, while travelling by railway, are not to be supplied at the stations with cut fruit, sweetmeats, milk or any other articles except under the special orders of, or by arrangement with, the General Traffic Manager, or District Traffic Superintendent in each instance, and the Lessee is not to be allowed to come on to the platform to sell his wares or to hold any communication with such troops while special troop trains are standing at the station, or while troops are waiting at the stations to proceed by special troop train.

(b) Fruits, whole in their skins, can be sold to European troops but nothing else.

(c) Where stalls have been put on the platform or within the railway premises, the stalls must be closed, if necessary, while special trains conveying European troops are standing at stations or while such troops are waiting there to proceed by special troop trains, and the Lessee must not be allowed to sell anything to the troops, except as provided above.

14. The tea and coffee Lessees (Hindu and Mahomedan) at the following stations must provide at their own cost stoves on the primus principle for boiling water for tea instead of using sigris. The cleanliness of their stalls and surroundings is a sine qua non and must be insisted on and ensured.

The milk and sugar vessels must be clean and covered.

District Officers have been advised what the approved type of stove is.

(c) In Appendices B (ii) to B (vii) is given an amplified list of articles shown in Appendix B (i) with description of articles to allow of variation owing to local habits or usages.

16. The procedure to be followed in granting these licenses is as follows:—

(a) On recommendation being made by the District Traffic Superintendent that the provision of such convenience is necessary, the Deputy Traffic Manager, Coaching, will call for tenders and will decide to whom the license should be given and fix the yearly fee to be charged.

(b) The cover containing such a tender must be sealed and addressed to the Personal Assistant to the General Traffic Manager, Great Indian Peninsula Railway, Bombay.

The Personal Assistant to the General Traffic Manager will arrange for the covers containing these tenders to be placed in a sealed box as they are received, the box being opened by him on the date fixed for the purpose.

The tenders will then be sent to the Assistant Traffic Superintendent, Coaching, who will pass them on to the Deputy Traffic Manager, Coaching, with his remarks, for orders. It rests with the Deputy Traffic Manager, Coaching, to select the most suitable applicant for the license, and nothing will bind him to give it to the highest bidder.

(c) These licenses are renewable year by year provided the Lessee has given satisfaction, i.e., there has been no cause for complaint against him and that he has observed the rules and the conditions under which the licenses have been granted.

(d) Should a Lessee be unwilling to renew his license for the following year, or, should the Company decide not to renew his license, the Deputy Traffic Manager, Coaching, will send to the District Traffic Superintendent concerned a notice to be exhibited at the station inviting tenders for the license.

No. 198-T., dated 26th-28th January 1918.

From—The Agent, Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway,

To—The Secretary, RAILWAY BOARD.

To deal categorically with the questions asked by the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul :—

(i) At the instance of the Railway Board a census was taken of the passengers travelling by train for the week ending 22nd July 1916. At that time the Mail train was a light one of 14 units, and the result of the census shows there was no overcrowding. Since then the Delhi Express has been taken off and the Mail (No. 6 Up to which Mr. Gandhi refers) carries a maximum of 20 units. I have no knowledge of the number travelling in the train conveying Mr. Gandhi, but it is recorded that there were but 17 units on it, and if there had been any serious overcrowding it is improbable that the Station Staff could have neglected to attach extra vehicles.

(ii) On the date of Mr. Gandhi's letter we were no longer running third class Refreshment Cars on the Mail trains, and his remarks refer to tea obtained from the Indian Refreshment Rooms. In the various reports which have been submitted to me regarding the Pilgrim Committee, the methods of inspection and maintenance of these rooms have been clearly described, and I have every reason to believe that the refreshments provided meet with the approbation of the general public.

(iii) It would be impossible to sweep or clean out compartments unless they were empty and passengers would not consent to vacate the carriages and remove their luggage for this purpose.

(iv) I am obliged to say that this paragraph represents an absolutely untrue account of the general state of the Refreshment stalls. The stalls are frequently inspected by the Inspector specially engaged for the purpose and they are also seen by myself, the General Traffic Manager and his District officers and Traffic Inspectors when travelling. Their condition is clean, I may say far cleaner than a very large number of shops in the bazaars. The provision of fly-proof receptacles both for refreshments which are sold at the stalls and for refreshments which are hawked on the platform has received attention and about one-third of the total number of receptacles required has already been issued and the manufacture of the remainder is proceeding rapidly.

(v) In connection with this question, I beg to quote a paragraph of a letter from my General Traffic Manager in which he was discussing the conditions of pilgrim traffic :—

> "With reference to paragraph 8 of the same the proposal that Travelling Sweepers should accompany trains has received my careful consideration, and I am of opinion that this method of cleaning the carrige latrines is inadvisable.
> High Caste Hindus, in fact I may say all passengers would object strongly to scavengers entering the carriage with their brushes , etc., for the purpose of cleaning latrines while they were sitting in the carriages. As you are aware, carriages are so built that access to the latrines can only be obtained through the body of a carriage. It appears to me that the best method is to place special sweepers at the stations where fast specials terminate their run and to have the carriages thoroughly cleaned out before the return journey is commenced. As already remarked, pilgrims on this railway do not travel for long distances. It is not necessary for me to offer an opinion whether in cases where passengers do travel for very long distances, the necessity of cleaning the latrines en route is such that the advantages of employing travelling sweepers are greater than the disadvantages, but in case of short distance traffic, the disadvantagss certainly predominate. "

As regards the through trains running long distances, there is a good deal to be said in favour of cleaning the closets en route. The difficulty is that objections may be raised to sweepers entering carriages. I enclose for your information copy of a circular No. 83, dated 11th September 1911, issued by the Chief Medical Officer. It is possible that the views of the Indian public have changed to some extent then, and the question whether we should instruct sweepers to clean the latrines at certain stations will receive attention I need hardly say that they are thoroughly cleaned out before the commencement of a journey. No doubt a considerable quantity of water is used by third class passengers as the number of passengers in the carriage is large. Strict orders have been issued that tanks must be filled at frequent intervals and the attention of the District Traffic Superintendents will be again drawn to this.

MADRAS AND SOUTHERN MAHRATTA RAILWAY COMPANY LIMITED.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

Chief Medical Officer's Office,
Rayapuram, Madras, 11th September 1911.

CIRCULAR No. 83.

The General Traffic Manager reports that cleaning of the latrines of all through trains at your station should be undertaken by this Department: since the traffic sweepers are under the control of this Department will you please arrange to carry out the same.

It is not of course intended that the sweepers should enter the carriages of trains which run through except when they are actually required to do so.

L. H. I. BELL,
Acting Chief Medical Officer,
Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway Company, Limited.

No. 552-T.—17., dated 22nd January 1918.

From— MR. A. T. STOWELL, Assistant Secretary, RAILWAY BOARD,
To—M. K. GANDHI, Esq., Satyagrahashram, Sabarmati.

In continuation of this office letter No. 552-T.—17, dated the 9th November 1917, I am directed to state that the Railway Board have carefully considered the various suggestions for promoting the comfort and convenience of third class passengers on Indian Railways, contained in your letter of the 31st October 1917, to the address of the Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Commerce and Industry, and your letter to the Press, and they wish to express their full sympathy with the motives which have actuated your representation.

2. The chief points dealt with in your complaint of the discomforts of third class travel in India, are (i) over-crowding, (ii) refreshments, (iii) want of cleanliness in carriages and closets and of station latrines and waiting halls, (iv) want of sympathy and due recognition of the rights of 3rd class passengers on the part of the railway staff, and (v) difficulty in obtaining tickets and seats in carriages without bribery.

3. In regard to each of these points I am to make the following remarks viz. :—

(i) Over-crowding.—The question of over-crowding in 3rd class carriages has from time to time received the attention of the Railway Board and in this connection a Memorandum of measures taken by the Railway Board from 1905 up to 1915, to promote the comfort and convenience of 3rd class passengers on Indian Railways is enclosed for your information. Again, in 1916 Railways were asked to carry out a special count of the 3rd class passengers travelling on all important trains and to furnish the Railway Board with the result, comparing the numbers with the seating capacity provided, to enable them to decide whether over-crowding was so frequent and serious as to call for any special action. The Railway Board found that there was undoubted over-crowding on some trains and on certain sections, especially on the occasion of fairs and melas. With a view to minimising this they addressed a letter to the Agents of State Railways, on the subject, forwarding a copy thereof to the other principal Railway Administrations. It was recognised that on account of the heavy reductions in passenger train services which was due to the impossibility of obtaining a sufficient supply of materials for the repair and renewal of rolling-stock in consequence of the war, nothing really effective could be done in present circumstances to solve the problem of over-crowding in trains; but the Railway Board recorded the following points which they thought might be of help in that direction and would certainly call for consideration when normal times returned :—

(a) All possible increase in the composition of the over-crowded trains.

(b) Temporary use of all available stock fit to run on occasions of festivals and melas and the borrowing of stock from other Railways for the purpose.

(c) Maintenance of a much closer check on the requirements of traffic.

The introduction of Inter class accommodation on all important trains is another question under the consideration of the Railway Board which, it is thought, would probably meet the requirements of those who are averse from travelling in the crowded 3rd class, but who cannot afford to travel second class.

(ii) Refreshments—The matter of food supply to Indian passengers in running trains by means of Refreshment Cars, in railway refreshment rooms and by platform vendors is one which has also received the close attention of the Railway Board and the highest sanitary authorities of Government.

In 1911, the Railway Board circulated to State Railways a note by the General Traffic Manager, Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway, on the arrangements in force on that line for supplying Indian passengers with refreshments. The note dealt especially with Refreshment Cars for Indians which had been running on that line for some years and had proved a success; also with the provision of refreshment rooms for Indian passengers at important stations and platform refreshment stalls. The Railway Board asked the State lines to consider the advisability of introducing similar conveniences and to furnish the Railway Board with their views thereon. At the same, time they sent the note to the principal Companies' lines and asked the Agents to place it before their Boards of Directors for consideration. The replies to this reference from the different administrations are summarised as follows :—

North Western Railway.

Tried the experiment of running a Refreshment Car on a III class Express and as it was well patronised, a second car was added in 1915, and a proposal was made to build two or three more cars to run on convenient passenger trains when funds became available. On this line the running of these cars may therefore be looked upon as a definite success, but the further extension of the system has had to be postponed owing to present conditions. At certain important stations on the same railway separate refreshment rooms with caterers of proper caste are provided for Hindus and Muhammadans, where cooked fresh food is available at moderate rates. Indian platform vendors are provided at nearly all stations under supervision.

Eastern Bengal Railway.

Owing to the short runs on this line Refreshment Cars are not found to be necessary, but platform vendors sell refreshments to Indian passengers at the principal stations. The experiment of providing refreshment rooms for 3rd class passengers at important Junctions and other stations was tried, but did not prove a success.

Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway

Expressed the opinion that owing to local customs, caste prejudices, etc., Refreshment Cars were not suitable to the part of the country through which the line passes. Suitable platform vendors are employed and where trains stop long enough, provision is made for a stall or counter in a convenient part of the station with a bench and a space for cooking on Sigris. Guards have instructions to telegraph in advance for full meals to stations where such can be provided.

Burma Railways.

Refreshment Cars are not required on this line as the conditions in Burma are totally different from those obtaining in India. Food of a substantial nature to which the Burman is accustomed is obtainable at all principal stations.

Bengal Nagpur Railway.

Indian Refreshment Cars were tried and did not prove a success, but when it is not possible to make suitable arrangements for the supply of food at roadside stations a compartment in the train is set aside for a travelling vendor who hawks his wares on the platform. The arrangement is fouud to be popular. The experiment of refreshment rooms was also tried but proved a failure.

East Indian Railway.

The experiment of running Indian Refreshment Cars was given an extended trial, but owing to caste or other prejudices the cars were not patronised and had to be discontinued. Refreshment rooms are provided at certain selected stations and platform vendors who are supervised by Refreshment Inspectors are provided at all important stations.

Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway.

A trial was given to the running of an Indian Refreshment Car and although every effort was made to make it a success, it proved a failure. Refreshment rooms are provided at certain stations which are fairly well patronised. Platform vendors are employed at all stations.

Great Indian Peninsula Railway.

The existing arrangements for supply of food at the main line stations are considered fairly ample and adequate. In 1915, plans were drawn up for the provision of separate refreshment rooms for Hindus and Muhammadans at some of the principal stations. At other principal stations the improvements have been made in the existing accommodation by giving the Hindus and Muhammadans each a small court with or without benches apart from the 3rd class Waiting Halls. Special provision has also been made for Muhammadan passengers at some of the main stations where no such provision existed hitherto, and where Muhammadan licensees now supply cooked food. Arrangements are also made to wire ahead the food requirements of Mahammadan passengers. As regards the Hindus, stalls are provided at all the principal stations where a good selection of food and fruit is obtainable, besides tea, coffee, milk, etc., Wherever stalls have been provided the food is kept in glass and gauze wire cases to keep off flies and dust.

Bengal and North Western Railway.

Does not consider the running of Refreshment Cars necessary or suitable for the Railway. The arrangements in force are identical with those obtaining on the East Indian Railway, viz., selected Hindu and Muhammadan vendors, who pay a small fee, are licensed to sell food on the platforms and in stalls outside. The arrangements suit local conditions.

Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway.

Refreshment Cars are run with success and the system is being extended. Refreshment rooms are also provided at the principal stations.

His Highness the Nizam's Guaranteed State Railway.

There are sweetmeat vendors at all stations and at certain important stations and in addition to sweets, curry and chappaties are also obtainable.

On nearly all the principal Railways printed tariffs at which articles are authorised to be sold are issued to vendors.

Instructions were subsequently issued to the three State Railways to adopt the Great Indian Peninsula Railway rules which were found to be the best in the interests of the travelling public, and this has been done. These rules provide that none but good and wholesome articles shall be sold by the vendors at current market rates, and that the contractor and his salesmen shall always appear in clean and decent clothes. These arrangements are put under the supervision of Station Masters, Inspectors and Passenger Superintendents, where employed. The question of food supply to Indian passengers has also been considered by the Pilgrim Committees of the various Provinces in their Reports in connection with pilgrim traffic. In communicating orders on railway matters on the recommendations of these Committees and of the Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India, the Railway Board have brought prominently to the notice of Railway Administrations the importance of proper supervision of food-stuffs and, in particular, their protection from flies, dirt, etc. The Senior Government Inspectors of Railways have also been asked to give the subject their special attention and include it in their Reports.

(iii) Cleanliness in carriages and closets and of station latrines and waiting halls.—As a rule the carriages are cleaned out at departure and destination stations. The recommendations on this subject of the various Pilgrim Committees referred to in paragraph 3 (ii) above, were also communicated to the Railway Administrations and the replies received show that they are doing everything possible in this respect. The importance of providing ample water-supply and of ample and suitable latrine accommodation at the halting stations and the necessity for keeping such places under sanitary supervision has also been impressed on Railways, and they have been asked to give the matter their full consideration.

(iv) Want of sympathy and due recognition of the rights of 3rd class passengers.—From the memorandum of measures taken by the Railway Board for the improvement of the comforts and convenience of 3rd class passengers, and the remarks made in paragraph 3 (i) above, it will be seen that the requirements of 3rd class passengers have constantly received the attention of the Railway Board, and that the conditions of travel of this class of passengers have been improved very considerably. The Railway Board, however, are anxious to obviate reasonable complaints and are again drawing the attention of railways to the subject.

(v) Difficulty in obtaining tickets and seats in carriages without bribery.—It is difficult to see what railways can do beyond providing all possible facilities for passengers in order to enable them to obtain their tickets in good time before the departure of trains. This was impressed on Railway Administrations and the replies received showed that continuous booking is in vogue at the larger stations on main lines, while on others booking offices open from half an hour to three hours before the departure of trains, according to the importance of the booking offices and the traffic dealt with at each.

4. As regards the question of educating the travelling public by means of notices and bye-laws, I am to say that the Railway Board doubt whether much could be accomplished in the way suggested by you, the majority of 3rd class passengers being illiterate. They are, however, bringing this point to the notice of Railways

Memorandum of measures taken by the Railway Board since 1905, to promote the comfort and convenience of Intermediate and 3rd class passengers.

Immediately after assuming charge of their office in 1905 the Railway Board issued a special letter to all the principal Railway Administrations calling their attention to the desirability of making early provision in respect of the following matters :—

(a) Facilities for passengers to obtain their tickets a longer time before the departure of the trains by which they intend to travel.

(b) Facilities for examining the tickets of 3rd class passengers both at terminal and roadside stations, to enable them to have ready access to the proper platforms and take their seats without the crush which is liable to occur.

(c) Adequate sitting accommodation for 3rd class passengers in carriages so as to prevent the over-crowding of trains.

The Consulting Engineers were asked to watch the progress made by railways under their control in regard to the provision of the several facilities, and the reports received indicated that a great deal had been done to give effect to the wishes of the Railway Board.

Section 62 of the Railways Act gives Government power to require any Railway Administration to provide and maintain in proper order, in any train worked by it which carries passengers, such sufficient means of communication between passengers and the railway servants in charge of the train as they approve. Special action was taken by the Railway Board in 1906 to ensure that, wherever practicable, such means of communication should be provided. Appendix 20 of the Administration Report for the year 1914-15 shows for each of the more important systems the number of mail passengers and mixed trains which had been so fitted up to the 31st March 1915 and the total number of trains run. Instructions have also been issued by the Railway Board for the fixing of a notice in each carriage indicating the method of using the means of inter-communication provided.

The Railway Board have issued orders directing that boards should be attached to the outside of each compartment reserved for women indicating in English and the vernacular of the districts in which the carriage is run that these compartments are for women only. A suggestion has recently been made that a figure of a woman painted on the doors of carriages reserved for women would prove of advantage as an indication to illiterate women of the carriages which have been especially reserved for them. Experiments are at present being made on the North Western Railway to ascertain whether this method of distinguishing women's reserved compartment will serve a useful purpose.

Another matter which has engaged the attention of the Railway Board is the improvement of the supply of refreshments for Indian passengers Special inquiries were undertaken by the Board to ascertain the nature and efficiency of the arrangements made by the various Railways for the inspection of licensed refreshment vendors. The practice of Railway Administrations is not uniform, but in each case means have been adopted for inspecting the wares offered for sale by these vendors, and for ensuring, so far as possible, that they shall be clean and wholesome.

Some years ago the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway Company introduced special cars fitted with conveniences for the sale of refreshments for Indian passengers and accommodation for washing before taking food in accordance with caste requirements. These carriages are run on all important mail and passenger trains on the system. The Railway Board brought this to the notice of all the principal Railway Administrations, supplying them with a note showing in detail the arrangements made by the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway. As a result, several of the more important administrations have experimented with the running of dining cars for Indian passengers. The experiment, owing, it is understood, to the caste prejudice of passengers, has proved a failure on the East Indian, Bengal-Nagpur and Eastern Bengal Railways In the Punjab, on the other hand, it has proved eminently successful, and the North Western Railway propose to build a number of Refreshment Cars for Indian passengers. At present the Railway Board are in communication with Railway Administrations regarding the further improvement of the arrangements made for supplying refreshments to Hindu and Muhammedan passengers.

In 1909, the Railway Board, as an experimental measure, authorised the appointment on the North Western and Oudh and Rohilkhand Railways of a number of officials of a new class designated "Passenger Superintendents." These officers were recruited from among retired Indian officers of the Indian Army. They were given a distinctive uniform and placed under the charge of a special officer of the Traffic Department. Their duties were—

(i) to attend to the complaints of the humbler class of passengers and to assist them to find room in trains by directing them to carriages where accommodation was available;

(ii) to supervise the supply of refreshments by platform vendors, and generally to do what is in their power to secure the greater comfort and convenience of passengers at railway stations.

The experiments having proved successful, the appointment of these Passengers Superintendents has become permanent on the railways on which they were first introduced, and similar appointments have been created on several other railways.

It is impossible to give in detail a statement of all the works which have been carried out during the last decade with a view to increasing the comfort and convenience of 3rd class passengers, but it may be stated that a great deal has been done in the following general directions:—

(i) The construction of enlarged and improved waiting shed accommodation.

(ii) The substitution of high for low level platforms at the more important passenger stations.

(iii) The substitution of new and improved 3rd class passenger carriages generally of the bogie type and of the same dimensions as those used for passengers of the higher classes. These modern carriages are fitted with latrines, upper berths and racks, while the roofs are of improved design with greater heat-resisting properties.

(iv) The provision of passenger instead of mixed trains on all the more important routes and the introduction of 3rd class express trains running at practically the same speed as mail trains.

(v) The introduction of improved lighting, mainly electric, in 3rd and intermediate class carriages.

(vi) The improvement of the arrangements made on special occasions at places of pilgrimage or fairs. Of what has been done in this direction, the account recently communicated to the press, of the arrangements made by the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway on the occasion of the Kumbh Mela at Hardwar in April last is an indication.

Any further improvement in the immediate future in the direction of the provision of more 3rd class accommodation is at present rendered extremely difficult, apart from the necessity for economy imposed upon railways by the war, on account of the impracticability of obtaining raw material required for the building of coaching vehicles. What is possible will, however, be done during 1916-17 by the rebuilding of obsolete stock.

The Railway Board have recently arranged for a special census of the actual number of passengers in each train daily on the routes regarding which there have been most complaints of over-crowding. The reports received show that though there has undoubtedly been serious over-crowding on occasions, over-crowding is the exception even on these routes specially selected for examination on account of complaints received.

The results are at present being examined by the Railway Board with a view to seeing whether by any re-arrangement of train service the over-crowding can be reduced. A special report has recently been received on the conveyance of pilgrim traffic, and is now under the consideration of the Railway Board. They propose to adopt immediately such of the recommendations contained in this report as are found on inquiry to be practicable.

Question asked by the Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Banerjee at the Meeting of the Imperial Legislative Council held on the 9th March 1916.

Measures taken to promote the comfort and convenience of Intermediate and third class railway passengers.

1. Will the Government be pleased to make a statement showing the measures that have been taken from 1905 to 1915 to promote the comfort and convenience of intermediate and third class railway passengers?

2. Will the Government be pleased to state what further measures they propose to take in the same direction in the immediate future?

Reply by the Hon'ble Sir R. W. Gillan to the Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Banerjee's question re measures taken to promote the comfort and convenience of Intermediate and third class Railway passengers.

A statement* is laid on the table showing the measures which have been adopted by the Railway Board, from the constitution of a Board in March 1905 up to the present time, for securing the greater comfort or convenience of third class passengers, and of passengers generally where passengers of the third and intermediate classes are mainly affected, and showing also the action immediately proposed with the same object. No steps have been taken especially for the benefit of intermediate class passengers.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915 (5 & 6 Geo. V, Ch. 61).

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Thursday, the 28th February, 1918.

PRESENT:

The Hon'ble SIR GEORGE LOWNDES, K.C.S.I., K.C., Vice-President, presiding and 56 Members, of whom 49 were Additional Members.

RESOLUTION RE RECRUITMENT FOR THE TECHNICAL AND SCIENTIFIC SERVICES BEING MADE ENTIRELY IN INDIA.

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri:—"Sir, I beg leave to move the following Resolution:— 11-2 A. M.

'This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that it be represented to the Secretary of State for India—

(a) that, as recommended by the Public Services Commission, the technical and scientific services should be recruited entirely in India, and that, in order to secure officers with the necessary technical knowledge, a determined and immediate effort should be made to provide in India the requisite educational facilities;

(b) that steps should be taken to discontinue recruitment in Europe for these services within a period of ten years;

(c) that, pending the development of educational facilities in India, promising candidates should be sent to Europe and America for study at the expense of the State and appointed to the higher posts, if duly qualified; and

(d) that, to attract a proper type of candidate to the technical institutions of India, an undertaking be given by Government that not less than one-half of the recruits shall be chosen from their alumni.'

[Mr. Srinivasa Sastri.] [28TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

"Sir, the services which I include under the term 'technical and scientific' are many. Of these, however, I propose only to mention a few to-day. I take first the Agricultural Service. In this Department, there are 62 posts in the Imperial Branch. Of them, at the time the Commission reported, only two were filled by Indians—Civil and Veterinary,—there are 32 posts in the Imperial Service, and there is no Indian in this. Of the Forest, there are 213 posts in the Imperial Service, and only 2 at the time of the Commission's Report were held by Indians In the Geological Survey, there are 21 posts in the Imperial Service, and there are only 2 Indians. In the Locomotive and Carriage and Wagon Department of the Railways, there were 77 posts in the Imperial Branch, none was occupied by an Indian. Of the Survey of India, which is entirely a military service, there are 51 posts in the Imperial Branch, 31 being classed as superior posts. Of these, 7 are assigned to the Provincial Service, but the 7 Indians who occupy them are not considered to belong to the Imperial Branch, but hold these posts merely as outsiders. In this Resolution I am blessed to some extent because I advocate only those things that the Public Services Commission have themselves recommended. It is only in respect of sub-divisions (b) and (c) that I make a slight departure from the recommendations of the Commission. But even that departure is in harmony with the spirit of the Commission's recommendations, and does not violate it in any respect, and I am full of hope, Sir, that the representative of the Government of India, who speaks to this Resolution to-day, will also take a line largely in support of these recommendations. The first part of my Resolution says that a determined and immediate effort should be made to provide in India the requisite educational facilities. This is fully acknowledged by the Commission. They recommend that no time should be lost in working up the existing educational establishments. Well, some of the technical colleges, they say, are good enough already, and others have to be worked up, and they expect that no long time will be required for raising these to the desired standard of efficiency. In respect of the College of Forestry and of the Colleges of Agriculture we feel practically assured that this will be possible, but with regard to certain other branches, for instance, the Geological Survey Branch or even the Civil Veterinary, it is feared that some time may be taken. In order, therefore, to facilitate the Indianizing of the Services to a larger extent in respect of these Services, the Commission recommend that some scholarships may be awarded to deserving candidates to proceed and receive the requisite technical training abroad. They recommend this in the case of the Civil Veterinary. They also say that the practice of the Geological Branch of awarding one or two scholarships to students may be continued, but they do not recommend this in the case of the Forest Service, perhaps because they think that the Dehra Dun College and the Agricultural Colleges at Poona, Coimbatore and Pusa might be fully equipped for the purpose of turning out the highest material necessary. One dissentient member of the Commission, Justice Abdur Rahim, recommends that even with regard to Forests and the Agricultural Service, it would be useful to send men abroad with Government scholarships. It is in harmony with the recommendations made by Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim that I have framed the third part of my Resolution. Pending the development of educational facilities in India, promising candidates should be sent to Europe and America to study at the expense of the State and appointed to the highest positions if duly qualified.

"With regard to the Locomotive, Carriage and Wagon Departments, there is some difficulty which, perhaps, the Hon'ble the President of the Railway Board might be able to clear. There are excellent Railway Workshops all over India where Indians could be trained for the purpose. But it has been stated in the Press that the schools for drawing and for technical instruction attached to the Railway workshops are no longer open now, as they were once, to Indians. If that is so, that is a matter into which Government may look and set it right. Then, Sir, (d). This is an undertaking to be given by Government that not less than one-half of the recruits shall be chosen from their alumni. This the Commission themselves recommend, and I do not suppose there will be any serious difficulty felt by the Government in accepting that recommendation.

(b) Is that steps should be taken to discontinue recruitment in Europe for these services within a period of ten years.

"In a Resolution yesterday I suggested within a reasonable period of time, and the Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill desired me to state a period. I was not able to do so then, for the reason that no man of authority had recommended a definite period. If in this Resolution I venture to mention ten years, it is because I am fortified by the opinion of one who sat on the Commission and had therefore means of judging of the facilities available. Justice Abdur Rahim says in regard to Agriculture,

'But I would add a further recommendation that the pace of progress in the desired direction should be so regulated that after five years at the most recruitment from England should cease.'

With regard to Forests, he says,

'It is advisable that the steps necessary to enable the Department being conducted solely by Indian officers should be taken with reasonable promptitude so that it may be expected that after, say ten years at the least, it will no longer be necessary to employ outside agency for the work.'

"I have said ten years generally without specifying any Services. It may be a little more in some Services, it may be a little less in some, but I hope that will not prevent the Government from accepting the Resolution that I recommend."

The Hon'ble Raja Sir Rampal Singh:—" Mr. Vice-President, if India is to take her place, and a self-respecting place, amongst the advanced countries of the world, if with that end in view her resources in men and materials are to be developed to the fullest extent, I would most humbly ask the Government to accept the policy embodied in this Resolution. It is nothing more, nothing less than what has been recommended by the Public Services Commission. I do not advocate its acceptance on the ground that a few posts in the technical and scientific services, when filled by Indians, would by themselves bring about that amelioration in her condition which she so badly needs, though, I do hold that for the progress of technical and scientific education, it is of utmost and vital importance that the Government should offer the best stimulating encouragement by recruiting Indians on all posts, as far as possible, in those branches of Services. It is the Indians and the Indians alone who can, under the guidance of Government, bring about that elevation in her material condition, which, owing to want of technical and scientific knowledge, is more or less stationary. Unless best educational facilities are provided in a liberal manner for the acquisition of that knowledge in India, it is hoping against hope to say that by the importation of a few experts from foreign countries a change for the better can be brought about. I do not oppose the import of the experts as specialists from foreign countries, but only in so far as their services may be required for the importation of that expert knowledge which may be lacking. For the present it would also be a right step in a right direction to send promising candidates at State expense to obtain technical and scientific training, and on their return, if qualified, to appoint them on higher posts of these Services. I think it is incumbent upon Government to take very early steps to provide educational facilities for the acquirement of best technical and scientific knowledge in the country and to create good attractions in that direction, and until those facilities are provided—which I hope will not be long—to make provision by State scholarships for the study of those branches of education in foreign countries. With these few words, I support the Resolution."

11-12 A. M.

[Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea.] [28TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

11-15 A. M. The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea:—" Sir, I do hope the Government will see its way to accept this Resolution, or at any rate to give us the assurance that it is working with a view to the acceptance of the Resolution. My Hon'ble friend recommends, that the recruitment for the technical and the scientific services should be made entirely in India. As a necessary corollary to that recommendation, he suggests that educational facilities should be provided. We have not got those educational facilities at present, and therefore, as a further corollary to that suggestion, he recommends that Indians should be sent out to foreign countries to qualify themselves for the scientific work that might have to be done in this country. Hon'ble Members will remember that Japan many, many years before the war of 1894, used to send large numbers of young men to America and Europe, in order that they might be trained in various scientific branches. Hon'ble Members will, perhaps, remember that Admiral Togo was sent to Portsmouth, served there as an apprentice and learnt there the art and the science which have made him so famous. They will also remember that Prince Ito, Governor-General of Korea, was at one time a student in Berlin. I believe at the present moment there are over 200 Chinese students in different parts of Europe and America learning and studying various branches of art and science. I think that ought to be done by our Government. A few years back some Indians were sent as agricultural students. They qualified themselves, got degrees, passed their examinations with distinction, and what happened to them? Three of my friends went as students. One of them got an agricultural appointment, the second man became a Barrister, and the third, a Deputy Magistrate. There was no opening for them. Rightly therefore my friend suggests that at least half of those who go out must have the assurance that they will be employed in the particular scientific department in respect of which they were trained. Sir, I cannot help feeling that in regard to this question of scientific and technical education, there has been a good deal of talk unaccompanied, I am sorry to have to think, with very little result—much cry but no wool! And I take the instance of Bengal. In Lord Carmichael's time a Committee was appointed for the purpose of elaborating a scheme of technological instruction. It was adumbrated that there would be a technological college in our Province. That was about five or six years ago. I do not know whether the Committee has submitted any report or not. My Hon'ble friends over there will probably be able to give us some information on the subject, but whether that report has been submitted or not, the fact remains that nothing has been done. Probably the answer will be that in the meantime the Industries Commission have been appointed. Good and well, the Commission have been appointed. Then we have to wait. How long shall we wait? We have been waiting ever so long. Our enthusiasm is chilled, and, by the time when the Report is laid before the public, those who took an interest in the matter would cease to feel the same concern in it. That is a complaint that I have to make in this Council with regard to the various schemes that from time to time have been suggested for the establishment of scientific schools in this country. I hope and trust, therefore, that on this occasion the Government will be able to give us an assurance that they are going to do something practical.

" My friend referred to the Geological Department. The Public Services Commission recommended that one of the Indian Universities should seriously take in hand the question of Geological education. I would suggest that the Calcutta University should do so, and for this reason, the Geological Survey Office is located in Calcutta. It has a splendid library and a splendid museum. The Presidency College has a Geological Department attached to it with a good library and a good museum. It seems to me that the Calcutta University ought to be the institution that should take up this work. My friend has referred to appointments to the Geological Department. I believe there are one or two Indians in the Department. Let me mention a recent fact which has been brought to my knowledge, and it is this. There were three vacancies in this Department. One has been filled up by a non-Indian; two vacancies remain still unfilled. There are qualified Indians for them, but the appointments have not been given to them. I mention this matter in the hope that the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Department will look into it.

"Sir, I may say that I regard this question not merely from the Indian, but from the larger Imperial, standpoint. India ought to be self-contained, self-reliant. She ought to have her own army, her own navy, her own industries, her own scientific colleges, her own scientific men. Thus, self-contained and self-reliant, India would be a source of incalculable strength to the Empire. Her usefulness and her power on an occasion like this it would be difficult to exaggerate. Therefore, I hope and trust that, from the higher Imperial standpoint, the Government will see their way to accept this Resolution, or at any rate will be in a position to give us an assurance that it is working in a direction which will lead ultimately to the practical adoption of the views of my Hon'ble friend."

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes:—"Sir, my Hon'ble Colleague, Sir Claude Hill, will deal with this Resolution generally on behalf of the Government of India, and I need only add a very few words about the Geological Survey which, except the Railways, is the only Service mentioned by the Hon'ble Mover which lies within the province of my department. I propose to leave the question of the Railway services to my Hon'ble friend the President of the Railway Board. 11-22 A. M.

"I am sure that all will agree that it is desirable to recruit Indians for the Geological Survey, so far as is compatible with reasonable efficiency. I am sure also that all will admit that the present educational facilities in this country are insufficient to train men properly for Geological work. I am in entire sympathy with that portion of the Hon'ble Mover's Resolution which recommends that a determined and immediate effort should be made to provide in India the requisite educational facilities. I look forward to the time, I hope not far distant, when a School of Geology will be established in India which will rank with similar institutions in Great Britain. I need not at the moment discuss the details, for instance, as to whether such a school should be connected with or affiliated to one or other of our Indian Universities, or whether it should be entirely dissociated from other Indian educational establishments. These and similar questions are matters of detail which require careful and separate consideration. But on the general proposal that such a school should be established, and as soon as can reasonably be done, I think there can be no two opinions. If the Resolution were confined to this, I should give it my whole-hearted support. But I cannot agree that it would be wise and in the best interests of India to bind the Government of India down to any time table or to recruiting entirely in India.

"Now, I think that the war has shown us conclusively, if demonstration were necessary, that the value of our Indian mineral resources not only to India itself, but to the Empire as a whole, is so great that the machinery for the administration and development of those resources ought to be the very best possible. I need not perhaps dilate on the great developments which have been made, and in which the Geological Survey have played a most important part in the exploitation of our Wolfram and our Mica and in a number of other minerals to which attention has been devoted. I would like, however, to take this opportunity of expressing publicly my great appreciation of the valuable work done in the interests of the Empire and of the Empire's military resources by Doctor Hayden, the Director of the Geological Survey, and the officers subordinate to him. But what I wish to emphasize is this, that, with the signs before us, as I believe there are, of a rapid expansion of India's commercial and industrial activities, particularly, I believe, in the direction of developing her natural wealth, it is of the utmost importance that our scientific advisers in the realm of minerals—the members of the Geological Survey Department—should be the very best men we can get for the money we are prepared to pay, the best men of whatever race or creed or wherever recruited. I am far from saying that such men will not be obtainable in India. I hope and believe that they will. But what I wish to say is, that if we bind ourselves down to seek in this country only for the men whom we shall require, we shall be untrue to the best interests of the commercial and industrial India to which we all look forward. It is not a valid argument, in the case of the Geological Survey at any rate, to say that, if we require experts in a particular mineral, we should recruit them specially from England or elsewhere, while, for the general cadre of the Department, we should confine ourselves entirely to Indians. Any such attempted distinction would take the heart out of what we may call the general cadre. The war has shown us that we cannot always foresee what minerals may be required to be developed from the point of view of developing our military resources, and we want as many men as we can get with a wide, technical, and expert knowledge of Geology. What would have happened, for instance, if, on the outbreak of war, we had not been able to obtain scientific advice at our doors for the development of our Wolfram and of our Mica. The truth is that the members of the Geological Survey are all experts, and for the ordinary work of the department high technical qualifications are required. If we recognise the importance of the matter it would, in my opinion, be a great mistake to limit by any arbitrary rules our sphere of choice, and I fear, as I have already indicated, that if we do so, and if in making appointments for our technical services we allow ourselves to indulge in any sentimental opportunism, we shall be untrue to the best interests of the commercial and industrial development of India, which we hope and which we believe will come."

11-29 A. M. The Hon'ble Mr. R. A. Mant :—Sir, this Resolution refers in general terms to the technical and scientific services, but I understand from what the Hon'ble Mover said that he only intends it to apply to the Services which he specifies. In dealing with those Services in one Resolution, I am sure that the Hon'ble Mover had no sinister motive; but he might almost have been acting on the old and discredited principle of 'divide and rule,' because the Services are dealt with by different Departments of Government, and, as each Department will put forward the case of its own Service he has got us scattered, and he will no doubt be able to demolish us each in turn. It is therefore with diffidence and with a knowledge of the odds against me, that I put forward a few points in opposition to the Resolution.

"The first point which I have to make relates to the Survey of India Department. The wording of the Resolution implies that it is in accordance with the recommendation of the Public Services Commission in regard to this Department; but this is not the case. The Public Services Commission did not recommend any change in the system of recruiting to the higher ranks of the Department; and, if the Council were to accept the Resolution as it stands, it would lay itself open to the charge—which I am sure is unfounded—that it has not studied the Commission's Report. The following extract from the Report will make the position clear:—

'The main function of the Survey of India is to prepare a topographical map for India and Burma.............

'We endorse the policy which has hitherto been followed of maintaining a military element in the upper ranks of the Department. The object of a topographical survey is primarily military, and the employment of military officers is also necessary on account of the requirements of the War reserve.'

To this I may add that officers of the Department are frequently required to conduct surveys with troops in the field; and if this Service were recruited entirely in India, there might be difficulty in sending officers on this duty. The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes yesterday quoted the case of the Postal Department in which such difficulty has been experienced.

"The other Departments with which the Revenue and Agriculture Department is concerned, are the Agricultural, Forest and Civil Veterinary Departments. All of these have one point in common, in that the great majority of their officers are serving under the orders of Local Governments.

[28TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Mr. R. A. Mant.]

Those Governments will be consulted on the recommendations of the Public Services Commission, but I submit that it is unreasonable to ask the Government of India to accept the general proposition laid down in part (a) of the Resolution that these Services should be recruited entirely in India, without waiting for the views of the Local Governments, who are so closely concerned For the present, the Government of India can only give a provisional and guarded opinion ; but I may say that they are entirely in sympathy, in so far as the Departments with which I am now dealing are concerned, with the desire of the Hon'ble the Mover to increase the Indian element in them. We have not been very successful in this matter in the past as the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri pointed out ; but the main reason why so few Indians have hitherto been appointed is that suitable candidates have not been available. We are now endeavouring to recruit suitable Indians for some of these Departments. In the Indian Agricultural Service, we have several cases under consideration for the promotion of officers from the Provincial to the Imperial branch, or for direct recruitment of Indians who have been educated mainly in England. I hope that some of those proposals will shortly mature, but I am not at liberty to give details at present, because these appointments rest with the Secretary of State. I may say, however, that he has recently appointed an Indian to the Imperial branch of the Civil Veterinary Department.

"The Government are also entirely in sympathy with the proposal that adequate educational facilities should be provided in India for aspirants to the higher branches of these Services. This question is receiving, and will receive, most careful consideration. A beginning has already been made in several Provinces by the establishment of agricultural colleges ; and, as Hon'ble Members are aware, the question of affiliating these colleges to the Universities was considered by a Conference on Agricultural Education which met in Simla last summer. That Conference elicited a good deal of difference of opinion, and has shown the existence of various difficulties in connection with the agricultural colleges. We hope that all these difficulties will be surmounted, and that in course of time India will be able to provide educational facilities up to the highest standard in the sciences that are applied to agriculture. In the case of the Forest Department, there is a further difficulty, in that scientific forestry is a plant of comparatively recent growth in India, and the object lessons in the forests which have been provided by centuries of sylviculture in Europe will not be available in this country for years to come. Moreover, financial considerations cannot be ignored, and, as Sir Frank Sly pointed out in his minute of dissent to the recommendations of the Public Services Commission, in regard both to the Forest and the Civil Veterinary Department, it is a moot point whether the money that would be required to educate a few men each year for these departments could not be better spent in other ways. However, as I said, this question will receive careful consideration in consultation with Local Governments, and I would ask the Council not to press the Government to a hasty and premature decision.

"The alternative proposal in part (c) of the Resolution, that promising candidates should be sent to Europe and America for study, is at first sight attractive. The Hon'ble Mover is no doubt aware that we already give ten scholarships a year for technical study in Europe ; but his proposal goes further than that. He wants to send selected candidates, I understand, with a provisional promise of appointment. I will invite attention in this connection to the rather weighty objections raised by the Public Services Commission in paragraph 35 of their Report. The chief of these is, that it is difficult to tell how a student will shape in the higher branch of scientific and technical studies until he has been tested ; and if you send a man Home, and he does not do well, when he comes back you have either got to give an appointment to a man who is not fit, or else give him a grievance. It is very true what the Commission said that, 'however many warnings may be issued a young man sent to Europe at an early age with such a mark of recognition naturally tends to regard himself, and to be regarded, as having received the promise of employment; and this becomes embarrassing at the stage of actual appointment when he does not come up to expectation.' But I can undertake that this question will be referred to Local Governments, and, pending the result of that reference, I do not think the Government of India can come to a decision on it one way or the other. Assuming now that all these educational difficulties can be surmounted, this does not answer the whole question. The provisional view of the Government of India in regard to the Public Services generally is, as the Hon'ble Sir George Barnes has pointed out, that they should be filled by the best men available. It seems to me that this principle is of the highest importance in the case of the scientific and technical departments with which I am now dealing, especially in the case of the agricultural department. I do not want to introduce any political considerations. I think we all agree that the domain of science is on an entirely different plane from that of politics. To take an instance, in dealing with political progress in his speech at the opening of the Simla Session last September, His Excellency the Viceroy said, 'There is no better source of instruction than the liberty to make mistakes.' The truth of that saying in the political sphere is illustrated by the state of Russia to-day, which appears to have learned none of the lessons of the French Revolution. But I submit that it does not apply to the domain of science. The scientist or technical expert has the great advantage of profiting by the mistakes of his predecessors. He starts where they left off. The first builders of bridges made mistakes, and the bridges fell. When a modern engineer is employed to build a bridge, he is not at liberty to make the old mistakes; he is expected to avoid them, and the safety of the passengers who cross the bridge will depend on his skill in assimilating the teachings of the past.

"I do not wish to belittle the importance of the political problems which are at present under consideration, but I maintain that the work which lies before our scientific and technical departments is of still greater importance to the future welfare of the country. If India is to take her place and to hold her own, as we all hope she will, in competition with the other great producing countries, she must bring the light of modern science to bear on all her agricultural and industrial problems, and she will need for this purpose the services of the very best men that she can get. I do not think any one will deny that for many years to come, at any rate, the best brains will not all be obtainable in this country, and if we were to cut ourselves off from outside sources of supply, we should be handicapping the people of India in the race of material progress. I am sure that the Hon'ble Mover has this progress at heart, and I trust that he will see that his proposals are in some respects premature and in some respects harmful, and I hope that he will not press his Resolution."

11-44 A. M. The Hon'ble Sir Robert Gillan :—" Sir, as desired by the Hon'ble Sir George Barnes, I should like to explain the position briefly in those branches of the railway service with which this Resolution is concerned, that is, the Locomotive and the Carriage and Wagon Departments. The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri suggested a doubt whether the railway technical schools are, as a matter of fact, open to Indians. On this point, I may say at once that I had occasion recently to make inquiries from all railways and I can give the Hon'ble Member an assurance that there is no such differentiation against Indians as he suggests. The difficulty, in fact, lies in another direction, in the direction which, I think, was indicated yesterday by the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma; but we have had the whole matter under very careful consideration, and we have been able to make at any rate a little progress as the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea just now suggested in the direction in which the Resolution desires us to move. The difficulty I mean is this. It will be clear that what is required in these departments above all else is practical training. A man cannot learn his business from books alone; he must go and work in the shops. And practical training is to a certain extent already available in India. But it is when we come to the training of the men who are going to be the officers in the department that we come across this difficulty. It is essential that officers should be familiar with the more recent developments, with modern practice under the best conditions; but so far the basic industries, the industries that supply the different qualities of steel, for instance, are still in their infancy in this country; manufacture and designing are either wanting or only partially developed. For this reason it seems clear to us that for the present it is essential that officers should have a training in England. From our point of view, therefore, the method referred to in (c) of the Hon'ble Member's Resolution, namely, the sending Home of promising Indians at the expense of the State is the better way of securing the advance in the larger employment of Indians which we are anxious to make. Accordingly, we have recommended to the Secretary of State a scheme, put forward by the East Indian Railway, to which I have referred in answering a question the other day in this Council. The scheme provides for the training of Indians as mechanical engineers with a view to their appointment as Locomotive and Carriage and Wagon Superintendents. The probationer will first have a year's training in India, and that, I think, meets the point which was mentioned by the Hon'ble Mr. Mant, since before the probationer goes Home the railway will have a considerable assurance that he is the type of man who will make a good officer. He is then sent to England for three years on a stipend of £150 a year, and if he satisfies the Consulting Engineers that he has made good use of his time and obtains a satisfactory report, he will be appointed as Assistant Locomotive Superintendent or Assistant Carriage and Wagon Superintendent. So far the scheme applies only to the East Indian Railway, but if it is accepted by the Secretary of State, it will no doubt be adopted on other railways in India, and will prove a practical method of obtaining Indian officers for these departments."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"Sir, we are extremely thankful for the profuse expressions of sympathy which we have received from the Government Members in charge of the various departments in answer to this Resolution. But for my own part I must express my regret that the answers have not been as satisfactory as we hoped they might be. Everybody is agreed, both official and non-official, that so far as these departments at any rate are concerned, there are no political considerations whatsoever: and speaking for myself I agree perfectly with the official gentlemen that the only question is one of efficiency. I do not want, and I shall never plead for, special protection; I do not want that any Indian should be appointed to any office for which he is not qualified, qualified in the best and fullest sense of the term, not merely from an educational point of view. But all these qualifications being premised I cannot help stating that the progress which has hitherto been made has been extremely unsatisfactory, and the consideration which the Government of India and the Local Governments have bestowed even during recent years is so perfunctory that, unless the Government of India can make up their minds to work with a little more energy in solving the problem, there will be great dissatisfaction felt. 11-48 A. M.

"Now, Sir, we find that our resources have been exploited and that foreign countries are displacing our indigenous products, and that we are helpless in the matter. We are told that the revenues of the country should not be wasted, that they are very small, and that they will have to be treated with sacred care. We have to develop educational institutions, and we are told that for the present the end might be attained by sending a few men to England, e.g., in Forestry rather than by developing the institutions of this country. Let us take department after department instead of indulging in vague generalities and see what is being done and what has been done. The Agricultural Department is one of recent growth, and I hope if my language is plain and blunt that I may be pardoned. The Government must have had in contemplation the growth of this department at the time of its starting and some time before it. I take it that if the gentleman in charge of the Government at that time had been a little more solicitous of Indian interests, as for example, Japan has been of her own, men might have been sent from India to be qualified for the higher posts that had to be created in India. No such thing was done. Not only has no such thing been done, but have any steps been taken during recent years for filling the higher posts with qualified Indians? In this Department out of 50 posts carrying a salary of Rs. 500 and 30 carrying a salary of Rs. 800, there were no Indians at the date of the report. Taking my Presidency a college was started in Coimbatore in or about 1907, during the time of Sir Arthur Lawley. Members of the local Council have been urging the need of doing something in the direction of developing the higher branches of education with a view to the scientific work of the country being carried on by Indians, but even to-day the Government does not see its way to equip the institution for the purpose, and yet trained men for the higher work are wanted. I am not sure whether the higher posts in other departments have been filled on a more reasonable scale, and therefore I asked a question on the 27th of September 1916 as to what had been done in the matter and what was proposed to be done with the Commission's recommendations. It was in August 1915 that after long deliberation the Public Services Commission reported and the answer was,—

'Some of the agricultural colleges in India would compare very favourably as regards staff and equipment with similar institutions in Europe. The Forest Research Institute in Dehra Dun is efficiently equipped and staffed for educating candidates for the Provincial Services which is all that it has hitherto aimed at. As members of the Imperial Forest and Agricultural Services have hitherto been recruited almost entirely in England and appointed by the Secretary of State, Indian candidates have at present a better chance of securing appointments if they proceed to Europe for training. The whole question of recruitment and consequently of training will be examined on the publication of the Report of the Public Services Commission, and the Government of India hope that in the case of agricultural institutions at least, it will shortly be possible to teach up to a higher standard which will qualify for admission to the Imperial Service.'

A year and-a-half has elapsed since that answer, and we have been kindly promised by Mr. Mant to-day that Local Governments will be consulted in due course; it will no doubt be another two and-a-half years before a beginning is made. I fear, Sir, that it will cause deep dissatisfaction if the rate of progress is not more rapid than that.

"I feel that in this department more than in any other the resources of our country can be doubled and quardrupled if proper means are taken. I hope the Government will see their way to equip these institutions on a proper scale. After all I cannot see that, notwithstanding the scientific and technical advance made in England, England is famous as an agricultural country. As I have said before I do not want the best men in England to be left in the cold, and that preference should be given to the Indians. Whatever the test, physical, moral or mental, let the test be fair and equal, let there be no selection, no nomination, no favouritism, no nepotism; if the best men are Englishmen appoint them, I have not the slightest objection to that, but the method of present recruitment is open to objection, and I do hope that something will be done to qualify Indians for places in their own country. Turning to another department, I find that out of 74 qualified Assistant Engineers who applied in England for appointments, on account of the 10 per cent. rule, only 19 were appointed during a period of six years; that would show clearly that it is not a paucity of qualified men but the fact of their being Indians which stood in the way; it is due to a belief in the difference between the inherent qualities of Englishmen and Indians, about which the less said the better. With regard to the Forest Department the answer given is less re-assuring. Here, again, I realise that it is considered that Europeans are better adapted for this work than Indians having regard to the loneliness and unhealthiness of the surroundings in the midst of which life is led. As I have said, give all an equal chance. Why should not the Forest College at Dehra Dun be put on the best footing possible? I do not think that England can boast of any great forests, greater forests for the purpose of training than India. If a man with European experience is needed, by all means send the candidate to Germany or to Switzerland where there are forests for practical training, and if the Indian be not efficient weed him out. We desire no protection in this respect. Then, as regards Railway recuitment. I have read through the evidence on the subject, and I find that a large number of witnesses were reluctant to take Indians because they think that drivers, foremen and others are practically all Europeans or Anglo-Indians and that the allied department should be filled from the same class So this shows that it is not the test of efficiency that governs the recruitment, but other considerations. That is why we are compelled to ask that a certain minimum percentage should be definitely fixed for Indians, because if it is to be a question of whether gentlemen in charge of a particular department would require A or B, then we feel certain that A and not B would be nominated. As regards appointments in the Railway department the figures quoted above show that, unless there is an alteration in the rules, Indians are not likely to get justice. The question has been brought, up to-day as to whether the unwillingness of the officers appointed in certain departments to go out of India does not show that Indians are not lacking in essential qualities. May I say that in that particular department I find that there are 41 Europeans on a salary of Rs. 500 and 5 Indians and on a salary of Rs. 800 there are 2 Indians and 25 Europeans How can you expect Indians to feel that the Empire is theirs with such a differentiation? No matter what his qualifications may be an Indian has absolutely no chance of rising to the top. If this is the feeling created by this selection principle, we cannot wonder that people are unwilling to go.

"In answer to another question that was put yesterday it was shown that the European stationmasters who were sent out of India to serve in Mesopotamia and elsewhere were recruited for employment at large and important stations, and were taken on Rs. 400 and Rs. 500, whereas the Indian stationmasters were recruited for employment at small stations and were paid Rs. 120, Rs. 130, and Rs. 150 only. If that is the distinction made, is there anything to be wondered at that the Indian stationmaster is unwilling to go abroad when he is placed under people who perhaps have not much sympathy with him to serve in places in which he would find his position irksome; that accounts really for the reluctance of Indians to go abroad. As a matter of fact, I know that in the Medical Department many were willing to go, but they were not taken. Therefore I think it is not desirable to use that argument because it will lead to unpleasant answers which we should avoid at the present juncture. The truth, however, must be told and the explanation as to why Indians are unwilling to go abroad will be found in the inequality of treatment that is given to them.

"Scholarships have been asked for only provisionally until the educational and training institutions are placed on a sound footing, and we do not want any scholarships once these institutions are well-equipped. The Hon'ble Sir Sankaran Nair, in answer to a question put in September last, said that practically nothing was being done for raising the existing engineering colleges to a higher level of efficiency. He added that Government were awaiting reports, and so we see throughout that the Government of India is always awaiting reports from Local Governments and subordinate officials, and nothing substantial is being done, while other countries are taking advantage of this war and are able to displace us completely in all branches of industry. I hope, therefore, on this question where there are no political considerations, where efficiency and merit are the sole test and guide and not racial considerations, that Government will see their way to spending the money of the people of India on objects which will be really useful to them, so that the people may feel 'this is our own country and we may rise to the top of the ladder if we deserve it'."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha :—"Sir, I will not traverse the same ground which has been gone over by some of my friends here, but this question of the Public Services Commission is not a new one. It is a very old one. I have been hearing of Public Services Commissions for the last fifty years, as I believe it was John Bright in the seventies who first brought this question before the House of Commons and moved for submission a statement to show to that assembly how far the Indians had progressed in the different departments. It took five years, I believe, to get the statement before the House of Commons. The House of Commons had referred it to the Indian Government and the Indian Government of those days took five years to make up the statement. That is the first history of the Public Services as mooted by Mr. John Bright. Eventually the statement was given in 1879, and it showed what a gruesome one it was and how far the Indians were kept back in every department of the Service. But those days were considered not very progressive. Indian education had not made those great strides which are witnessed to-day. Thereafter, Sir, something was done in that direction which you may call an eye-wash, something was done to please the Indian public. But the cry became very insistent a little later, after 1880. Eventually, owing to the agitation both of the public as well as of the Congress that had been just founded in 1885, Lord Dufferin in 1886 appointed the first Public Services Commission, the first of its kind which went round the country. Lord Dufferin's Government, in its Circular appointing the Commission, said that the Commission were to so investigate the matters and so satisfy the Indian public as to bring a finality. Well, the Commission did go round, it did many things; it recommended a large number of appointments in the higher grades of the service for Indians; a number of appointments were taken away from the scheduled Civil Services and reserved for Indians. There was a good wrangle on that subject. The Government of India took away some of the appointments recommended by the Public Services Commission. Lord Cross, who was then Secretary of State for India, took away some more, so that the 108 appointments which were first recommended by the Public Services Commission of 1886 were reduced to 89, and Lord Cross finally sent a Despatch to India on the subject. Well, the Indians said that half a loaf was better than no bread and for a time remained satisfied. But the finality which Lord Dufferin and his Government wished to attain was never there. That finality has not been reached even to-day, and that was the principal reason why a hue and cry was raised and continued till at last another Commission was appointed the other day to which of course my friends have referred. What has that Commission done? It has gone with the pace of the snail a little forward, but nothing more. For my part, I may frankly say, as I said in September last, that I do not believe in the Reports of the Public Services Commission at all. It is all one-sided; it is very biased, biased on the side of classes and interests, that is to say, the bureaucracy of the Empire, and nothing more. Here and there you gain some thing, but that is about all. The bread is still kept for the foreign service and the crumbs are thrown to the Indians. That is the substance of the recommendations. Naturally the Indians cry out against the Report, and that is the reason why my Hon'ble friends Mr. Sastri, Mr. Bannerjea and others have been speaking on the subject. We are all dissatisfied. The Members on behalf of the Government have risen in their places one after another and tried to say we are doing this and we are doing that, and that our progress is great. What is eventually the substance of their speeches? This, 'we have full sympathy with you. This matter will receive our most sympathetic and careful consideration'. But there the matter ends. Such is the sympathy, lip sympathy, barren sympathy, with nothing substantial for the people of the country. And as to 'careful consideration,' what does it mean? It means that Local Governments are asked to give their opinions—and of course, we know what they are. They are a replica of the opinions entertained by the Government of India. They have their secret Despatches. There are private Despatches and public Despatches. In this way one can never know what is being done. What happens, I believe, is this: the Local Governments give a sort of non-possumus, and then the Government of India repeats the non-possumus to the public They firstly take two or three years to get the opinions, and, secondly, when the opinions are received they say that as all or most of the Local Governments say so much against the proposal we cannot do anything in the matter. So the matter ends there. This method has been going on in a vicious circle for the last fifty years, but practically no substantial progress has been made; and that is the reason why we are complaining here about the lack of that substantial progress which, I believe, is only possible when full self-government that we are asking for is given. However, that is a very different story. What I do say is, that I wish there was substantial sympathy rather than mere lip and barren sympathy, and that a 'careful consideration' was backed up by something equally substantial. Otherwise these announcements which have been made here to-day by Members of Government mean nothing. They are here to-day and gone to-morrow, and nothing happens. Then another set of bureaucrats come here. You see Amuraths succeed Amuraths. The same old traditions and vested interests are maintained and Indians are kept at arms' length,—'thus far and no further.' That is the shibboleth. But, I submit, this is not the attitude which the Government of India should adopt towards Indians. Indians are very self-respecting, and unless you recruit a large number of Indians in the various higher offices of the State, there will be no rest and no quiet. And I wish, Sir, that the wisdom of the Government will see that the times are passed when Indians can any longer be treated as children. They are not in swaddling clothes; I think we have grown to full man's estate and we demand independence and our rights. For these reasons I do wish, without going into any details, that the Government will this time, after the discussion that has taken place here to-day in this Council as well as yesterday (and which may possibly go on to-morrow and the day after and possibly for the next ten years to come), I do wish that something substantial will be done and as far as possible Indians will be recruited in all the different departments in a reasonably larger number. There is then that talk of efficiency; excuses are always brought forward to the effect that Indians are not yet fully qualified for the various higher posts. What is efficiency? You yourselves set up the standard of efficiency—'We want you up to this high point, you Indians are only here so very low.' But in matters of administration everywhere, not only here but in Europe and elsewhere, what is the efficiency demanded? They do not want an ideal efficiency, but only average efficiency—fair efficiency for carrying on the work of the administration. Are Indians still so uneducated, still so unqualified, that they do not possess that average efficiency? I should like this question answered: whether we have or have not got that average efficiency whereby the departments could be better recruited by them than they are to-day. That is the whole question. All else are mere pretexts, mere excuses, simply to ward us off. You are the men in power, you fix the standard of efficiency. But you are not impartial in fixing that standard of efficiency; you say you are intellectually our superior! The whole upshot is that you regard our intellectual qualifications and everything else as if they were nothing to speak of; as if our forefathers and ancestors for centuries had no administrative abilities and no literature. In short, that they were mere idiots and fools. That is the way we are treated by those in power and authority. Remember, Sir, that the time has come when the Government will have to take a new departure, and that of a very active and basic character, whereby finality may reasonably be reached in the administration.

12-3 P. M.

[Sir Dinshaw Wacha.] [28TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

"With these remarks, I wish heartily to support my friend's proposal which is not premature."

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill.—"I regret extremely that my old friend the Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha should have imported into the consideration of this subject for the first time—for no other speaker has done so—not only suggestions of racial antagonism, but suggestions of distrust of Government's intentions, and allegations that we are willing to stand up here and give lip-service to India while refusing any tangible concessions at all. I venture, Sir, to sympathise with the Hon'ble Mover of this Resolution, as I am sure he will feel that it is a case of 'save us from our friends.' Well, Sir, I pass now, and I think it is time we got back, to a consideration of the Reso- 12-12 P.M.

lution. The Resolution has been most ably, temperately and clearly explained by my Hon'ble friend, Mr. Sastri, and supported with the usual lucidity of argument which we have now been led to expect from him. I need not recapitulate the whole of it, but, I think, I must just briefly summarise its objectives because we have gone so far astray from them in listening to the last speaker. The request is that, as recommended by the Public Services Commission, the technical services described by my Hon'ble friend should be recruited entirely in India, and that, in order to secure officers with the necessary technical knowledge, a determined and immediate effort should be made to provide in India the requisite educational facilities. To that extent, Sir, and if the Resolution had stood thus alone, it might have been possible, since we all sympathise with, and are working towards, that end, it might have been possible to go a long way to meet my Hon'ble friend. He goes on, however, in the second clause to urge that steps should be taken to discontinue recruitment in Europe for these Services within a period of ten years. Yesterday, in connection with another Resolution, I suggested to my Hon'ble friend that he would have facilitated our discussion of his then Resolution if he had been more specific in interpreting what he meant by the term 'reasonable'; and he very legitimately retorted that to-day would afford the opportunity, when he would be more specific, for me to reply to him. Well, Sir, it really comes to this, for this clause of the Resolution is the crux of the whole of it, it comes to this; is ten years a 'reasonable period' within which recruitment for these Services outside India, (that is practically what is meant), should be discontinued? Well, I venture to hope, Sir, that, not only in the speeches we have heard on this side of Council but in what I am going to say, I shall be able to convince the Council that, on the whole, it would be unwise to fix a period of ten years within which to discontinue recruitment elsewhere. As my friend Mr. Mant suggested, (and to adopt his metaphor), the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri has in this Resolution so to speak 'flushed' the whole of the departments of the Government of India and has 'browned' them very severely with his Resolution; and some of my Hon'ble Colleagues, Sir George Barnes and the Hon'ble Mr. Mant and Sir Robert Gillan, who have replied to different sections of it, have laboured under some disadvantage. I do not propose to go in detail into the departments concerned since they have done so, but propose to offer general arguments for the consideration of this Council, which, I hope, will convince them that that period of ten years is, for this purpose, hardly a reasonable period within which to discontinue recruitment.

"But in connection with this I ought, since I think it is the Hon'ble mover's intention, as he said yesterday, to qualify this, by saying that for special posts he has no objection to recruitment of the best brains, wherever they can be obtained; and I note that as a very wise qualification of his recommendations. There is, however, a point of view which requires very careful consideration in connection with that principle, and that is this. (I think my friend the Hon'ble Sir George Barnes referred to the points.) What would be the effect of a system under which your permanent services, if I may so describe them, would be recruited entirely in India, while for your selected posts you leave yourselves at liberty to recruit from wherever you could get the best possible material? I suggest there would be two effects. One would be a serious discouragement to the permanent services and the possibility that for those permanent services you would not always get the best possible material. That has already been suggested. The other rather serious consequence might be this; that you would, for the purposes of your selected posts, the specially important posts, get out your best men from wherever they might be, (they might be Indians, they might be any other nationality), but they would be imported into a service which was depressed from the causes I have suggested, and therefore did not represent that ambition and that technical ability and enthusiasm which we ought to expect from all permanent services. For, I think, it is a truism to state that on the permanent services, in whatever department of Government, depends the real rate of the progress of every Government.

[28TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Sir Claude Hill.]

And it is through the work of the permanent services at Home, just as I suggest out here, that your sober-minded advance takes place, and that if you have not the best possible talent available in those permanent services, if you do not organise them so as to attract the best possible men, then you run the risk of being at the mercy of irresponsible faddists. For scientists and specialists sometimes are faddists and some times show a lack of responsibility. But, at all events, that is the other consequence which might ensue, and I suggest to this Council that the consequences might be serious. The welfare of the people of this country depends to a large extent on the higher evolution of scientific investigation and on the application to industrial and other enterprises of its results. If in any degree you run the risk of impairing the efficiency of these scientific and technical services, then you do run a risk of injuring the material advance of the country. I am not—and I hope the Council will accept here also what I said yesterday on this point—for a moment suggesting that this implies that the recruitment of Indians would necessarily or even probably imperil this. All I am pleading for is that you should recruit from whatever source the best possible material.

"As regards the appointment of men recruited from every corner of the world for the higher scientific posts, I am myself very much in favour of this system. I have advocated it frequently, but always on the hypothesis that you have for the purpose of advising your specialists so recruited the help and assistance of the most efficient possible permanent service below him.

"Now, Sir, my Hon'ble friend Mr. Mant has indicated that the Resolution, though ostensibly based on the Public Services Commission's Report, is not entirely so, since my Hon'ble friend has slightly varied the departments to which his Resolution has application. The matter is not of very vital importance because, as a matter of fact, the nature of the departments in the purview of this Resolution is very similar to those contemplated by the Public Services Commission. And, in point of fact, whether we, as my Hon'ble friend Sir Dinshaw Wacha suggests, should pay 'no heed' to the recommendations of the Public Services Commission or not, I think the really vital question is to see how far we are at liberty in connection with the present Resolution to accept the recommendation of the Public Services Commission or not. It is, I suggest—and I am sure Hon'ble Members will agree with me—a very relevant consideration that has been put forward by Mr. Mant where he indicated that these Services are Provincial Services. I am not at present concerned to defend the accusation of delay brought against us by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma. I admit that very considerable delay is sometimes involved in determining on these recommendations when they have to be referred to Local Governments; but when you are dealing with Services primarily under the control of the Local Governments, surely it behoves us as a responsible Council to have regard to the views of those Governments on the subject of the methods of recruitment for their Services. To that extent I suggest that it would be in any case necessary for me on behalf of the Government of India to qualify any measure of acceptance of this Resolution by indicating that we must be in possession of the views of Local Governments before we can definitely give any undertaking.

"Let me now revert for a moment to the point I have described as the crucial point of this Resolution, namely, the ten years' limit within which the Hon'ble Member proposes that recruitment out of India should cease. Well, my Hon'ble friend, like a wise man, has noticed that the acceptance of any such a principle would involve many considerations and many difficulties; and he has therefore indicated—and I am grateful to him for doing so—certain methods of advance which will facilitate the early adoption of the principle underlying his Resolution. The methods he suggests, or the devices to which he resorts are, firstly, that a certain number of students should be sent to Europe and America for study at the expense of the State, and, secondly, that a certain number of appointments should be guaranteed to the products of the educational institutions in India, while in the first clause of the Resolution he urges that every effort should be made to bring up our educational institutions to the requisite standard. In the first place, I would ask the Council to consider what it would mean, so far as that part of the Resolution is concerned which contemplates bringing our educational institutions up to the requisite standard, if within ten years, we recruit from Indian institutions those qualified at Indian institutions only. It means that within five years at the latest we must be in a position to have all our technical institutions able to teach and train up to the highest possible standard. That—and I think my Hon'ble friend will here agree—as a matter of hard fact—we cannot get away from hard facts always—is a matter of impossibility. I may take as an example the instance already referred to by my friend Mr. Mant, namely, the Forest Department. Now in regard to the Forest Department, with the best effort in the world, however well-equipped our institutions out here might be, it would still be necessary, for securing the best trained material, to send the products of any institution in India to Europe—not to England—but to Europe and America for further training, for the purpose of studying the object lessons, the result of years of sylvicultural work. It may be a reproach to the Government of India that we have not those object lessons at hand in India. The fact remains—and I am dealing for the moment with facts—that we have not got them, and that it takes as much as 60 or 70 years to produce them. I only give that one instance based on hard fact to indicate that, with the best will in the world, we cannot in one Department—and there are others similarly situated—provide fully and exclusively the training which is necessary for Government to get the highest possible material into that particular service. We cannot do it within five years or even within ten years in that particular case.

"Then, in regard to the resort of sending students to America and elsewhere. That has been rather fully dealt with already. It has also been discussed and criticised in the Public Services Commission's Report, and I do not want to detain the Council by going over the same ground again. But I may remind Hon'ble Members that the system is in force to a very considerable extent already, and that we have considerable experience of its working. We have State scholarships and technical scholarships, and we have experience of the products of that system. The experience shows that system is not uniformly—I will not go further than that—successful. It does have the effect anticipated or referred to by the Public Services Commission of promoting in the mind of the young man who goes home the feeling that he is going home with a promise of employment and that is rather a bad state of mind for a young man to be in. It has resulted in some cases in producing rather indifferent public servants and in other cases, owing to disappointment at not reaching the fruition of their ambitions, in creating very undesirable citizens. Therefore, regarded as a general principle, or rather, perhaps, as a device for getting over the difficulty of the ten years' limit, that, I suggest to Hon'ble Members of this Council, is not a very satisfactory one.

"Now, after what has been said by my Hon'ble friend Sir Dinshaw Wacha and by the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma, I naturally have some diffidence in expressing to this Council the fact—and it is a fact despite the criticisms made by my Hon'ble friend—that the Government of India have the ambition, and look forward to the time when it may be possible to attain it, of giving effect to the ideal contemplated by the Resolution of the Hon'ble Member. It is open to Hon'ble Members to distrust what I say. I am powerless in that matter. But if Hon'ble Members accept my word, I think they may also accept the word of my successors in office and of my colleagues in the Council of the Governor General......"

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha:—"For fifty years the same thing has been said."

[28TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Sir Claude Hill; Sir Dinshaw Wacha; Mr. Sastri.]

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill:—"I venture to enter a slight protest. I do not think that it has ever before been said by a Member of the Governor General's Council that we looked forward to the time when it would be possible to give effect to the hopes expressed in this Resolution. Perhaps the Hon'ble Member can give me Chapter and verse."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha:—"I am quite sceptical."

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill:—"When I have said that we have great sympathy, I must add that we also have, as I said yesterday in speaking on another Resolution, a very great responsibility; and as my Hon'ble colleague Sir George Barnes has said, with that weight of responsibility on us it is unsafe, undesirable and unstatesmanlike to commit ourselves to adherence to any time-table. A time-table which would commit the Government of India to cease recruitment anywhere but in India for the many Services covered by this Resolution might mean, I do not say that it would mean, it might mean that a very considerable material loss would ensue to posterity. I maintain—and I think most Hon'ble Members will agree with me—that it is the duty of any responsible Government, as I said yesterday, to keep their hands free to get the best brains possible for the material advancement of the country. However, I admit also the responsibility of the Government of India to go as far as they possibly can in the direction advocated by the Hon'ble Member, so far as it is based on the Report of the Public Services Commission, and so far as, in their judgment after consulting Local Governments, it is possible to go with due regard to the safeguarding of posterity.

"Well, Sir, I do not propose to go in detail into the criticisms made by the other speakers. I do suggest, however, that when the Hon'ble Mover of this Resolution relies in part upon the majority report of the Public Services Commission and in part upon the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim, who recommends, and apparently thinks himself able to support the recommendation, that, for example in regard to the Agricultural and Forest Services, a period of ten years is ample within which to be able to attain to the results aimed at in this Resolution, I find some difficulty in dealing with this sort of double-barrelled assault. Is it the majority report or Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim's recommendation which is at the back of his mind. . . . ?

The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri:—"They do not conflict in regard to this particular matter. The majority report as a matter of fact does not fix any time-limit."

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill:—"That is my whole point. Can we fix the time? The majority report does not do so. However, I admit there is no material conflict in principle; only the time-limit lies at the root of this Resolution."

"Then, in reference to what fell from my Hon'ble friend, Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea, in regard to the men who have been sent Home on scholarships for training in agriculture and technical subjects, I note that he criticises the system on the basis that we do not—if I understand him rightly—we do not always ensure that the men when they come back get the employment for which they were primarily sent Home for training. But in the particular case—unless I am mistaken—to which the Hon'ble Member has referred, one at all events of the three individuals whom he cited became a barrister entirely at his own wish, not because he could not get employment, but because, while at Home, he elected more or less deliberately to depart from the conditions of his scholarship. That surely, I suggest, supports to a certain extent my contention that that is not a very satisfactory method of meeting the difficulties so wisely foreseen by my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri."

[Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea; Sir Claude Hill.] [28TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea :—" May I offer an explanation? He wanted to have two strings to his bow. He was doubtful as to what his prospects would be in the Government Department, so he thought he might chalk out an independent career for himself."

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill :—" I welcome the Hon'ble Member's admission. I think it bears out my point very conclusively!

" Then I can give the Hon'ble Member a far more satisfactory reply, so far as this question is concerned, of whether we are Indianising the Agricultural Service; and that is that though, as my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Mant pointed out, we are unable to give any definite numerical information at the present moment, we are actually contemplating and recommending the appointment of more Indians to the Indian Agricultural Service, and that of three candidates recently under consideration, there was only one of those three all of whom had been Home who has not been found fit for recommendation for the Imperial Agricultural Service. I venture to hope that that fact will go far to assure my Hon'ble friend, Mr. Sarma........."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea :—" Will you appoint two Indians to the vacancies in the Geological Survey Department to which I referred?"

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill :—" I regret to say I cannot speak for my friend the Hon'ble Sir George Barnes in regard to the Geological Department which is not in my charge but in his.

"Then, in regard to the slowness of advance. It is quite open to this Council, or any critics, to revile Government, or, at all events, criticise them, for the slowness of advance. I admit that there has been a slower advance than perhaps there should have been; but after all, we are concerned in connection with the Resolution before us to-day not with recriminations for the past but with good-will and understanding as to future policy, and I may point out that, in reference particularly to the allegations of delay, undue delay, on the part of the Government of India, in the Agricultural Service, which bore the brunt of my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma's attack, it has as an organised service, practically only been in existence for thirteen years, while the Pusa Institute has barely had as long a life as that. Looking to the date of commencement, surely it is blossoming rather quickly than slowly. Thirteen years is not a very long span, and with a country of the complexity, size and wide differences of India, surely the development which has taken place on the scientific side of agricultural activities is not of such a slow and unsatisfactory character as to give cause to the Government of India to blush.

"Then, Sir, I understand from my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma that he finds that his own Local Government are extraordinarily backward in the matter of agricultural education. Well, he will, I think, at all events exonerate the Government of India from participation in that laxity. We have during the past year shown very considerable activity in the matter, and I hope we see our way now not only to developing the agricultural colleges into the highest grades possible, but also to the expansion below of agricultural middle schools. That at all events is another matter in regard to which, considering that it has only been taken up very recently, I do not think that the progress has been unduly slow, with all deference to my Hon'ble friend.

" Well, Sir, I do not propose to go further in detail into the arguments advanced in support of this Resolution. I might invite the Council, I think with some justification, to reject my Hon'ble friend's motion on any of the above grounds; on the ground that we have to consult Local Governments, on the ground that it is undesirable, in the interests of India as a whole, to proceed at the rapid rate which is contemplated by this Resolution, and on other grounds; but there is one consideration which does not seem to have occurred to Hon'ble Members; and in putting that consideration before them, I venture to hope and believe that my Hon'ble friend will not press this Resolution upon this Council at all. I would remind this Council that last August there was made a very important pronouncement of policy, in accordance with which the Government of India and the Secretary of State are now engaged in endeavouring to give effect to a policy which aims at the 'progressive realisation of responsible government in India.' Well, whether that goal will be arrived at soon or late, it seems to me to be a very, very important factor and a factor which this Council ought to take into their serious consideration before attempting by executive directions, such as would follow the adoption by Government of this Resolution, to inaugurate a policy of tying the Government hands in regard to matters which so vitally affect the material advance and prosperity of the country. I understand that in regard to the political side of that pronouncement, there has been some hesitation in some quarters among Indian gentlemen as to the advisability of a too rapid Realisation of responsibility because of the risks inherent in possibly serious mistakes. Now, I suggest that precisely the same sentiment ought to dictate our treatment of this Resolution. We cannot afford, at a time when India hopes to enter upon the gradual realisation of responsible government and at the same time will have to compete on the material side with the world developments which will follow after this world-wide war, we cannot, I say, afford to tie our hands behind our back or in any way enter upon a policy which, however remotely, might risk or imperil the fitting of India in the fullest possible degree to take her place as a self-dependent unit of the British Empire. From that point of view, I suggest that hereafter, when India does reach the stage of self-government, it will be said if we were to accept a policy which in any way did imperil these matters, it will be said of the Government of India that they deserved to be execrated, that they had handicapped India's progress, that they had entered blindly upon a policy restricting their right of free selection which had seriously handicapped and interfered with India's material advancement and prosperity. I earnestly suggest that consideration for the Hon'ble Mover's careful thought, because I do feel seriously that, in suggesting at any time reforms of this character, we run the risk of forgetting the enormous interests that may be imperilled by their adoption. I have only to add if I may descend to a colloquialism, that pace my Hon'ble friend, Sir Dinshaw Wacha, we are in the position of the organist who is doing his best and would rather not be shot at the while.

"In conclusion, I would ask my Hon'ble friend, Mr. Sastri, to consider whether it will not, in all the circumstances of the case, and, in view of the fact that we all think so much along the same lines in this matter, be advisable not to press this Resolution to a division, and I venture to quote what was said by Menecrates—

'We beg often our own harms which the wise powers deny us for our good. So find we profit by losing our prayers'.

I can hardly hope that my Hon'ble friend will unreservedly admit that in regard to the matter in issue in this Resolution, the powers concerned are necessarily 'wise' powers, but I do earnestly suggest to him that in this instance it may be better not to press upon this Council a Resolution in regard to which there are undoubted difficulties and in regard to the policy underlying which there is so much unanimity of feeling in all parts of this Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri :—" Sir, there are only two remarks which I will allow myself to make in reply to what has fallen from my Hon'ble Colleagues. There has been, not without justification, a hesitation to commit the Government to any definite limitation of period. But may I point out that other Governments have not been so fearful of committing themselves where even larger interests than those of particular Services were concerned ? The Government of Japan promised that in ten years' time the whole of the constitution should be revised and a new constitution started, and they carried out that promise. It was a promise that involved the uprooting of a whole system of government, and the engrafting of a new constitution; but they felt that the time had come for it; they felt that the people desired it strongly and they went forward, laid down a period for that great change, for that revolution, and they did accomplish it. Is our Government always hesitant about commitals of policy? Do they not take great risks when they promise, for instance, that in the course of ten or it may be fifteen years they will carry out schemes involving crores upon crores of money? In such a case they do pledge the future. Do they not tie down their successors for ten or fifteen years? Is it possible for a great Government so to act that they shall always see the fruits and be done with them? I do not think that our Government need hesitate very much in this matter. There is another remark that I am tempted to make. In the course of these debates we frequently heard that by the recruitment of the services in this country we might possibly shut out talent and skill from abroad which it might be necessary to enlist from time to time for the development of the country. We felt that there was considerable force in that argument. We said 'quite right'—we will not tie ourselves down so hopelessly that in our need we shall be debarred from enlisting outside talent.' But, because we made that concession, it has been brought up against us to-day—that we are prepared so to organise our services that whenever there was anything of more than average difficulty we should find our organised services inadequate, and then we should have to call in the assistance of outsiders and that it would tend to depress our Services if such aid had to be habitually called in..."

12-48 P. M.

[Mr. Sastri; Sir Claude Hill.] [28TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill:—"May I remind the Hon'ble Member that I was merely quoting his own statement of yesterday."

The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri:—"I said yesterday and I repeat it that in extraordinary cases we will not shut out outside talent. I never said that we should organise our Services on such a low scale that whenever there was anything of more than average difficulty or more than average intricacy we should be obliged to go outside the Services. Has our Government so organised its services, though it be on a costly scale, that they are absolutely independent of outside help? Do we not call for expert assistance in the case of big municipalities? Have we not called in for the planning of New Delhi experts from England? Were our organised Services sufficient to produce the talent necessary? Is that going to act as a depressing force on the character of the services? It is only as a rare expedient that we agreed to accept that limitation. There is one observation connected with that, that I must make injustice to our point of view. We agreed in the past to the organisation of the Services so that they might be most efficient, and we were told that this involved as a necessary corollary that we should employ a large element of European talent. We agreed also to this, and look at the results. Our services are paid or promised so much in order to attract the best talent. Is the best talent always brought in? Time after time in the course of our own experience it has been borne in on us that in spite of the salaries, the emoluments, and leave rules the highest skill is not there. My objection is not to the personnel. I object to the system, to the ironbound organisation of our Services. We are so bound that every man has a right established to rise up to a certain standard. In the scientific and technical services at any rate it is wrong in my opinion to bind ourselves down by a cast-iron organisation of this kind. That is why I find it desirable to recommend that we should make inroads upon this cast-iron system from inside and outside India. It is not always under such a system that we shall get full value for the money spent. But by what I have said I do not mean to indicate that I feel that the remarks made by the Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill in any way dispose me to test the judgment of the Council on this question. I think he has met me in such a way that, if the Council will grant the leave I apply for, I shall withdraw this Resolution."

The motion was, by leave of the Council, withdrawn.

The Council then adjourned to Friday, the 1st March, 1918.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915.
(5 & 6 Geo. V, Ch. 61.)

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Friday, the 1st March, 1918.

PRESENT :

His Excellency BARON CHELMSFORD, P.C., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., G.C.M.G., Viceroy and Governor General, presiding, and 56 Members, of whom 49 were Additional Members.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri asked :—

1. " (a) Is a special architect from England employed on the Delhi works?

(b) Do Government propose to consider whether it is possible to reduce the number of superior officers of the Public Works Department employed on such works?"

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" (a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) On the 30th June 1914 the Delhi Staff of Engineers and Architects consisted of—21 Officers of the permanent and quasi-permanent staff of the Public Works Department, one of whom was on leave.

15 Officers on temporary agreement, or a total of 36.

On the 1st January 1918 the staff consisted of—10 Officers of the permanent or quasi-permanent staff of the Public Works Department.

11 Officers on temporary agreement, or a total of 21.

Government regret that they do not see their way to any further reduction of the staff."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri asked :—

2. " (a) Is it a fact that the cadre of superior officers in the Public Works Department provides for a reserve of officers for special and temporary works? And that, when in charge of such works, there is not usually any increase in their emoluments in the shape of deputation and other allowances?

(b) Is it a fact that superior officers employed in the works at Delhi are in receipt of a deputation allowance in addition to their salaries, while their colleagues of the United Provinces and the Punjab Departments, who are also working in Delhi, do not draw such an allowance?

(c) If so, what is the reason for this differentiation?"

[Sir Claude Hill; Mr. Srinivasa Sastri; Sir C. Sankaran Nair; Sardar Bahadur Sardar Sundar Singh Majithia; Sir William Meyer; Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis.] [1ST MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" (a) The reply to both questions is in the affirmative.

(b) There is no sanctioned cadre of engineers for the Delhi Province, and the engineering staff has hence been drawn from other Provinces. With the exception of the Chief Engineer, these officers receive a deputation allowance in addition to their ordinary pay. The officers of the Government of the Punjab stationed at Delhi, but not engaged on work connected with the New Capital, do not receive a similar concession. There are no officers belonging to the United Provinces stationed in Delhi.

(c) The question whether a deputation allowance should or should not be granted to officers engaged on the construction of the New Capital was very carefully considered by Lord Hardinge's Government in 1914. It was then recognized that sound arguments might be adduced against the grant of a concession which had not been given to members of the general administrative staff deputed to Delhi; but after careful deliberation it was thought that the case of men performing technical work could be differentiated from that of men employed on general administrative duties. The grant of a deputation allowance in the case of the former may be held to be justified on the grounds of the vast importance of the work on which they are engaged, involving the employment only of selected men, of the high pressure at which they have had to work, and of the expense and inconvenience, over a prolonged period, of the circumstances in which their work has to be transacted."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri asked :—

3. " Will Government be pleased to lay on the table the replies received from Local Governments to their recent Circular on the Educational Services ? "

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

" A copy of the * replies received up to date is laid on the table. Replies have not yet been received from the United Provinces, Central Provinces, Bengal, and Madras."

The Hon'ble Sardar Bahadur Sardar Sundar Singh Majithia asked :—

4. " (a) Is it a fact—

(i) that the maximum furlough pay of an officer of the Indian Civil Service who takes leave in India is limited to Rs. 833⅓ a month, whereas it is £1,000 a year if taken out of India;

(ii) that when this limit was fixed the rupee was equal to 2 shillings and that Rs. 833⅓ a month was equivalent to £1,000 a year; and

(iii) that according to the present rate of exchange Rs. 833⅓ a month is not equivalent to £1,000 a year ?

(b) If the reply to (a) is in the affirmative, do Government propose to consider the advisability of increasing, during the period of the war, the furlough pay in India of Indian Civil Service officers and other Government servants similarly affected, so as to make it equivalent to furlough pay out of India according to the present rate of exchange ? "

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

" (a), (i), (ii) and (iii). The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) The Public Services Commission have made certain suggestions in regard to the maximum limits of furlough allowances payable in India, which will be considered in due course. The Government of India do not propose to take up independently, and in advance of such consideration, the matter to which the Hon'ble Member's question refers."

The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis asked :—

5. " Do Government propose to consider the desirability of extending to the Central Provinces the Transfer of Property (Validating) Act, 1917, under section 1 (2) thereof ? "

* Not included in these Proceedings.

[1ST MARCH, 1918.] [Sir William Vincent; Sir William Meyer.]

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"The Government of India do not propose to consider the question unless and until they are moved to do so by the Local Administration."

FINANCIAL STATEMENT FOR 1918-19.

Introductory.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"MY LORD, I rise to present the Financial Statement for 1918-19, and as usual there will be no debate today. As regards subsequent discussion we are this year, as Your Excellency has already informed the Council at the opening of the session, introducing a modification in previous procedure which will, I think, be appreciated. We propose, that is, before dealing with particular portions of the estimates to have a general debate on the Financial Statement as a whole, which will enable Members to discuss and criticise to more effect than in the debate that has hitherto taken place on the final Budget, and will give greater reality to subsequent Resolutions which are admissible with reference to loan or taxation proposals and grants to Local Governments, or in the later compartment stage. This discussion will commence on the 8th March and we shall subsequently proceed to the stages at which specific Resolutions will be admissible.

"The Budget in its final form, with such alterations in the Financial Statement as may be required by later information or suggested by the discussions in Council, will be presented on the 22nd March. After that there will be no further discussion, the lifeless Budget debate of previous years being superseded by the general discussion on the Financial Statement above referred to, which, as I have said, will enable criticisms to be put forward at a time when our proposals are in a less rigid state.

"2. We must again, unfortunately, assume that the war will continue throughout the coming year. That means a continuance, in probably aggravated form, of some of the special problems which I shall presently have to describe to the Council; and as I have said on previous occasions the constantly changing circumstances of the war materially add to our difficulties in estimating. We must go cautiously, and when the results turn out better than we anticipated, it is a matter for congratulation and not for criticism.

"3. The general situation I have now to describe is in many ways similar to that outlined in my speech last year. The revenue position is again excellent. Our Railway receipts have once more broken the record, and far exceeded the figure estimated in the current year's Budget. The result is that we are able to face with equanimity a considerable increase in military charges. Our financial embarrassments, as I shall presently show, are mainly due to ways and means questions. We have had to incur here on behalf of His Majesty's Government constantly increasing expenditure which is repaid to the Secretary of State at home. Simultaneously there is serious and growing demand on our resources to finance the shipment of materials required for the prosecution of the war, and of the food-stuffs which the Allies and many portions of the Empire are drawing from India. The account which I shall give later on of the calls which we have had to meet will be a sufficient indication of the anxieties which the year now coming to a close has brought with it. To meet these demands we have had to ask the trading and financial community to submit to restrictions on their operations, and to share to some extent in the general financial burden. I fully recognise and acknowledge the spirit of co-operation with which these restrictions have been accepted.

"But I may quite legitimately claim that we on our part have at all times taken our full share in responding to the calls in question. We have been materially assisted in this endeavour to meet our responsibilities by the continued expansion in our currency note circulation, by the gratifying results which have been achieved by the War Loan, by the substantial success of our issue of post office cash certificates, and, latterly, by the material addition to our resources which we have received through the sales of Treasury Bills.

[Sir William Meyer.] [1st March, 1918.]

"4. Our satisfactory revenue position is largely due to favourable agricultural conditions. The south-west monsoon of the current year was exceptionally bountiful and prolonged, and such damage as has been sustained by crops, as regards cotton for instance in some provinces, has been due not to deficiency of rainfall but to excess. The recent winter rains have been defective in the north and centre of India, but, speaking generally, the copious south-west monsoon has rendered this deficiency far less serious than would otherwise have been the case. I may add that the area under wheat, which shows an increase of 3 per cent. over the area finally reported last year, is the highest on record.

"5. Trade conditions have on the whole been very satisfactory, in spite of the shackles placed upon them by difficulties in respect of railway transport and ocean and coasting freight, and the restrictions which military and political considerations have required us to impose on a variety of imports and exports. The total volume of the private sea-borne trade in 1916-17 was much the same as in 1915-16, though, as a consequence of the rise in prices, the recorded value shows an excess of about £40 million, of which one-third occurred under imports and two-thirds under exports. The excess of exports over imports reached the record figure of £54 million as against £40 million in 1915-16. The financing of this large excess at a time when the ordinary adjusting method of imports of specie on private account is precluded has been, and remains, one of the principal problems which we and the commercial community have had to face.

"6. The current year, so far as this can be gauged from the figures of the first nine months, shows little variation from its predecessor. The exports and imports of merchandise show a balance of £38 million in favour of India—reduced to £24 million by private imports of gold, which, however, as I shall shortly explain, have been acquired by Government. Practically the whole of these gold imports have come to us from Japan and America, in liquidation of payments due from these countries for purchases of our products which they have not been able to adjust through exports of merchandise to India.

"Speaking roughly, of £108 million of exports in the first nine months of this year—grain, pulse and flour represent £27 million; raw and manufactured cotton £25 million; raw and manufactured jute £21 million; and tea and tanned hides between them £10 million. Over half our imports represent yarns and cotton goods, and sugar.

"The available results of this year's trade operations have thus disproved the gloomy prophecies made in some quarters as to the prejudicial effect on trade of the restrictions which, for the reasons explained in my speech last year, we found ourselves compelled, in view of the larger interests involved, to impose on the Secretary of State's Council drawings. Similarly, there is nothing in the trade statistics to support analogous apprehensions that the raising of exchange in August last would re-act on our export trade. As I have said on previous occasions, these factors are of minor importance compared with the difficulties of obtaining freight, and cannot affect the demand for our produce and manufactures so long as war conditions secure these against the competition which India would ordinarily meet with in the world's markets.

Revised Estimate for 1917-18. Current Revenue and Expenditure.

"7. The general position is brought out in the following table, which compares the current year's Budget and the Revised Estimate now put forward:—

[In millions of pounds.]

	Budget, 1917-18.			Revised, 1917-18.
	Imperial.	Provincial.	Total.	Imperial.	Provincial.	Total.
Revenue	66·420	32·451	98·871	76·677	33·724	110·401
Expenditure . . .	66·284	32·549	98·833	70·852	31·468	102·320
Surplus (+) or deficit (—) .	+·136	—·098	+·038	+5·825	+2·256	+8·081

[1ST MARCH, 1918.] [Sir William Meyer.]

Revenue and Expenditure—Imperial.

"8. As regards Imperial transactions, it will be observed that we are over £10 million better under revenue, while our expenditure has increased by about £4½ million, leading as a result to a surplus of £5·8 million against £136,000 estimated in the Budget.

"9. Nearly half of the total increase in Revenue is due to Railways, which have once more broken the record in respect of receipts, in spite of the hampering of our sea-borne trade by scarcity of freight and other war restrictions, difficulties in respect of coal, continued deterioration (owing to lack of renewal facilities) of permanent-way and rolling-stock, and the pulling up of some lines to provide railway material for Mesopotamia. The following table compares the results as anticipated in the Budget with those now forecasted, and brings in for purposes of comparison the actuals for 1916-17 :—

—	1916-17.	Budget Estimate, 1917-18.	Revised Estimate, 1917-18.
Gross receipts	41·8	41·3*	45·5
Working expenses, including payments of surplus profits to Railway Companies	20·7	21·7	21·7
Net receipts	21·1	19·6*	23·8
Add—Receipts from Subsidised Companies and miscellaneous receipts in England.	0·2	0·1	0·2
Total receipts .	21·3	19·7*	24·0
Deduct—Interest charges and some miscellaneous expenditure.	13·8	14·1	13·9
Net profit on Railway	7·5	5·6*	10·1

"In framing the current year's Budget we allowed for a slight decrease under gross receipts as compared with the, at that time, record figures of 1916-17, and added to the working expenses in order to cope, as far as the circumstances of the war permitted us, with the demands under renewals caused by the heavy work imposed on our lines and rolling-stock. The very favourable agricultural conditions which India has enjoyed have more than counterbalanced the prima facie unfavourable factors referred to above, with the result that we have a large expansion in gross receipts; and as regards net profits, an excess over the Budget of £4·5 million.

"10. We have also a considerable increase under gain by Exchange, which is mainly due to the fact that in August last the Secretary of State raised his rates for Council Bills to 1*s*. 5*d*. per rupee in the case of immediate telegraphic transfers, and 1*s*. $4\frac{29}{32}$d. in the case of other Council drafts. Before this, too, the figures had been 1*s*. 4¼*d*. and 1*s*. $4\frac{5}{32}$d. respectively, i.e., in excess of the normal 1*s*. 4*d*. we take for adjusting our rupee transactions in sterling.

"On the other hand we have sustained actual loss on some of our rupee coinage by reason of high silver prices, and it has been decided to take this loss against our exchange gain and not to debit it to the Gold Standard Reserve, which was not intended to deal with a situation in which the bullion value of the rupee exceeded its value on coinage: allowing for this our total net gain under this head amounts to £1 million.

"11. Under Salt we have an increase of nearly £1½ million,† due to large advance payments in Northern India to secure priority of issue from the stocks there. In November last these indents had so accumulated that it was estimated that it would

* These figures are less than those taken in the Budget by £500,000, the sum estimated as the proceeds of the small surcharge we levied this year on railway goods traffic. This surcharge was subsequently treated as a tax, and the proceeds brought to account under Head XXV—Miscellaneous. Consequently, for purposes of comparison, it is omitted here.

† I give round figures throughout.

take more than a year to clear them off, and accordingly the receipt of further indents was stopped, a measure which will be reflected in a reduction of revenue in 1918-19.

"12. Under Customs we have an increase of over £1·7 million, due mainly to higher prices which affect our ad valorem duties. The increase is most marked under cotton piece-goods (£810,000), while tobacco, silver bullion, sugar, articles of food and drink and miscellaneous manufactured articles are also appreciably better. We have likewise increases of £150,000 under excise duty on cotton manufactures, and £120,000 under the export duty on rice.

"13. Other heads of revenue which show material increase are :—

(1) Posts and Telegraphs.—£150,000, owing to favourable agricultural and trade conditions.

(2) Mint.—£390,000, due mainly to seigniorage charges on new rupee coinage, to cover the cost of Mint establishments and other coinage expenses.

(3) Interest.—£150,000, due mainly to temporary investment of the Secretary of State's large cash balances, and to fresh investments made on behalf of the Paper Currency Reserve.

"In the Revised Estimate for 1916-17 and in the Budget for the current year we set aside, in all, £600,000 of the additional interest derived from our expanded Paper Currency Reserve investments for a Paper Currency Reserve Depreciation Fund, intended to make good the difference between the original purchase price of our consols holding in the Paper Currency Reserve and its value at current prices—vide paragraphs 12 and 53 of my speech introducing the last Financial Statement. The current year's Budget provision for this purpose amounted to £200,000: we now increase this to £450,000, which at present prices will raise the Depreciation Fund to the full limit required.

(4) Income-Tax proper.—£910,000, due to larger profits in various trades as a result of war conditions—of which £550,000 occurs under the Income tax head itself, while we realise £360,000 by special payments from the provinces. Income tax is a divided head, the proceeds of which are normally shared in equal proportions between Imperial and Provincial. But in order to obtain for the Government of India the full advantage of the increase in taxation imposed for Imperial purposes in 1916-17, the provinces have, as explained in paragraph 59 of my speech introducing the Financial Statement for that year, to pay to us what would normally have been their share of the proceeds of the additional taxation in question.

Against this, however, we have to set off a slight decrease of £76,000 under Super-tax, the receipts from which we estimated in the Budget at about £1½ million. This figure had to be taken very roughly, and it is satisfactory that it has been so closely worked up to.

(5) Miscellaneous.—£330,000, which includes £150,000 additional receipts in respect of the railway freight tax imposed this year (vide foot-note to paragraph 9), i.e., the yield of the tax is now estimated at £650,000 instead of £½ million.

(6) Excise.—£180,000, owing to favourable agricultural conditions. The bulk of the increase under this head falls, however, to the provinces, and the above figure represents the Imperial share only.

"14. The only revenue item which shows any considerable decrease is Opium (£320,000), owing to the fact that we were not able, without going below the upset price we had fixed, to dispose of as much as we anticipated at some of our monthly sales in Calcutta—by reason of freight and exchange difficulties, and the dealers having considerable stocks in hand. The loss would have been heavier but for some counterbalancing increase owing to additional supplies to the Straits Settlements Government.

"15. The increase under Expenditure (£4·6 million) occurs chiefly under Military charges. The total net military expenditure for the current year was placed in the Budget at £25·9 million, including a reserve of about £700,000 to meet unforeseen charges. It is now estimated to amount to £28·8 million—an excess, that is, of £2·9 million. The increase over specific provision, which is due to war preparations and requirements, amounts therefore to £3·6 million and occurs mainly under the following items :—

(a) Additional outlay on rifles and ammunition	£900,000
(b) Grant of increased pay to British troops, following on the measures lately adopted by the Home Government . . .	£520,000
(c) Larger expenditure on port defences, representing mainly the cost of mine-sweeping	£470,000
(d) Increased expenditure on guns, machine gun squadrons and mechanical transport	£200,000
(e) Increased railway charges in connection with larger movement of troops and stores	£140,000
(f) Larger outlay on military works including frontier roads and hospital buildings	£710,000
(g) Frontier operations, mainly connected with the Mahsud Expedition	£140,000
(h) Formation of the Indian Munitions Board	£140,000

"16. Under Political we have likewise an increase of expenditure on the South Persia Rifles, a corps raised to assist the Persian Government in maintaining order in tracts in which British interests are specially concerned with reference to present war conditions. While such conditions prevail, the cost of this corps is borne by ourselves and His Majesty's Government in equal proportions. It is now estimated that our moiety will amount to £900,000 for 1917-18, including £210,000 of expenditure which really belongs to 1916-17, but will be adjusted in the current year's accounts. Against this, however, we have a Budget provision of £300,000, thus reducing the real excess to £600,000. On the other hand, there is a saving on other political expenditure in Persia which reduces the total excess under this head to £440,000.

"17. The only other material increases over the Budget are :—

(1) Interest on debt.—£690,000, due to provision for discount on our Treasury Bills. When we issue ordinary loans at a discount, the accounts procedure is to credit the receipts at par value and to show discount as an interest charge. We follow the same procedure in regard to Treasury Bills.

As regards outlay in connection with our war contribution of £100 million to His Majesty's Government, we set aside £6 million for recurring charges, in respect of this amount, including (a) interest on money raised by loan in India and made over to His Majesty's Government, (b) interest on the balance to be taken over in the shape of Home war debt; and (c) sinking fund provision. I explained in paragraph 58 of my speech introducing the last Financial Statement that we were provisionally debiting this amount to the head Interest, and on further consideration it has been decided to maintain this allocation. The fact that our war loan receipts in India have been so much larger than we anticipated does not affect the total here, since it involves a counter decrease in the Home war debt taken over and the interest thereon.

(2) Miscellaneous.—£520,000, the chief item being £400,000 on account of stores lost in transit between England and India.

"18. We thus, as I have already said, obtain an Imperial surplus of £5·8 million against £136,000 taken in the Budget. This satisfactory result is due in the main to the favourable agricultural conditions with which we have been blessed, and their results as reflected in the still further advance of Railway earnings. Our betterment here, together with the improved Provincial balances to which I shall refer directly, has been of material assistance to us in dealing with the very difficult situation we have had to cope with in respect of ways and means transactions.

Revenue and Expenditure—Provincial.

"19. We estimated in the Budget that the provinces, in the aggregate, would obtain a revenue of £32·4 million and spend £32·5 million, leaving a deficit of about £100,000, which would be made up from their balances. The present figures indicate a revenue of £33·7 million and an expenditure of £31·4 million, thus leading to an aggregate Provincial surplus of about £2·3 million.

[Sir William Meyer.] [1ST MARCH, 1918.]

The improvement under revenue, which is most marked in Bombay, the United Provinces, the Punjab and Bengal, occurs mainly under Excise (£540,000) and Forests (£400,000). There is also a nominal increase of £470,000 under Income Tax; but that is largely set off, as indicated in paragraph 13 (4), by a payment to the Government of India under the head Transfers between Imperial and Provincial.

The decrease of about £1 million under expenditure, which is largest in the Punjab, Bombay and Bengal, is due to anticipated lapses in Budget grants, mainly in respect of civil works, education, police, and the profits from the wheat purchase scheme of 1915 allotted for outlay on agricultural objects.

The aggregate Provincial surplus goes, of course, into our balances, to the credit of the provinces concerned.

Borrowing in 1917-18.

War loan operations.

"20. Before going on to our ways and means transactions, I should like to say something about our borrowing operations in the current year.

Our net borrowing at Home is a minus quantity as, while raising no fresh money there, we have paid off £2·1 million in the shape of India Bonds and Railway Debentures falling due.

The War Loan we floated in India in various shapes was, as announced prior to its flotation, intended to be made over to His Majesty's Government for the purposes of the war, and to form part of India's total war contribution of £100 million which was offered with such general approval. The balance of the said £100 million was to be defrayed by our taking over a portion of the previously existing Home War debt.

"21. Having regard to the anticipations of my expert advisers and the necessity for caution, I was unable, in connection with the current year's Budget, to estimate the total amount of the War Loan at more than £10 million, though I expressed the hope that this might be materially exceeded. That hope has been justified to an extent far beyond the anticipations of the most sanguine expert, as will be seen from the figures below, which are in millions of pounds.

Main Loan	26·6
Postal Section	2·9
Cash Certificates	6·6
Total	36·1

The figures under the main loan and its postal section represent actuals, payments having been closed on the 15th October, and they include, under the main loan, £4 million actually received in March 1917 (our loan, it will be remembered, started on the 15th of that month) and a little over £1 million allowed to be tendered in England, on certain special conditions, in the shape of Home Treasury Bills, which were exchanged for allotments in the Indian War Loan. The cash certificates, which were introduced as a permanent measure, continue to yield money. The actual receipts up to the end of January amounted to £6,400,000, and we estimate that £200,000 more will have been received in the last two months of the year.

This splendid response to our loan is due in great measure to the patriotic propagandist work of Provincial and District War Loan Committees working under the auspices of the Heads of Provincial Governments, as also to the cordial co-operation of the Presidency Banks, especially those of Bengal and Bombay. The Bank of Bengal made special arrangements for advancing money, to be repaid in gradual instalments, to persons who wished to subscribe to the loan but had not funds immediately available. The Government also assisted its officers in this respect by a scheme under which these were enabled to subscribe in ten monthly instalments to be deducted from their pay—a scheme which was supplemented by the Presidency Banks in regard to officers who wished to spread their payments over a longer period.

"22. The surprising response to the loan had, however, one disadvantage. The Public Debt Office was absolutely overwhelmed by the volume of the work suddenly thrown upon it, and in spite of the utmost exertions of the Bank of Bengal, which manages this office, and whose staff had previously been depleted by a number of its officers going to military service, there was considerable delay in the issue of scrip. I may say that steps have been taken to prevent any such complaint in respect of next year's loan by simplifying and decentralizing arrangements as far as possible.

"23. Taking the various forms in which the loan might be subscribed to in the main section and its post office ancillary, the results are as follows:—

	[In millions of pounds.]
5 per cent. long-term Loan of 1929-47	8·3
5½ per cent. 3-year War Bonds	13·2
5½ per cent. 5-year War Bonds	8·0
Total	29 5

It will be seen that, in spite of the conversion facilities it carried in regard to previous loans, less than one-third of the total was realised from the long-term loan, and that the 3-year short-term war bonds received a material preference over the 5-year.

It is interesting to note that the great bulk of the applications in all three issues were fully paid up, the percentage of such applications varying from 75 per cent. in the case of the long-term loan to 89 per cent. in the case of the 5-year bonds.

"24. As regards the cash certificates, the nature of which was explained in my speech introducing the last Financial Statement, these have come to stay, and the results this year have been most gratifying, the total figure (£6·6 million, of which only about £300,000 was found by withdrawals from existing postal accounts) being in excess of any previous year's regular borrowing in India. It will be remembered, however, that, although the normal currency of our cash certificates is for 5 years, we undertake to repay them on demand, though of course at some sacrifice of interest. Such withdrawals, on the basis of the latest statistics, will amount to about £600,000, thus leaving the net receipts at £6 million.

I look forward with confidence to the continued operation of this scheme as establishing a valid and welcome nexus between Government and the really small investors; and as an illustration of this I may say that 6 per cent. of the subscriptions to the post office section of the loan came from people who put in Rs. 100 or less, and that the purchase of Rs. 10 cash certificates accounted for about 21 per cent. of the total receipts under that head up to the 15th October.

"25. Taking the British provinces, in respect of the main and postal sections, and of the actuals already available as regards cash certificates, Bombay heads the list with a total subscription of 14 crores, followed by Bengal with nearly 12 crores, and by the Punjab with a little over 6. As a Madras officer, I must express my disappointment that my Presidency has not done as well, compared with others, as I expected, having allowed itself to be distanced not only by the United Provinces and the Punjab, but also by Burma. It has of course to be remembered that some of the subscriptions received in Calcutta and Bombay represented applications on behalf of subscribers residing in adjoining Provinces or States.

The loan was also most cordially subscribed to in the principal Native States Taking the figures for the main loan, 113 lakhs (in round figures) were received from Hyderabad, of which 75 lakhs came from His Exalted Highness the Nizam; 88 lakhs from His Highness the Maharaja Sindhia, 54 from Mysore, of which 35 lakhs were subscribed by the Darbar; and 31½ from His Highness the Gaekwar of Baroda; while Their Highnesses the Nawab of Bahawalpur and the Maharaja of Patiala subscribed 40 and 25 lakhs respectively.

It is not possible to state with any degree of statistical accuracy to what extent the loan receipts represented money which would otherwise have remained with, or been lodged in, banks. But there is no doubt that a considerable amount—especially under the cash certificates and the postal section of the main loan—represented money that would not have been so employed, but was specially drawn out by the loan stimulus.

"26. At the time the loan was launched apprehensions were expressed in various quarters as to the [illegible] effect it would have on trade and commerce by drawing off money from the banks. These anticipations have proved without foundation. The principle we adopted throughout was to leave the loan proceeds with the Presidency Banks, where they could be made available for trade purposes, until we actually needed them for disbursement, or the Banks specially requested their withdrawal; and the Presidency Banks on their side were ready to give assistance to other banks which might find themselves in temporary difficulties owing to the sudden withdrawal of their deposits.

The following figures will make our policy in regard to the loan receipts quite clear. In the third week of June these had swelled the Government balances with the Presidency Banks to nearly 24 crores, while by the end of September the balances had been gradually reduced to 8½ crores. But the withdrawals were employed, practically, to liquidate Council drafts, so the ultimate result was merely to transfer a portion of the Presidency Banks' holdings from public to private deposits.

The best proof of the success of the policy adopted was that when the payments to the main section of the loan closed in the middle of October, the Presidency Banks of Bengal and Bombay had such plethoric balances that we were able, without misgiving, to launch on the experiment in regard to Treasury Bills to which I shall now turn.

Treasury Bills.

"27. The drain on our resources caused by heavy war payments for His Majesty's Government and the Secretary of State's Council bills led us, in the middle of October, to introduce a new experiment—the issue of short-term Treasury Bills, which could be taken at option for periods of 6, 9, or 12 months. It was suggested to us in some quarters that we might issue three-months bills also, but this would then have been undesirable, as the bills would have matured at a time when it would have been inconvenient for us to meet them. Since January, however, we have been issuing bills of this description.

The results have been very satisfactory. Including a special temporary loan we took from the Bank of Bombay on very favourable terms to ourselves, in addition to a large purchase of Treasury Bills by that institution, we have in this way raised £25½ million up to 15th February 1918, and we hope before 31st March to get up to a total figure of £30 million.

Revised Estimate for 1917-18. Ways and Means.

(1) India and England together.

"28. As regards capital transactions, the following table reproduces the figures given in paragraph 72 of my speech introducing the Financial Statement for 1917-18, subject to certain modifications made in the final Budget and later:—

Outlay.		£ million.	Resources.	£ million.
Provincial deficit		0·1	Imperial surplus	0·1
Capital expenditure—			Unfunded debt	1·9
Railways	3·6
Irrigation	0·6	4·5	Special war receipts	0·6
Delhi	0·3
Discharge of debt		0·9	Credit for silver purchased in 1916-17	1·4
			Miscellaneous items	1·5
TOTAL		5·5	TOTAL	5·5

"29. (1) The figures for War Loan transactions have been omitted, as in the case of the corresponding table in the last Financial Statement, since they will go to His Majesty's Government in part liquidation of our £100 million contribution.

[1ST MARCH, 1918.] [Sir William Meyer.]

(2) The figures do not follow the Budget in the following respects:—

(a) We then contemplated drawing on our balances in India to the extent of £3 million, corresponding to the estimated loan receipts during 1916-17. The present table is, however, squared without adopting this course, and to the extent to which our balances were in excess of the normal figure, these consisted of anticipatory war loan receipts which can be more conveniently dealt with in connection with the war loan figures as a whole.

(b) Miscellaneous items, £1·5 million.—The head Miscellaneous is made up of numerous entries, such as deposit transactions, etc., and it was anticipated at the time of the presentation of the Financial Statement that these would practically balance each other. Subsequently, however, the Secretary of State advised us that he expected to recover £1½ million less war expenditure in 1916-17, and a correspondingly larger amount in 1917-18 (vide paragraph 6 of my speech introducing the final Budget).

"30. But the figures as we can now forecast them will stand thus:—

Outlay.		£ million.
Capital expenditure—
Railways	3 1	3 9
Irrigation . . .	0·5
Delhi . . .	0·3
Discharge of debt*		2·7
Purchase of Home Treasury Bills .		20 0
Credits in favour of Federal Reserve Bank of New York . . .		2·7
Purchase of military stores and equipment awaiting allocation . .		2·1
Total .		31·4

Resources.	£ million.
Receipts from Indian Treasury Bills, etc.	30·0
Imperial surplus	5·8
Provincial surplus	2·3
Net result of other transactions . .	0·6
Total .	38·7

"31. (1) The capital expenditure falls short of the Budget Estimate by £600,000, due mainly to lapses under railway expenditure at Home, which could not be fully made up by extra outlay here.

(2) The discharge of debt figure includes £570,000 in repayment—(a) of a temporary loan of £330,000 taken from the Maharaja Sindhia in 1914-15 and (b) of three instalments of £80,000 each of the Gwalior loan of 1887. In 1914-15 His Highness the Maharaja intimated to us in the most generous and patriotic way that he would postpone repayment of these instalments during the war, but in view of its prolongation it has been decided to take no further advantage of this concession.

The remaining amount (£2·1 million) is in respect of debt in London, and is for discharge of India Bonds (£500,000) and Railway Debentures which matured this year. It was originally proposed to renew the latter, but in view of the Secretary of State's favourable financial position they have been paid off.

(3) We have also had to incur expenditure to the extent of £2·1 million on the purchase of military stores and equipment in anticipation of demands either in India or from the Expeditionary forces. Pending their allocation to specific requirements, when the cost will be treated as expenditure debitable to Indian revenues or recoverable from the Home Government as the case may be, it has to be charged to a suspense head, thus reducing the resources available for general ways and means purposes.

(4) The Treasury Bills receipts and the Imperial and Provincial surpluses have already been explained, while the American 'credit' transaction is referred to later in paragraph 39.

"32. The closing item in the 'Resources' column, which balances to £600,000, is the net result of transactions in respect of unfunded debt, special war receipts, credit for

* The discharge of debt is shown in statement C of the Financial Statement as amounting to £5·5 million: the difference between this sum and the figure given above represents rupee debt bearing interest at 3, 3½ and 4 per cent. which has been cancelled by the issue of a smaller face value of paper of the 5 per cent. long term Indian war loan 1929-1947 in connection with the conversion operations of 1917, and securities of the latter loan cancelled by purchase for the sinking fund constituted under the Loan notification. The amount of debt cancelled is shown in statement C as debt discharged by a per contra credit to the head "Deposits and Advances—Miscellaneous".

silver purchased but not yet obtained, and miscellaneous, which were shown separately in the statement in paragraph 28, and there totalled to £5·4 million.

(1) Apart from transactions connected with the transfer of the provident funds of certain Railway companies to Government which result in a credit of £300,000, unfunded debt is now estimated to bring us in £300,000 only, against £1·9 million contemplated in the Budget, owing to reduction in postal savings bank deposits by reason of the superior attractions of cash certificates and the postal section of the ordinary loan. There is no reason to regret this as it is of advantage to us to have deposits which are practically at call transferred to more permanent indebtedness. Cash certificates, I may say, come technically under unfunded debt, but it is convenient to deal with them in connection with the war loan, as the amount realised thereby is credited to His Majesty's Government like our war loan receipts proper.

(2) The adjusting credit in regard to silver is now altered to a debit of £200,000, as the amount outstanding at the end of the current year will exceed that at the beginning.

(3) Special war receipts are now estimated to produce £200,000 only, by reason of smaller receipts in connection with the employment of enemy ships.

(4) Miscellaneous items balance to nil as against an anticipated credit of £1½ million. This is due to—

(a) The amounts recoverable from His Majesty's Government in respect of 1916-17 having been less than anticipated.

(b) The fact that no recovery has yet been made, pending more definite compilation and adjustment of accounts, of the sums which under present arrangements constitute the share of His Majesty's Government in respect of the cost of the South Persia Rifles—vide paragraph 16.

"33. It will thus be seen that, apart from the £20 million to be invested in Home Treasury Bills, which I will explain directly, we are about £27⅓ million to the good as compared with original anticipations, a result obtained mainly—

(a) By our having a large (combined) Imperial and Provincial surplus of £8·1 million, whereas in the Budget we expected these two items to balance to nil.

(b) By our receipts from Treasury Bills, including the temporary loan from the Bank of Bombay referred to in paragraph 27.

These results would lead up to an aggregate closing balance in India and England of £44 million as against about £17½ million taken in the Budget.

We have, however, arranged with the Secretary of State, on whose side, as I shall presently explain, the greater part of this balance has accrued, to reduce it by the purchase of £20 million of Home Treasury Bills, to be realised later in order to meet the special liabilities which will then come upon us.

"34. Apart from our Treasury Bills, which mature in the coming year and which we propose to pay off or renew then, our position as regards temporary debt is as follows. In 1920 we have to pay off the three-year War Bonds issued this year amounting to about £13 million. In 1922 we have to pay the five-year War Bonds of 1917, amounting to about £8 million. Our this year cash certificates, amounting to £6 million net (after deducting amounts already repaid), will also fall due in 1922. In 1923, again, we have to pay off the loan of 1915, amounting to £3½ million: we have the option, however, of paying this in 1920. Moreover, our borrowing programme for next year will in all probability include the issue of short term bonds, and if we repeat bonds for three and five years, the former will mature in 1921, and the latter, and fresh cash certificates, in 1923.

Lastly, when peace conditions permit the resumption of the Railway Capital Programme on a scale necessary to provide adequately for requirements—and this will involve making up a lot of leeway in respect of the compulsory cutting down of that programme during the war—we shall probably find some difficulty in raising, on reasonable terms, the amount of capital which would be required.

We propose therefore, as against our temporary borrowings on Treasury Bills here, and in view of the satisfactory financial position of India as a whole, to invest £20 million in Home Treasury Bills in order to provide for the liabilities which in one way or another will come upon us shortly after the war is over.

[1st March, 1918.] [Sir William Meyer.]

"35. This investment will, of course, help the Home Government pro tanto in providing funds for the war. And counting in investments from the Paper Currency and Gold Standard Reserves, we shall thus have put £32 million of fresh money into Home Treasury Bills this year, making in all, in addition to the £35 million we had already put in up to the end of 1916-17, a total of £67 million lent to the Home Government, and quite outside our special war contribution, since the war began. This will be increased by £16 million in the coming year through the additional investment against the Paper Currency Reserve proposed in paragraph 70.

(2) India.

"36. But though our position, taking India and England together, is a decidedly satisfactory one, there is a most marked difference between the position in the two countries, owing to the very large war expenditure which we have to meet here and for which the Secretary of State receives payment in London, while we have also to defray large Council drawings, which he issues in the interests of India's export trade, the bulk of which at the present time consists of commodities of national importance. Owing, again, to the high price of, and keen competition for, silver, the Secretary of State has not been able to make counter-remittances to us in this form (for coinage) to anything like the extent that we had hoped for, while the necessity of conserving the central gold resources of the Empire has precluded his making alternative counter-remittances to us in that metal. America, too, has prohibited the export of gold and silver except under special licence since September 1917. Accordingly, while the Secretary of State's balances have been exceedingly high, our position has been one of constant anxiety. We should indeed have been in a very parlous state but for the facts that—

(a) Our War Loan receipts proved far in excess of the most sanguine estimates that could have been framed in advance of the loan. And though the receipts ultimately go to His Majesty's Government, that takes place by adjustment between the India Office and the Treasury in London, so we get the primary benefit of the money subscribed here.

(b) We are, as already indicated, obtaining £30 million from Indian Treasury Bills or their equivalent.

"37. The difficulties of our position in India will appear more fully from the figures which follow.

In the current year's Budget we estimated that we should have to incur a repayable outlay of £39 million for war purposes, including £2·7 million for remittances to East Africa and expenditure on behalf of Australia and the Ministry of Munitions. Leaving out minor miscellaneous adjustments, we proposed to find this amount to the extent of £24½ million from revenue, representing ordinary Home charges in respect of current and capital expenditure; £10 million from the proceeds of the War Loan, including cash certificates; and about £4 million through purchase of silver by the Secretary of State. The Secretary of State was to finance himself for his ordinary requirements from the recoveries he obtained from the War Office, etc., and we were unable to make any specific provision for Council drawings, barring a sum of £½ million representing the difference between estimated outstandings at the beginning and at the end of the year. For the current Council drawings we had to trust to further purchase of silver by the Secretary of State and further investment from the Paper Currency Reserve.

"38. The present state of things, taking actuals so far as they are available and anticipations in respect of the remainder of the year, is as follows.

(1) The outlay on behalf of His Majesty's Government, including as before remittances to East Africa and expenditure on behalf of Australia, the Admiralty and the Ministry of Munitions, amounts to no less than £66 million.

(2) The Secretary of State's drawings are expected to amount to £34·8 million, inclusive of special allotments to the Exchange Banks to enable them to finance tea and rice purchases for His Majesty's Food Controller, and other payments which are practically equivalent to Council bills. The latter category covers special finance which we provided in India in respect of wheat purchases negotiated for the Royal Commission on food supplies.

[Sir William Meyer.] [1ST MARCH, 1918.]

(3) We have further to provide funds for the purchase of tea for the War Office in Ceylon and of foodstuffs for that Colony in India, for coinage undertaken in India on behalf of Egypt, and for special remittances in connection with the war to Jeddah and other places. These various items amount together to £2 million.

(4) We have to meet increased liabilities for the payment of money orders issued by foreign countries on India to the extent of £5·3 million.

We thus get to the gigantic total (for India) of about £108 million, representing, in effect, remittances to England and other countries.

"39. To this we have to add a further sum of £2·7 million which, under arrangements between His Majesty's Government and the United States, we have had to provide here in credits to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York for the benefit of American importers of jute and other Indian articles required in connection with the war, who would otherwise find it difficult to discharge their liabilities. This sum represents, in effect, an addition to the Secretary of State's ordinary Council drawings. On the other side, the American Government credits us with an equivalent amount in dollars, and we are assuming the realisation of this sum next year—vide paragraph 66 infra

Our special liabilities for what may be called remittance purposes thus reach about £111 million, which is nearly half as much again as our total current revenue (Imperial) as now estimated, and about three and a half times as much as the Secretary of State's Council drawings in the last year of peace (1913-14), when we had, of course, no special war charges and the like to meet on behalf of His Majesty's Government and other British Administrations.

"40. We have met, or will meet, this huge demand in the following ways—

(a) By proceeds in India of our War Loan, including £6 million (net) in cash certificates—about £31½ million The loan produced an additional £1·1 million received in London under special conditions in the shape of Home Treasury Bills, but this is, of course, no use to us in India.

(b) By adding to £24½ million, put down in the Budget estimate as obtainable from revenue, the further sum of £7 million representing, approximately, improvements in revenue (Imperial and Provincial) arising in India : in all, therefore, £31½ million.

(c) By the obtainment of £30 million from Treasury Bills, including the special loan from the Bombay Presidency Bank referred to in paragraph 27.

(d) By fresh coinage of silver, or bullion awaiting coinage – £13·3 million.

(e) By profits from the Gold Standard Reserve in respect of rupee coinage—£1·4 million.

(f) By further investment in London on behalf of the Paper Currency Reserve, which sets free rupees on this side—£8·7 million. We took power last April to increase our Paper Currency investments by £8 million and had £1 million still in reserve against previous investing powers. Against this investments have been made to the extent of £8·7 million, leaving a balance of £300,000 which is available for further investment hereafter.

"41. We thus work up to a total of over £119 million as against remittance liabilities of £111 million. But we have likewise to take into account the worseness in our miscellaneous capital transactions as described in paragraphs 31 (3) and 32, and the net result is that we shall have a closing balance in India of £16 million against £12·2 million taken in the Budget. As will be seen later, this surplus will be fully required next year.

I have not taken any account in the above calculations of the measures adopted in respect of compulsory acquisition of gold coming into India, for we have to pay for this gold ourselves. The good it does us is not in any direct increase of our resources, but in the concentration of the gold in the Currency Reserve as against future possibilities, and also in the fact that some of the notes in which we pay for the gold will probably remain in circulation instead of coming back for encashment in rupees.

[1ST MARCH, 1918.] [Sir William Meyer.]

(3) England.

"42. I next turn to the Secretary of State's position. His resources for the year are now estimated as follows:—

[In millions of pounds.]

(1)	Receipts from Council Bills, and on account of analogous payments, vide paragraph 38 (2) *	35·3
(2)	Recoveries from the War Office and the Ministry of Munitions, etc.†	65·0
(3)	Special recoveries in respect of our disbursements or remittances of funds in respect of Ceylon, Jeddah, Egypt, etc.	2·1
(4)	Increased receipts from the foreign money order transactions referred to in paragraph 38 (4)	5·3
(5)	Subscriptions to Indian War Loan in London in the form of Home Treasury Bills	1·1
	Total	108·8

"43. As against this the Secretary of State will have to meet the following disbursements:—

(1)	Ordinary Home charges including capital expenditure outlay	25·0
(2)	For purchase of silver ‡	13·5
(3)	Payments to the Treasury of the net proceeds of the Indian War Loan§	35·1
(4)	Investment in Home Treasury Bills on behalf of the Paper Currency Reserve	8·7
(5)	Investment on behalf of Gold Standard Reserve from profits on coinage	1·4
(6)	Special investment of £20 million in Home Treasury Bills for the purpose indicated in paragraph 34	20·0
(7)	Discharge of India bonds and Railway debentures	2·1
(8)	Miscellaneous transactions	0·4
	Total	106·2

These transactions and adjustments lead up to a closing balance in London of £8 million.

Currency and Exchange Difficulties.

"44. The figures I have cited in dealing with our ways and means operations during the course of this year evidence the nature and extent of the strain which these place on our resources. The subject is, however, one of such importance that I propose to turn now to its more general aspects, and to deal with the position more fully than by mere review of figures. The remittance operations to which I have referred have been on a scale abnormally huge as compared with the transactions of the country before the war. I will now explain as briefly as I can how these have tended to dislocate the mechanism of Government finance, and of trade finance also, owing to the intimate dependence of Indian trade on the financial machinery of Government. In normal times the remittances which the Secretary of State places at the disposal of trade through his Council drawings are required, so far as the

* This does not correspond exactly with the disbursement on our side estimated in paragraph 38, as the present figure includes some drawings which will be paid in India in 1918-19.

† This allows for sums which will be still outstanding at the close of the year.

‡ This figure differs somewhat from that given in paragraph 40(d) by reason of the fact that the Secretary of State pays for silver when he acquires it, whereas we do not get the benefit of it till it reaches India. Consequently, while the figures given in respect of his transactions relate to current purchases, those in respect of ours relate to receipts.

§ The gross receipts from our War loans in India and England together are shown at £36·1 million in paragraph 21, in accordance with the usual practice under which we credit the full face value of a loan under our Loans receipts, discount in respect of the actual rate of subscription being charged as interest expenditure which falls under current revenues transactions. But the net amount actually obtained, allowing for the fact that the long-term loan was issued at 95, and that our net cash certificate receipts are less than the gross by £600,000 (paragraph 24), is £35·1 million, and it is this amount that we pay over to the Home Government.

trade aspect of the matter is concerned, to settle only a portion of the surplus of exports of merchandise over imports, a substantial portion of the excess being discharged by the import of the precious metals by private agency. At the present time the position is aggravated not merely by the increased surplus of exports, but by the difficulty in effecting specie remittances. So, whereas ordinarily the primary object of the Secretary of State's Council drawings is to place him in funds to meet his expenditure in England, his large Council issues are at present made solely with the object of financing trade. His expenditure requirements would be covered nearly twice over by repayments made to him in London against the enormous disbursements made by us here on behalf of His Majesty's Government, these direct disbursements alone placing a very heavy strain on our resources.

"45. Our primary difficulty, then, arises from the extent to which, as a result of these transactions, our resources have been transferred from India to England. In normal times it might have been possible for us, as it would be for the banks on behalf of trade, to deal with this problem by the import of specie, or, as a refinement on this method, by earmarking gold in London against the concurrent issue of notes from our Paper Currency Reserve in India. These expedients, or modifications of them, have indeed been adopted to an extent which is, I think, not generally realized. Our imports of purchased silver have, during 1916-17 and the current financial year, amounted to not less than £29 million The maintenance of silver purchases, however, on a scale sufficient to settle the balance of indebtedness to India would obviously not have been a practical proposition, while since the outbreak of the war, the importation or the earmarking of gold by Government has been precluded by the interests of the Empire.

"But though it has not been possible for us to earmark gold, we have adopted an alternative measure which, while it has a very similar effect from our point of view, is at the same time very helpful to the Home Government. We have taken powers to enable us, instead of earmarking gold for our Paper Currency Reserve against the issue of notes, to hold a portion of the Reserve in British Treasury Bills, which are the next best thing to gold. The effect of this transaction is that the Government of India provide, from their Indian resources, the money necessary for meeting the expenditure of the Home Government incurred in India, and they take repayment of a substantial portion of the amount so disbursed in the form of securities of the Home Government. In other words, we have lent to the Home Government for the time being the funds required for a considerable portion of their outlay in India, in the same way in which the United States grants loans to the Allies to cover the larger portion of their disbursements in America.

"There is another and analogous method by which we have also to some extent been able to deal with the problem. I refer here to what I have previously said in regard to our War Loan, and to our Treasury Bills. The proceeds of these are received by us in India and are available for financing our disbursements here, while we are repaid in England for services against which these disbursements were originally made. A portion of the amount so recovered, representing the equivalent of the subscriptions to our War Loan is, of course, not lent to the Home Government, but is actually made over to them as a gift in cash.

"46. It may perhaps be asked why we could not indefinitely continue the process of making payments in India in notes against purchases of British Treasury bills in England. The answer is, of course, that the extent to which we can issue notes is limited in two ways; in the first place by the extent to which the supplier of goods, or services, is prepared to receive notes in payment, while secondly we must maintain an adequate metallic backing to enable us to honour these notes promptly when presented. Any attempt to compel the acceptance of currency notes would react on public confidence and Government credit, and would result in the depreciation of our notes and the inflation of prices.

"47. This fact brings me to another aspect of our difficulty. The great demand for Indian products and other services which has resulted in the large transfer of funds from India to England has also necessitated the issue in India of a large amount of currency to pay for such products, etc. The demand for these products at the same time tends to cause a rise in prices in India, in this way also affecting the amount of currency required. To the extent that these currency requirements can be met by notes they have been so satisfied. The total of our active note circulation (viz., excluding notes held in our Reserve Treasuries and by the head offices of the Presidency Banks), which is now 82 crores as against 50 crores before the war, is a definite indication of the progress which has been made in this way, and the further introduction of small value notes marks another definite step in the same direction. But ultimately the provision of metallic rupees is largely governed by the customs and prejudices of the Indian producer and artisan, and though these may be gradually modified, there is a definite limit to the extent to which a paper currency can in this country be substituted for coin.

" Concurrently, then, with this large increase in our note issue, we must expect, and find, a very large demand for rupees. The net issues to the public during 1916-17 amounted to no less than 35 crores, while in the current year the net issues already amount to a further 24 crores, in addition to 8 crores (over £5 million) of sovereigns. That is 67 crores in all of issues of metallic currency since the commencement of the financial year 1916-17, or in rather less than two years. In normal years we could have hoped that a portion of the large volume of currency thus put into circulation for the purchase of agricultural produce and other supplies, for the payment of labour in mills and factories, and so on, would tend to return to the larger centres in payment for the imported commodities which the recipient classes consume. The contraction of imports caused by freight and other war difficulties, however, affects us in this way too, as well as from the point of view of our purely external exchange ; and the net absorption would have been on an even larger scale had it not been for the fact that a certain quantity of our currency has returned to us in the form of subscriptions to our loans. Our requirements of silver have, therefore, been very great, and in attempting to satisfy them, the Secretary of State has been confronted with keen competition from other countries where also the economic position has entailed an increase in the silver currency. Such steps as we could take to eliminate competition by private importers with the Secretary of State we have taken, and I refer to them elsewhere. The fact, however, remains that the price of silver has in the last year been steadily advancing; and has for some time past, subject to some fluctuations, stood at a level at which the bullion value of the rupee exceeds its value as coin.

" 48. This advance in the price of silver involved an alteration in the exchange value of the rupee on the basis of the rates at which the Secretary of State sells his Councils. The immediate necessity for this measure arose out of the fact that it would be unjustifiable for Government to undertake, at material loss, the supply of the large amount of new rupee currency required at the present time; and I should like to emphasise that this action was reluctantly taken only when it became evident that the price of silver was unlikely for a considerable period to recede from a level at which loss would be entailed by the continued sale of Councils at 1*s.* 4*d.* It has been suggested that the potential loss was small and that it might legitimately be charged to the Gold Standard Reserve. I cannot accept either of these contentions. In the first place, the absorption of rupees during the years when the bullion value of the rupee was less than its face value affords no criterion of the probable demand on Government for rupees when, owing to a rise in the price of silver, it would become profitable to melt or to export them. In order to avoid loss from these causes as far as possible, we have, it is true, taken certain steps in the form of prohibitory legislation ; but though prohibitions of the kind may serve their object to some extent as temporary expedients, they cannot be expected to operate as a permanent check to the drain on our rupee currency which would certainly accompany a substantial and continued appreciation in the bullion value of the rupee over its face value. In fact the most important limitation which has previously existed on the possible demand on Government for the supply of rupees, viz., that it is unprofitable to export or melt them, would be entirely removed. The only safeguard that a rise in the value of silver above what I may call the ' rupee melting point ' will not result in the disappearance of rupees from circulation is such a modification in their external exchange value as to make their export unprofitable. Apart from this safeguard an indefinite and unlimited liability would be entailed, and it would be indefensible for the Government of India to accept this liability as a loss either to the Gold Standard Reserve or to Indian revenues generally.

[Sir William Meyer.] [1ST MARCH, 1918.]

"49. The references which certain of our critics have made in this connection to the report of the Royal Commission on Indian Currency and Finance are, as I said in Bombay last October, based on an entire misapprehension of the Commission's conclusions. The main danger which the Commission had in view was the possibility of the exchange value of the rupee falling below 1*s.* 4*d*, and their report lends no support to the view that the Gold Standard Reserve should be drawn upon to make good unflinchingly loss entailed by adhering to the 1*s.* 4*d.* rate in the case of such a contingency as that which has now occurred. I quote from paragraph 79 of their report:—The object of the Gold Standard Reserve, they said, "is only to provide a reserve sufficient to convert into sterling such amount of rupees as may at any moment seek export; in other words, such amount as the owners require to exchange for sterling in order to settle debts due in sterling." With this object in view, they definitely recommended that the whole of the Gold Standard Reserve should be held in London so as to make it as efficient as possible for the purpose, a portion of the Reserve then held in India being transferred to London at the earliest possible opportunity. I give these references to show that the dicta of the Commission did not envisage a situation such as that which has since arisen. Their conclusions presupposed a totally different set of conditions and cannot be appealed to in support of a plea that the measures which it has been necessary to adopt are inconsistent with the Commission's findings and would not be endorsed by them.

"50. I much regret any hardship imposed on our export trade by the increase which it has been necessary to make in the rate for Council drafts, and I am, of course, well aware that a rise in exchange would in ordinary conditions be prejudicial to that trade, like the limitations which the Secretary of State has found it necessary to impose on the volume of his Council drawings. Consequently, as I have repeatedly stated, we embark on any such action with the greatest reluctance, and simply to prevent greater evils. At the same time, while a rise in exchange tends, under ordinary conditions, to prejudice the export trade, it must be remembered that a country like India, which normally exports a considerably larger volume of commodities than she imports in order to discharge her external obligations—such as interest on her sterling debt, Home administrative charges, and outlay on stores and plant—gains by a measure which requires her debtors to pay more for the rupees in which their payments must eventually be liquidated. Or, to put the matter in another way, a rise in exchange means that a smaller amount of India's commodities, as expressed in rupees, will have to be sent abroad in order to provide for a specified amount of payments in sterling, and that she herself will have to pay less for the imports she obtains.

"51. Further, in considering the effect on India of a rise in exchange at the present time, allowance must be made for the effect of the abnormal conditions now prevailing. While an Indian exporter would doubtless, in normal circumstances, be prejudicially affected by a rise in the external value of the rupee, which would make it more difficult for him to compete with producers in other countries, this proposition does not apply when no keen competition on the part of other producing countries exists, when there is a large and an unsatisfied demand for many of India's more important products, and when, as a result of freight difficulties, exporters are able to ship practically all the goods for which tonnage can be provided. Even if it be granted that, as a result of the rise in exchange, exporters are receiving somewhat lower rupee prices than they would otherwise have secured, it is an undoubted fact that the actual rupee prices obtained are, in the case of most commodities, substantially in excess of pre-war prices and that, in spite of such restrictions as it has been necessary to impose, rupee prices within India have risen and not fallen. That this is the case is due to the great demand for India's products from abroad and to the enormous rise in prices which has taken place in almost every country in the world which consumes these products. It is indeed probably the case that but for the various restrictions which have attended the special external demands for India's products during the war, internal prices would have risen to a level higher than that at which they at present stand. Even as it is, the great increase in internal prices has become a serious hardship to the poorer classes within India, and special measures have been necessary to deal with some aspects of this problem.

"52. There is yet a further point which I would like to emphasise. India is not peculiar in being affected by exchange difficulties. Practically every country in the world at the present time is undergoing embarrassment in some form or other in connection with its foreign exchanges; and I think we are entitled to take credit for the fact that, in spite of the special difficulties with which we have had to deal, our currency system has borne the strain on it so well, and that we have succeeded in regulating sterling exchange to the public advantage in a way which has been possible in very few other countries. Thus in the case of France, the present exchange rate as between Paris and London has not only departed from the normal gold point to at least the same extent as the external rupee exchange, but it is also liable to indefinite fluctuations. In Italy and many other countries the exchanges have diverged further from normal, and are liable to even greater fluctuations. In the case of India, if exchange had been left to find its own level under the normal laws of supply and demand, the rupee exchange would long ago have reached a far higher level than it has actually done.

"I made observations of this description to the Indian Merchants' Chamber in Bombay last October, but I desire to repeat them here, through this Council, to a wider public.

"53. In this endeavour to maintain stability in our exchange rate, we have received the valuable co-operation of the Exchange Banks and others. In particular, I can record with satisfaction that exports of national importance, to which, as is well known, special priority in finance is now given by the Exchange Banks, have not, in spite of difficulties, been retarded by any breakdown in the arrangements for their financing. We may yet have to call to a still larger extent for the co-operation of merchants and others who have homeward remittances to make, with the view of applying these more largely than in the past to the financing of these essentially national exports; and to such an appeal I have no doubt that we shall find an adequate response from those engaged in the import trade.

"This co-operation being of the greatest value to us, we can, I think, reasonably require it to be given, and ask the banks and trade generally to submit in Imperial interests, and therefore for their own ultimate advantage, to a certain amount of control and inconvenience. After all, the bulk of the burden is being shouldered by Government. Apart from the £35 million which we have given outright to the Home Government in the form of cash in part liquidation of our war contribution, and in addition to our Gold Standard Reserve holdings and our ordinary Home Treasury balances, we shall by the end of the current year have accumulated in London £32 million of British Treasury Bills in the Paper Currency Reserve and £20 million in the special reserve referred to in paragraph 34, or about £52 million of floating funds which we should be very glad to have in India.* Against these accumulations in England we have already undertaken in India a liability for about £30 million of short-term debt and £30 million of Treasury Bills. This "overbought position," as it would be described in banking terminology, will be further added to during the coming year. These facts are sometimes ignored by those who chafe under what they regard as arbitrary restrictions and who urge upon us that such restrictions could safely be removed or relaxed.

Budget Estimate for 1918-19. Current Revenue and Expenditure.

"54. Assuming that next year's monsoon will be normal, the following statement compares the Revised Estimate for 1917-18 with the Budget Forecast for 1918-19.

[In millions of pounds.]

—	Revised, 1917-18.			Budget, 1918-19.
	Imperial.	Provincial.	Total.	Imperial.	Provincial.	Total.
Revenue	76·677	33·724	110·401	73·999	34·348	108·347
Expenditure	70·852	31·468	102·320	71·708	34·443	106·151
Surplus (+) or deficit (−)	+5·825	+2·256	+8·081	+2·291	−·095	+2·196

* The £67 million referred to in paragraph 35 included Gold Standard Reserve transactions.

[Sir William Meyer.] [1ST MARCH, 1918.]

Revenue and Expenditure—Imperial.

" 55. It will thus be seen that we expect to be about £2⅜ million worse off under revenue, while the expenditure is about £800,000 more than in the current year, thus giving a surplus of £2·3 million against £5·8 million now expected for 1917-18.

" 56. The reduction in Revenue is primarily due to a decrease in Salt receipts (£1·9 million), and the elimination of gain by Exchange, estimated this year at £1 million net. To take credit for the latter would be gambling on a continuance of the present rates of exchange, which we have no desire to see maintained when the circumstances that justify them pass away, and we therefore, following precedent, leave it out of account in our budgetary anticipations.

" The falling off under Salt is due to the stoppage of indents in Northern India, referred to in paragraph 11, which, in view of the state of stocks there, must continue for a considerable time.

" 57. As regards other heads, I give some remarks as to items which call for special comment.

" The following table, which is on the lines of that given in paragraph 9 for the current year, shows the total Railway results for 1916-17, and those now estimated for 1917-18, and forecasted for 1918-19 :—

[In millions of pounds.]

—	1916-17.	Revised, 1917-18.	Budget, 1918-19.
Gross receipts	41·8	45·5	47·0
Working expenses, including payments of surplus profits to Railway Companies.	20·7	21·7	24·1
Net receipts	21·1	23·8	22·9
Add—Receipts from Subsidised Companies and miscellaneous receipts in England.	0·2	0·2	0·1
Total receipts	21·3	24·0	23·0
Deduct—Interest charges and some miscellaneous expenditure.	13·8	13·9	13·8
Net profit on Railways . . .	7·5	10·1	9·2

" In forecasting gross receipts for next year, we have to bear in mind that those of 1917-18 were swelled by an extraordinarily good monsoon, and that, with continued wear and tear of rolling-stock and absence of adequate facility for renewal, a time must come at which the railways cannot carry all the passengers and tonnage that they might otherwise convey. We think, therefore, that it is not safe to estimate for an increase of more than £1½ million on the Revised Estimate for the current year. On the other hand, we have to provide for an increase of nearly £2½ million under working expenses, including special renewals in order to provide, as far as circumstances permit us, for enabling the railways to bear the strain the present circumstances are putting upon them.

" Taking minor alterations into account, we thus, as shown in the table, get to a final net profit on Railways of £9·2 million against £10·1 million now estimated for 1917-18 and £7·5 million in 1916-17—a decrease, that is, of £900,000 as compared with the current year.

" 58. Interest receipts show an increase of nearly £1½ million, with reference to the investment of £20 million in Home Treasury Bills indicated in paragraph 34, and the fact that the special Paper Currency Depreciation Fund, referred to in paragraph 13 (3), having now been made up to the total amount at present required, no further contributions thereto will be needed.

[1ST MARCH, 1918.] [Sir William Meyer.]

"59. There is a decrease of £300,000 under Miscellaneous, the principal item leading to this result being £170,000 due to profits on the wheat scheme of 1915, which figure in the accounts for the current year and will not now recur. But so far as Imperial revenues are concerned, the decrease under this latter item will be counterbalanced by an almost like decrease in payments to the provinces under Transfers between Imperial and Provincial, since most of the wheat profits were passed on to the Local Governments under this head.

"On the other hand, there is an increase here, by reason of a special recurring grant of £200,000 for the development of primary education, which we propose to make in supplement of that given this year for improving the pay and training of teachers in primary and secondary schools. We desire to give this fresh evidence of our concern for educational development, though the amount we can assign is but small by reason of the strain on our resources occasioned by the war. Apart from this too, as Your Excellency indicated in your opening speech, it is impossible to embark on large fresh commitments from Imperial funds till the future powers of local bodies, and the future relations of local, Provincial and Imperial finance, have been determined in connection with the scheme of Constitutional Reforms.

"Nearly the whole of this grant will be distributed to the provinces, and these and other adjustments will result in the net payment from Imperial revenues under Transfers between Imperial and Provincial being about the same as in the current year.

"60. (1) Under Customs, we anticipate about £410,000 less than now estimated for the current year, on the assumption that a decreased volume of trade, which will probably result from the shipping situation, will be largely countered by higher prices reflected in our ad valorem duties. It is necessarily a matter of increasing difficulty to forecast the manner in which war restrictions will affect our Customs revenue. We must, of course, expect the limitations imposed by freight scarcity and restrictions on production to continue in an accentuated form. On the other hand, the export restrictions from the United Kingdom may not impossibly be set off to an increasing extent by substitutes from other countries, e.g., we are obtaining a larger amount of provisions from America and Australia, and, still more, by the higher level of prices. On the whole, therefore, we have come to the conclusion that it will be safe to take a somewhat smaller figure than the Revised Estimate of the current year, allowing for the fact that we can expect no receipts from private imports of silver in 1918-19.

(2) As regards Income-tax and Super-tax (taken together) we estimate an increase of about £170,000 over the receipts of the current year as shown in the Revised Estimate.

(3) Posts and Telegraphs are estimated to give us £290,000 more. But this is more than set-off by an increase of £330,000 under expenditure, due to expansion of the operations of the Department, an increase in pay of establishments with reference to war conditions, and increased price of stores and stationery.

"61. Turning now to the Expenditure side, the net outlay under Military Services is estimated in the current year at £28·8 million. But various items of this are non-recurring or will recur in smaller proportion next year. In the former category figures this year's expenditure on rifles and ammunition (£1,450,000); the latter covers diminished expenditure in connection with the North-West Frontier (£370,000), purchase of Hotchkiss and Lewis guns, manufacture of ammunition, etc. (£170,000), and smaller provision for Home stores, Military Works, and Railway charges, etc. (£510,000).

"On the other hand we have to take into account:—

(a) £550,000 extra for increased pay concessions to British troops—vide paragraph 15, item (b)—for a whole year instead of for a few months only as in the current year.

(b) £200,000 for introduction of the Station Hospital system for India and improvements of hospitals.

(c) £250,000 for extension of Ordnance factories.

"The net result of these various changes is to bring the allocated 1918-19 expenditure up to £27·3 million, and to this we add a reserve of £1·7 million for charges at present unforeseen, so as to be in a position to meet additional outlay consequent on the war such as has come on us after the Budget was framed in the last two years. The total provision for net Military expenditure is thus £29 million.

[Sir William Meyer.] [1ST MARCH, 1918.]

"62. India's share of the total expenditure on the South Persia Rifles which, as stated in paragraph 16, is shown under Political, is estimated at £750,000 for next year, against £900,000 this. The decrease is mainly due to non-recurrence of the adjustment which had to be made this year in respect of charges of 1916-17, vide paragraph 16 supra. But allowing for increase in other Political expenditure in Persia, the total figures under this head are £350,000 more than in the Revised.

"63. (1) Our total charges in respect of the War debt remain at £6 million, including sinking funds of £270,000 in connection with this year's long term Indian issue (vide paragraph 81 of my speech introducing the last Financial Statement) and £470,000 in respect of the Home war debt taken over.

(2) Under Miscellaneous we get an improvement of £500,000 by reverting to the Budget figure for the current year and omitting the special increase in the Revised referred to in paragraph 17.

"64. The final result, so far as it can at present be forecasted, is, as I have already said, a revenue surplus of £2·3 million. We shall need every penny of this—and more too if it should accrue to us—to meet our ways and means difficulties, and there can be no question, while war conditions continue, of reduction of taxation. On the other hand, as our difficulties arise on the ways and means, and not on the revenue, side there is no present necessity for adding to the fresh imposts imposed during the last two years. We therefore keep our taxation on the existing level.

Revenue and Expenditure—Provincial.

"65. The Provincial revenues are taken in the Budget at £34·3 million and the expenditure at £34·4 million. An increase of revenue is anticipated everywhere except in the United Provinces. The current year's revenue in these provinces has been inflated by special receipts from irrigation, and provision has been made for normal receipts in the coming year; part of the decline is also due to the omission of the non-recurring assignment made to provincial revenues in the current year from the profits of the wheat scheme. Assignments on the latter account have been made to other provinces also, but in their case the increase of revenue from normal growth is expected to exceed the deterioration arising from the omission of the assignments next year.

"The result is, as I have said, that Provincial receipts and expenditure are nearly in equilibrium; but nevertheless the provinces can anticipate the spending of nearly £3 million more than they were able to lay out in the current year.

"The financial situation has compelled us to keep in force the instructions to Local Governments I have referred to in previous speeches to refrain from new outlay which is not immediately necessary or remunerative, and to maintain their expenditure as far as possible within the limits of their current income. I have once more to acknowledge the loyalty with which the Local Governments are carrying out this policy, and the figures I have just cited show that the restriction has not been incompatible with reasonable increase in Provincial expenditure.

Budget Estimate for 1918-19. Ways and Means.

(1) India and England together.

"66. Our ordinary capital transactions are estimated as follows:—

Outlay.			Resources.
Capital expenditure—			From balances	3·6
Railways	4·2	5·0	Net revenue surplus (Imperial and Provincial)	2·2
Irrigation	0·5		Unfunded debt, excluding cash certificates	1·2
Delhi	0·3		Special war receipts	0·2
Discharge of debt		5·9	Credit for silver purchased in 1917-18	1·0
Total		10·9	Net balance under Miscellaneous	nil
			Repayment of credits placed at the disposal of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York in 1917-18—vide paragraph 39	2·7
			Total	10·9

[1st March, 1918.] [Sir William Meyer.]

"67. (1) The Railway and Irrigation expenditure follow the figures advised by the Departments concerned, the Railway outlay being put at about £1 million more than in the current year's Revised Estimate.

(2) Discharge of debt includes £3·1 million for payment of India Bonds and Railway Debentures which will mature in the coming year, £2·7 million for the repayment of the temporary loan taken from the Bank of Bombay in the current year, and £80,000 for the instalment of the Gwalior Loan of 1887.

(3) Allowing for the small Provincial deficit exhibited in paragraph 54, the net surplus, Imperial and Provincial, is £2·2 million.

(4) The statement includes nothing from Treasury Bills, as we assume that what we can thus obtain next year—say, about £27·3 million—will merely suffice to wipe out the similar obligations incurred during the current year.

Nor do we make any allowance here for ordinary loan receipts, since, as will be seen presently, it is proposed to apply what we can raise by loan in the coming year to the further liquidation of our £100 million contribution to the Home Government.

(5) Under Miscellaneous we provide for the anticipated recovery from the Home Government of their share of the expenditure on the South Persia Rifles for the period ending 31st March 1918—vide paragraph 32 (4) (b). But against this and other miscellaneous receipts, provision has to be made for the payment of Council bills amounting to £2 million which remain unpaid at the end of the current year. The final result is a nil adjustment in respect of Miscellaneous.

Our aggregate closing balance in India and England on the 31st March 1919 is estimated at £20½ million.

(2) India.

"68. But though our position, taking India and England together, is quite satisfactory, the resources shown in paragraph 66 being the same as the liabilities, things are very different when we look at India alone. Our recoverable war expenditure for His Majesty's Government cannot be estimated at less than about £70½ million, while we have in addition to supply funds to East Africa to the extent of £2·8 million : in all therefore £73·2 million.

"We shall also have to meet £2 million in respect of Council Bills drawn by the Secretary of State in the current year but not payable by us till after its close, and £2·7 million in respect of the temporary loan obtained from the Bank of Bombay which has to be repaid in 1918-19. Our liabilities thus come to £78 million.

"69. Against this we have £22·1 million available from surplus of revenue over expenditure in India, and we anticipate getting £20 million by fresh borrowing, a measure on which I shall have more to say later. So far then, we have got £42 million, and are still £36 million to the bad, without making any allowance for fresh Council Bills.

"70. We hope to meet this deficiency thus :—

(a) By specie remittances from the Secretary of State to the extent of £13 million, including £1 million in transit at the end of the current year.

(b) By further investment, as circumstances require it, of £16 million (24 crores) against the Paper Currency Reserve—or, if account be taken of the unutilised balance of our existing powers, of £16·3 million, thus giving us the command of an equal amount of money here. I shall later on introduce a Bill giving us the necessary power in this respect.

(c) By drawing £5 million from our balances in India which, as I have already stated, are expected to stand at £16 million at the close of the current year.

(d) We also expect that we shall obtain repayment during the next year of the credits for £2·7 million which we are placing at the disposal of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York during the current year. But that sum will be required for payments of foreign money orders, as remittances by this source must be assumed to continue next year, though, we may hope, not on the same scale as this year.

[Sir William Meyer.] [1ST MARCH, 1918.]

"On these calculations and allowing for some minor adjustments, we should have a closing balance in India of about £11·1 million, which is a good deal less than the normal closing balance (£12½ million) to which we usually look.

"71. It will be observed that these calculations take no account of the Secretary of State's fresh Council drawings. We do not, of course, propose that these should be suspended—a measure which would produce very undesirable effects on Indian trade. On the contrary, we desire to meet Council drafts so far as we can, but the exposition I have given will show how difficult we shall find it to do this. All we can say at present, therefore, is that we shall endeavour to provide for Councils as far as our resources permit. We may, for example, be able to get more in the way of specie remittances than the figure mentioned above, and to the extent that acquisitions of specie will add to the proportion of metallic holdings in our Paper Currency Reserve, we may, as time goes on, be able to justify a further investment from this. Our loan transactions may give us more than it is at present safe to anticipate, and the same remark will apply, if the seasons are good, to our revenue receipts. But I have said enough, I think, to show how very uncertain is the position, and how absolutely necessary it is that we should conserve our resources as much as we possibly can.

(3) England.

"72. Leaving out of account Council drawings, in regard to which, as I have said, we can make no definite provision at present, and allowing, for some recoveries from His Majesty's Government being still outstanding on 31st March 1918, the Secretary of State's resources for next year will consist of about £75 million in the shape of recoveries from His Majesty's Government for fresh and past war expenditure, and miscellaneous adjustments of an analogous character.

Against this he will have to make the following disbursements :—

	(In millions of pounds.)
Ordinary Home charges, including capital expenditure outlay	22·3
Payment to His Majesty's Government for proceeds of our new War loan	20·0
Investment on behalf of Paper Currency Reserve	16·3
Payment for silver remittances (a)	12·0
Discharge of India bonds and Railway debentures	3·1
TOTAL	73·7

"There will thus be an increase in his closing balance, which is expected to stand at £9·3 million, as compared with £8 million with which the year opens. It is too early yet to contemplate definite utilisation of any portion of this balance by further special investment or otherwise.

Next year's borrowing.

"73. I will conclude this portion of my speech with some further remarks as regards our borrowing next year. We propose, following this year's precedent, that the regular loan receipts, and those from cash certificates, shall all go to His Majesty's Government for the prosecution of the war in further redemption of our £100 million contribution. We thus assist ourselves also, since the payment to His Majesty's Government is made by adjustment with the Secretary of State in London, while we get the primary benefit of the sums received in India.

"74. As I have already said, the War Loan of this year, including cash certificates brought us in nearly £35 million in India. Next year's loan will again have no limit of amount, and I shall rejoice if we get results approaching to those of this year. The success of the 1917 loan was largely due to the splendid efforts made by Heads of Provinces and Provincial and Local Committees, and the Government of India look with grateful confidence to a renewal of these efforts in respect of the fresh War loan of 1918. But in framing Budget estimates I must proceed cautiously, and take into account that the very fact of this year's effort having been such a large one militates against the expectation of an equal harvest next year. It has to be remembered too that we also count on raising £27 million by Treasury Bills. For the purposes of the Budget estimates therefore and our ways and means calculations, and after consultation with my expert advisers, official and non-official, I do not think it safe to put down for the present a larger amount than £20 million for next year's War Loan, including cash certificates. But I repeat that this is regarded as a minimum amount, and that no one will be better pleased than I (and I can speak with equal confidence, on behalf of Your Excellency and the Government) if this estimate should be very largely exceeded, and India's effort should once more show that she derides the cautious calculations of her financiers.

(a) See foot-note ‡ against paragraph 48. In this case the figure here given represents the Secretary of State's current purchases: that shown in paragraph 70 (a) is our estimated receipts, including amounts purchased in 1917-18 but which will only reach us next year.

"I would impress on the Council and the public that the raising of a large war loan here produces three very material advantages to India and the Empire. First.—It gives His Majesty's Government fresh money for the conduct of the war in lieu of a mere readjustment of previous war expenditure, and thus makes India's war contribution still more useful. Second.—It assists the Government of India in obtaining funds for the financing of war expenditure here to meet the needs of His Majesty's Government. Third.—India profits economically by her war contribution being raised by internal borrowing, the interest on which is disbursed in this country, instead of by adjustment which involves payment of interest on a portion of the British debt.

"The raising of a further sum of £20 million by loan in this country will bring our total contribution by fresh borrowing to more than half of the full £100 million for which we have made ourselves liable; and to the extent that we may obtain more than £20 million this proportion will be correspondingly increased. I may add that in order to eliminate as far as possible competition with our efforts in this direction, we shall shortly place restrictions on issues of capital in this country, except in so far as these are required for enterprises of national importance at the present time. I shall before long introduce the legislation necessary to give effect to this decision.

"75. Having regard to present money conditions and the fact that we are obtaining funds at present by the issue of Treasury Bills, we do not propose to start the new loan immediately and it would be premature at present to commit ourselves as to the date of issue and the form which the loan shall take. I may, however, provisionally indicate that, having regard to the relative amounts obtained this year on the long term loan and from the short term war bonds, we are at present disinclined to issue a further long term loan in 1918. I think, after consulting those who are entitled to speak with most weight on this matter, that we shall be more likely to obtain an adequate response by concentrating ourselves on short term bonds. We might, for example, put out once more the 3-year and 5-year bonds, which were so successful this year, and add a further category of bonds having a somewhat longer period. We contemplate that outstanding Treasury Bills shall be received on suitable terms in subscription to the new loan.

The cash certificates will, of course, continue on their present footing.

"76. I need only at present add a few words on the subject of premium bonds, which to some people seem a desirable method of adding to the attraction of our loans. I may say at once that I have no puritanical scruples in this matter, and that if I thought that the issue of premium bonds would bring us in any large amount of money which we should otherwise not obtain, I would do my best to get them sanctioned. I have, however, found that the general opinion of financial and commercial authorities entitled to speak with weight on this subject is that we should not obtain this result. It would primâ facie be impossible for us to issue a loan at a very small rate of interest (having regard to present market conditions) with the bulk of the inducements in prizes : that would be a gambling transaction which the Government ought not to take up. As regards the alternative of issuing a loan at a fair flat rate of interest, though somewhat below what we should otherwise have to pay, with supplementary prize inducements, the general opinion is that it would not work. Having regard to the present price of money, banks and serious investors are not likely to be satisfied with less than the rate of interest we had to pay this year on the remote chance of getting a prize ; while as regards those who like a flutter, the consensus of opinion is that they prefer speculative share investments, which involve a considerable degree of real or imaginary skill and give them the constant stimulus of following the ups and downs of the market. These views receive corroboration from the fact that the recent premium bonds issue in Ceylon was a complete failure.

"We have also the fact that the Committee which the Home Government appointed to consider the question of premium bonds advised that it was doubtful whether the additional funds thus obtainable would justify controversial legislation. That is our feeling also as regards India. The expedient would undoubtedly be resented by many on what they hold to be moral grounds, and I do not think that we should be justified in ignoring such scruples on a very problematic chance of making material sums which would not otherwise be obtainable. I cannot, therefore, advise that we should try this experiment.

Paper Currency and Gold Standard Reserves, and Exchange.

"77. The following statement gives the total and active note circulation on the 1st February of each of the last five years, the active note circulation excluding the notes held in reserve treasuries and headquarter offices of the Presidency Banks :—

[In crores of rupees.]

Year.	Total Circulation	Active Circulation.
1914	63·9	51 9
1915	60·3	45·1
1916	62·4	54·1
1917	84·4	67 9
1918	104·8	82·1

"It will be seen that the 1917 figures, which were at that time a heavy 'record' have now been far passed, thus affording further testimony to the confidence the people have in our note issues, and to the effect of the measures taken in recent years towards making our notes more easily cashable. For it is an easily understood paradox that the more you increase facilities for ready encashment of notes, the greater is the confidence in their value and the fewer the occasions on which they are actually presented for encashment. This expansion of circulation has been of material assistance to us in our ways and means difficulties by enabling increasing investment from the Paper Currency Reserve.

"78. As the Council are aware, till lately our lowest denomination of notes was Rs. 5, but we have now made the experiment of issuing still smaller notes for Re. 1 and Rs. 2½ respectively. The former were issued on the 1st December 1917 and the latter on 2nd January last, and at the outset the issues in India were confined to the three Presidency cities; while in order to enhance confidence in the notes, we have given special facilities for their encashment at local post offices. The results so far have been very satisfactory, the total issues having reached a value of R45 lakhs, and the encashments of R11 lakhs only, leaving a margin of R34 lakhs worth of these small notes actually in circulation. The success of the experiment has already warranted its extension to some of the other large cities.

"It should be understood that though the area of issue is as yet limited, the Re. 1 and Rs. 2½ notes are received anywhere in payment of Government dues, and are encashable at all currency offices and treasuries in the same way as our other universal notes.

"We have also sent about R4 lakhs worth of these notes to Mesopotamia, where the people are accustomed to minute paper currency. We are likewise, at the request of His Majesty's Government, sending about £500,000 worth to East Africa.

"79. As regards the metallic portion of our Currency Reserve, on the 31st March last we held about £8 million of gold here and about £4½ million in England, or in all £12½ million. The figures now stand at £19 million and £½ million respectively, or in all £19½ million. I shall speak presently of the main transactions that have led to this result.

[1ST MARCH, 1918.] [Sir William Meyer.]

"As regards silver, our holdings in the Paper Currency Reserve, including bullion under coinage, amounted on 31st March last to about 19 crores (or nearly £13 million). They at present stand at about 13½ crores (£9 million).

"80. The increase in our gold and silver holdings together in spite of a further investment from the Paper Currency Reserve thus amounts to about £3 million. This has of course been made possible by the increase in our currency note circulation, the total of which now stands at 105 crores (£70 million) against 86 crores (about £57 million) at the beginning of the year.

"At the beginning of the year we had invested about 56 per cent. of our holdings against total note issues. The present percentage is still about the same figure, with the advantage that nearly all our gold is now held in India ; and this enables us to contemplate the further investment indicated in paragraph 70 above.

"81. In paragraph 34 of my speech introducing the last Financial Statement I explained that, with the object of relieving the strain on silver and of reducing the premium on gold, we had started selling a portion of the raw gold held at Bombay on behalf of the Bank of England, the gold bullion thus taken over by us being paid for by sovereigns from our Reserve in London. These sales were continued between 18th January and 26th April last, during which period we disposed of over £4 million of bullion. They were then discontinued because a transfer of gold to India from Australia and New Zealand, in exchange for our London holdings of gold, made it necessary for us to reserve those holdings for that purpose. The effect of these sales upon the silver position can only be vaguely estimated. Enquiries showed, however, that most of the gold which was sold found its way up-country and must have resulted in drawing into circulation a certain amount of rupees which those who ultimately acquired the gold would not otherwise have parted with.

"82. Last April, again, in view of our then depleted stock of rupees we found it necessary to issue sovereigns in the hope of relieving the strain on our silver balances. The absorption of rupees in that month was over £4 million, and on 7th May our holding of silver in the Paper Currency Reserve amounted to about 13 crores only, which was the lowest point touched for over 10 years. What may be called the relief-issue of sovereigns, which continued till the end of August, amounted to about £5 million, the bulk being absorbed in the Punjab where they were utilised in the purchase of wheat. By that time our silver position had improved, and in accordance with our general policy of retaining our gold holdings as our second line of reserve, the necessity for further issues of gold thus disappeared. We have lately, however, had to recommence the issue of sovereigns with reference to a renewed depletion of our silver stocks.

"83. Since June last we have been acquiring private imports of gold under the Gold Import Act, the provisions of which I explained in this Council on the 26th September 1917, and thereby raised our gold holdings by about £12 million. As I have already explained (paragraph 6) most of this gold has come to us from America and Japan. The gold so acquired was passed into the Paper Currency Reserve, an equivalent amount of notes being issued to the importers from whom it was obtained.

"An analogous transaction, which has also had the effect of strengthening our gold holdings, is the arrangement recently arrived at between His Majesty's Government, Japan and ourselves under which, by the end of the current year, we shall have received £2 million of the Bank of England's gold held in Bombay. This amount is placed in the Paper Currency Reserve, and we issue against it an equivalent amount of notes to the nominees of the Japanese Government.

"84. As the Council is aware, we have, besides taking over all private imports of gold, forbidden, since July last, the import and export of silver into or from India except on Government account. In respect of imports the object is to avoid private competition with the Secretary of State's purchases, and also to preclude private imports of this metal being used to obtain Indian money for the financing of exports not of primary war importance : as regards exports to conserve the stock of silver already in the country. We have, with a like object, forbidden the melting of rupees and sovereigns.

"85. The Council is also aware that we have obtained permission from the Home Government to coin sovereigns in India, and although the establishment of a Gold Mint in Bombay for this purpose which will work as a branch of the Royal Mint in London, has been delayed owing to the necessity of satisfying conditions laid down by the Home Treasury, the construction of our Mint is now in hand, and we hope that it will be issuing sovereigns by May. Its operations will extend in the first instance to the coinage of foreign coins and refined gold, but arrangements have been made to enable it to take up the coinage of unrefined gold also. In the meantime we have got coinage done for us in Australia, in pursuance of the arrangements I explained to the Council in my speech on 5th September last introducing the Paper Currency Amendment Bill, which subsequently passed into law as Act XIX of 1917, and we are now entitled to treat as part of our Currency Reserve gold held on our account in any part of His Majesty's Dominions, or in transit therefrom.

"86. As regards silver prices, these stood at an average of nearly 37*d* per ounce in April, and had risen to an average of nearly 51*d* in September, the high watermark of 55 being reached towards the end of that month. This latter figure, which was largely due to speculation, was however not long maintained. In October the average price had fallen to 44*d* and in November to 43, at which level it has practically stood since.

"The increase in silver prices led to alteration in the price at which the Secretary of State sells his Councils. I have dealt with this matter already, and need only refer briefly here to what I said in the Legislative Council on the 24th September in answer to a question by the Hon'ble Mr. Hogg, when, under the authority of the Secretary of State, I explained the conditions by which he is guided in fixing his Council rates. These rates are being, and will continue to be, based roughly on the price at which he is able to buy silver. He cannot be expected to sell rupees at appreciably less than their actual cost, but he intends to apply this principle with considerable latitude so as to avoid changes as far as possible. Once again I must emphasise that the measures adopted to meet an abnormal increase in the price of silver, caused in their turn by the special circumstances of the war, must in no way be considered as implying the abandonment of the policy of a fixed and stable exchange; that by selling his Councils at fixed rates the Secretary of State did all he could to keep exchange stable; that he only raised those rates in August last when the bullion price of the rupee made this necessary; and that the rise in external exchange has not in any way affected the internal parity of rupees and sovereigns, which remains at the standard rate of 15 to 1.

"87. The following statement shows the holdings in the Gold Standard Reserve on the 1st April last, at the date of the last published statement, and as we expect them to stand on the 31st March.

[In thousands of pounds.]

—	Book credit in India.	Gold held in India.	Cash placed by the Secretary of State for India in Council at short notice.	Invested in London.	Total.
1st April 1917	181	103	6,001	25,406*	31,691

As estimated on 31st March 1918.	...	...	6,000	28,316†	34,316

"The increase in the total holding is due in part to the fresh rupee coinage we have had to undertake from silver purchased in the earlier months of the year; and the interest on previous investments is, as usual, added to the assets of the Fund.

"The average rate of exchange in the current year calculated on the Secretary of State's drawings, will amount to 16·55 pence per rupee against 16·15 pence in 1916-17.

* This represents the value of the securities as on the 31st March 1917.

† This represents the value as on 30th September 1917 (the date of the last valuation) of the securities then held and the cost price of securities purchased since that date.

[1ST MARCH, 1918] [Sir William Meyer.]

REMARKS ON CERTAIN SPECIAL HEADS.

A.—Military Services.

" 88. The table below shows the gross and net expenditure on military services for the coming year and the four years preceding :—

	GROSS.					Net, i.e., deducting receipts.
	Army.	Marine.	Military Works.	Special Defences.	Total.

1918-19 (Budget) .	27,790,900	960,300	1,781,500	... *	30,532,700	29,000,000

" 89. I have already indicated in paragraph 15 the more important causes contributing to the increase in the Revised Estimate for 1917-18 as compared with the Budget. These account for about £3·2 million, and other minor factors for a further increase of about £0·8 million. On the other hand, there have been some savings, the most important of which are the lapse in the Home provision for construction of vessels for the Royal Indian Marine and credit for a dredger taken over by the War Office, amounting together to £157,000 ; reduction in food charges ; and reduction in the non-effective charges in India and England. The reserve of about £700,000 included in the current year's Budget to meet unforeseen expenditure must also of course be set off against the increase in specific expenditure to which I have referred.

" 90. The receipts have risen by £175,000, which is mainly accounted for by large sales of dairy produce to overseas forces, war hospitals, etc., and by the recovery of departmental charges on stores supplied by the Indian Munitions Board.

" 91. The Budget provision for next year has been fixed at £29 million. I have already (paragraph 61) explained the need for this large provision. It includes a reserve of £1,677,000 to meet charges which we cannot yet specifically foresee, but which, as the experience of preceding war years shows, are likely to come upon us in one way or another.

" The head 'Special Defences' has been abolished with effect from 1st April 1918, and any remaining transactions will be adjusted under the head 'Military Works'

" 92. The total cash contributions from Indian Princes and others towards the cost of the war received this year amount to £428,000. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has also continued to receive considerable sums for the provision of motor ambulances and the like and the supply of comforts to the troops at the front.

" 93. The gross amount contributed from Indian revenues on account of the normal pay and charges of the military forces despatched out of India up to the end of 1917-18 may be taken at £28 million. Against this, however, must be set the cost of maintaining substituted British troops (Territorial and Garrison battalions) actually serving in India, which is borne by His Majesty's Government under the Resolution of the Houses of Parliament referred to in paragraph 39 of my last year's speech. Taking this into account, our total net contribution towards the cost of the war

* Closed as a separate sub-head—see paragraph 91.

[Sir William Meyer.] [1ST MARCH, 1918.]

in respect of the Expeditionary Forces is about £15¾ million to the end of the current year, to which another £4¾ million should be added in respect of 1918-19. And outside these adjustments, and taking our normal net military expenditure, on the basis of the 1913-14 figures (£19·9 million), at £20 million, we have had to incur an additional outlay, due almost entirely to the war, amounting to £16¼ million up to the end of the current year, and £25½ million including the estimated expenditure for 1918-19.

B.—Expenditure from special grants for education, sanitation, etc., and financial position of Local Governments.

"94. I give below a table similar to that in paragraph 111 of my speech last year, showing special grants made for these purposes from 1911-12 onwards and the extent to which they have been utilised.

(In thousands of pounds.)

—	Total grants given (1911-12 to 1918-19).		Total expenditure (1911-12 to 1918-19).	Balance expected to be available on 1st April 1919.

"In view of war conditions, we have again had to ask Local Governments to restrict drawings on their balances, which include the unspent remainder of these special grants. But any outlay thus postponed is merely deferred till normal times return.

"95. I have already reviewed in bulk the estimated Provincial receipts and expenditure for the current and the coming years. The total Provincial balances stood at £9·9 million on 1st April 1917 and are expected to amount to £12·1 million on 31st March 1919, the increase being due to excess of current revenue over expenditure in the present year. It will thus be seen that the provinces will have large scope for special beneficent expenditure when the war conditions which necessitate the conservation of their balances have passed away.

"Moreover, we have under consideration, for application after the war is over and in connection with the scheme of Constitutional Reforms, a material advance in the direction of separating Imperial and Provincial finance, which will give the provinces larger and more independent resources, with further powers of supplementing these by taxation when such may be found necessary.

"96. As I explained in connection with the Budget for the current year, we have taken steps to give the provinces more powers in the matter of specific items of expenditure, and we have under consideration, in connection with the scheme I have mentioned, the question of adding to these powers still further.

* Non-recurring figures only are given as the recurring grants are treated as having been fully worked up to, any savings obtained from those grants in particular years being added at the foot of the statement.

(a) Decrease as compared with last year's figures due to the Revised Estimate figure for the current year being less than the Budget forecast.

C.—Railways (Capital Outlay).

"97. The following statement gives the figures of Railway capital expenditure, on State-owned lines included within the Railway programme, for the coming year and the four years preceding :—

——	1914-15.	1915-16.	1916-17.	1917-18, Revised.	1918-19, Budget.
	£	£	£	£	£
Open Lines including rolling stock	10,534,300	3,864,200	1,236,500	2,364,300	3,667,900
Lines under construction —
(a) Started in previous years	898,800	627,100	245,700	27,700	534,400
(b) Started in current year	...	...	496,500	757,700	...
Total	11,433,100	4,491,300	1,978,700	3,149,700	4,202,300

"98. The Revised Estimate for 1916-17 provided for a total outlay of about £1⅜ million as against a Budget allotment of £3 million. The actuals however come to nearly £2 million, as it was found possible, in the closing weeks of the year, to lay out more money than had previously been thought feasible.

"In the current year we provided £3·6 million, but are not able to work fully up to this owing to the extreme difficulty of obtaining materials from England. Next year we provide £4·2 million, which represents the limit of what can be expended having regard to the present special conditions.

"99. As was the case this year, it has not been possible to provide for the construction of any new lines, and our construction expenditure is almost entirely restricted to the completion of certain projects of military importance which were commenced during the current year.

"We propose to spend £3⅔ million on open line capital works and equipment. A large proportion of this expenditure will be devoted to rolling stock, and the remainder to works of open line improvement necessitated by a heavy and increasing traffic.

"100. The difficulties attendant on the raising of capital in the open market which I referred to last year still continue, with the result that new construction by Branch Line companies has now been altogether suspended, and work on certain projects already sanctioned, such as the Tinnevelly-Tiruchendur and Trichinopoly-Pudukottai lines, has had to be deferred.

"The policy of proceeding as far as possible, i.e., up to a stage short of actual flotation, with negotiations for the promotion of Branch Line companies after the war is being continued, and steps have also been taken to carry out surveys of new lines with a view to such projects being undertaken as soon as possible after the return of normal conditions.

"101. The following figures show the capital outlay on all State lines up to the end of each year from 1914-15, and the net return obtained after deducting working expenses and interest charges :—

[Capital and profit figures in thousands of pounds.]

——	1914-15.	1915-16.	1916-17.	1917-18, Revised.	1918-19, Budget.
Capital at charge at end of each year	361,560	364,858	365,483	367,310	370,114
Working profit from railways excluding interest charges.	15,614	17,797	21,148	23,959	22,924
Percentage of same to capital outlay	4·32	4·88	5·79	6·52	6·19
Final working profit after meeting interest charges.	2,158	4,075	7,482	10,175	9,202
Percentage of same to capital outlay	·60	1·12	2·05	2·77	2·49

[Sir William Meyer.] [1st MARCH, 1918.]

"102. The return on railway capital (excluding interest charges) was estimated in the current year's Budget at 5·47 per cent. We now estimate it at 6·52 in consequence of the large increase in net railway earnings which I have already dealt with in my review of the Revised Estimate. For next year we put it at 6·19 consequent on the smaller estimate of net earnings arrived at in the Budget.

"The charges for interest in the current and ensuing years work out to 3·75 and 3·70 per cent. respectively on the capital outlay, so that the final net profit on railways is about 2¾ and 2½ per cent, respectively. These interest charges include certain annuity and sinking fund payments which really go to the discharge of debt.

D.—Irrigation (Capital outlay).

"103. The financial position of our great irrigation undertakings may be gathered from the following table which brings up to date the information given in connection with previous Financial Statements. The figures are in thousands of pounds:—

Particulars	1914-15.	1915-16.	1916-17.	1917-18 (Revised).	1918-19 (Budget).

Net loss	732	602	464	565	677

"104. The total length of main and branch canals and distributaries which had been constructed on irrigation works of all classes up to the end of the year 1916-17 amounted to 65,000 miles, and it is expected that this will have been increased by nearly 600 miles by the close of the present financial year. These channels command an area of about 52 million acres of culturable land, of which more than half was irrigated in 1916-17. It is estimated that some 25 million acres, or about a million acres less than last year, will be irrigated in the current year, the decrease being due to the copious monsoon, which diminished the demands on artificial irrigation.

"105. In addition to the works actually in operation, 34 major works are either under construction, awaiting sanction or being examined by the professional advisers of Government. These are designed to command an additional culturable area of approximately 27 million acres, of which it is estimated that 11¼ millions will be irrigated annually, the capital cost involved being about £33 million.

[1ST MARCH, 1918.] [Sir William Meyer.]

"106. Owing to the present financial stringency no new irrigation works of any magnitude were sanctioned during the current year. The investigation of several large projects was, however, continued, the most important being those relating to the Sukkur barrage on the Indus (Sind), the Sind Sagar Doab Canal (Punjab) and the Bhakra dam on the Sutlej (Punjab).

"107. The Triple Canal project in the Punjab was declared complete on the 31st March 1917. It is anticipated that there will be a saving on the revised estimate of this work, amounting to about £690,000, and at the beginning of 1917 over a million acres had already been irrigated from these canals.

"108. Development of important protective works in the Bombay Deccan continues to be hampered by difficulties in connection with the war, but good progress has been made on the Bhandardarra and Bhatgarh dams, as also on the Nira Right Bank canal.

"Work on the Upper Swat canal in the North-West Frontier Province is practically complete, and the construction estimate will be closed on the 31st March 1918. The Tandula canal in the Central Provinces is also rapidly approaching completion.

"109. In my speech of last year I referred to a project for the utilization of a portion of the water of the Sarda river in the United Provinces. The Local Government has recently sent up a comprehensive scheme for the utilization of the whole supply of the river in extensions of irrigation in Rohilkhand and Oudh. The estimated direct cost of the necessary works is over £5 million, and it is anticipated that the project would add more than 2 million acres to the irrigated area of the province.

E.—Delhi Expenditure (Capital outlay).

"110. The expenditure during the current year under Head 51 is expected to amount to about £250,000 (Rs. 37 lakhs) as compared with a budget provision of £267,000 (Rs. 40 lakhs). The reduction is due to credits received for sale or transfer of materials to heads other than 51.

"During the current year the aim has been to confine operations to such work on the central buildings and other features of the New City as can be carried out without the use of materials the price of which has been seriously affected by the war. A moderate rate of progress has been maintained in the case of Government House, the Secretariat buildings, the Viceroy's Court, and the great Place. Work has been put in hand on the construction of the Central Vista and on the erection of residential quarters for Indian clerks. A start has also been made on such portions of the storm water drainage scheme as do not involve the use of imported material. The larger schemes of sanitation, water supply, electric lighting and irrigation, which require the use of imported materials, have been left untouched. Considerable addition has been made to the stock of materials and tree planting operations on the roads have been pushed on.

"It is expected that £267,000 (Rs. 40 lakhs) will be needed to carry on work on similar lines in 1918-19.

Retrospect and Conclusion.

"111. This is the last Financial Statement which I shall have the honour to present to the Council. My tenure of office as Finance Member is drawing to its end, and it has been a particularly difficult and arduous one. When I took up my post I hoped that I might share the good fortune which my distinguished predecessor enjoyed in such ample measure. But dis aliter visum: in my first year I was beset with troubles arising out of the bank failures in 1913 in Northern India and an unsatisfactory monsoon; soon after that the war came upon us; and since then I have had to face a constant succession of difficult and abnormal circumstances.

"I propose now to give a short summary of the most important events which have marked my term of office, for I think it is useful to have a retrospect of this sort, as showing us more clearly how we stand, not merely from year to year but taking a backward glance over the past.

"112. I must ask the indulgence of the Council if, in this presentation of some of the events of the years during which I have had the honour of administering the finances of India, I permit myself to touch a personal note. When in July 1913 I took up the post which I shall ere long relinquish, I envisaged various problems the solution of which I hoped to be able to advance during my tenure of office. Like almost all financial problems they were closely inter-related, and progress in any one direction was bound to react on the general situation as a whole and facilitate the solution of the remainder.

"The first of these questions arose out of the periodical money stringency which is a characteristic of the busy trade months of the year. The problem is a complex one, and not capable of solution by the application of any single method. But it can be materially influenced by the more liberal release of Government funds at the busy time of the year so that these may then be available for trade. In presenting my first Budget, after a few months' tenure of office, I was able to inform the Council that we had secured the assent of the Secretary of State to a policy of making loans from our balances to the Presidency Banks during the busy seasons. As I then explained, it can only be through the agency of these Central banking institutions that Government can hope to secure an effective and wise application of such resources as they can make available at times of stringency. By continued action in this direction, as also by the creation and maintenance of more intimate relations with these leading institutions, it was my hope that it might be possible to help in the further development of the trade and commerce of the country.

"A second set of questions was connected with our currency note system. The expansion of our note circulation, satisfactory as it was, was still impeded by certain restrictions. Apart from any other consideration, it was in any case imperative in a country like India, where the cheque is not likely for many years to attain any large vogue up-country, to encourage the use of the currency note as a medium of exchange.

"Thirdly, as I indicated in connection with my first Budget, I recognised that if, as I hoped, my tenure of office as Finance Member was to see a vigorous programme of capital expenditure on Railways and Irrigation, a courageous policy of borrowing in India was indispensable. It was clear that the traditional method of relying solely on a handful of wealthy investors or on the established banking institutions would no longer suffice; that it must give way to a policy which would establish a direct nexus between the State and the small investor; and that the attraction to fructifying purposes of the small savings of small people must form one of the objects to which our efforts should be bent.

"113. Let me now endeavour to indicate briefly how far these hopes have been realised, and how far the events of the last three and a half years of war have assisted or impeded their realisation, or have compelled their modification or postponement.

"I am able to record with satisfaction the measure of success which has attended my efforts to demonstrate the readiness of Government to secure, by a more liberal utilisation of its funds, relief to commercial and financial interests in times of stringency. It has been my consistent policy to give proof of this desire by making temporary loans (as has been done on occasion) to the Presidency Banks; by leaving in deposit with them, till actually required by us, the proceeds of our public loans; by avoiding as much as possible the lock-up of funds in our reserve treasuries; and by the maintenance with the Presidency Banks of balances at all times considerably, and at certain periods far, in excess of the standards previously observed. It is largely owing to action of this character that it has been possible to secure the money market against the strain to which our war finance must otherwise have exposed it, and in particular to raise the large sums we have recently obtained by way of loan without materially inconveniencing the market. A striking feature of our financial operations in the last year has been the way in which money has tended to return to the larger trade centres, in other words the extent to which there has been an increase in the supplies of floating capital in these centres. It would be premature to attempt to analyse the causes of this change in Indian money market conditions, but I think it can reasonably be hoped that this change has come to stay, and that one result will be that it will tend to eliminate to some extent the excessive seasonal stringency which has been in the past a characteristic of our money market during certain months of the year.

"114. It also justifies the hope that greater dependence may hereafter be placed on the Indian money market for the raising of the funds necessary for the development of our railway and irrigation works, and it will likewise pave the way for the solution of the somewhat kindred question of the greater development of banking throughout the country. Let me here gratefully record my acknowledgment of the response which the Presidency Banks have extended to my desire to see the establishment of cordial and close relations between Government and them as representatives of the financial interests of the country. I have always looked on their Secretaries as non-official comrades, to be freely consulted in respect of loans and other matters affecting the money market, and I have met with ready and very valuable response in such cases.

"115. An even greater degree of success than I dared hope has attended our efforts to secure the expansion of our currency note system. In the early months of the war, as the Council will recollect, the general dislocation of trade and finance brought about a temporary, though successfully met, run on our notes, while the restoration of confidence which followed on free and unrestricted payments in silver, pointed to the general soundness of our system and to the possibility of its further expansion by increases in the facilities for encashment. Accordingly, as I explained in my speech introducing the Financial Statement for 1916-17 (paragraphs 108-109), we proceeded with measures to secure the widest facilities for the exchange of silver against notes, not merely, as the law requires, at special currency centres, but at all district treasuries; while we also made arrangements with the Presidency Banks for the issue and prompt encashment of notes at a number of their branches.

"The results of these measures have been most gratifying, not only because they have made our currency notes more popular, but because they have enabled us to rely with greater boldness on this portion of our financial system to meet the added and continually growing demands on Government funds for the carrying on of the war and of our trade. Taking the figures as on 1st February, our gross circulation has increased, in round figures, from £42½ million in 1914 to £70 million in 1918; while the active circulation i.e., that portion of the note circulation which is held outside the reserve treasuries and the head offices of the Presidency banks, has grown between the same dates from £34½ million to £54¾ million.

"We have now initiated the experiment of issuing small notes for Rs. 2½ and Re. 1 which, as I have already said, promise to prove a material success. The popularity of these notes will, I trust, increase as time goes on.

"116. The metallic portion of our Paper Currency Reserve represented on the 1st February nearly 53 per cent. of the active circulation, which compares with a 96 per cent. proportion on the same date in 1914. This evidences the fact that we have, under the stress of war finance, travelled far beyond the recommendations of the Chamberlain Commission in regard to the composition of the Reserve. The total invested portion now stands at £ 41 million as compared with £9·3 million in 1914, and we contemplate, as I have already explained, a further increase to £57 million. With the return of normal conditions, the permanent composition of the Reserve will need to be considered with reference to the recommendations of the Commission; for the investments in British Government Treasury Bills made in recent times are only as a temporary war measure. Meanwhile, as regards the pre-war holding of consols in the Paper Currency Reserve, we have provided by the establishment of a depreciation fund against loss in present value as compared with their purchase price

"117. Equally gratifying are the results which have attended our efforts in relying on the Indian market for our capital borrowings. In 1913-14, allowing for repayment of maturing obligations and including the borrowing transactions of railway companies managing State owned lines, we raised in all £4·7 million, of which £2·8 million were borrowed in England. In the current year, as in 1916-17, we have kept completely out of the London market. Indeed, we have gone further. We have this year discharged £2 million of previous sterling debt, while the sum total of our net Indian borrowings has reached what would have been in normal times a great figure for any country, and is a gigantic one for us, viz., £65 million. I readily recognise that the borrowings of the current year have been abnormal, and specially stimulated by the patriotic consideration that—except as regards Treasury Bills, which are a new feature in Indian finance—the proceeds were to be handed over to His Majesty's Government for war purposes. It is also the case that the large and constant war disbursements by Government during the last two years have facilitated our borrowing operations. But even making allowances for these special features, there is a most striking contrast between the borrowings of 1917-18 and those of 1913-14. And if we take the figures for a wider period—for the four years ending 1913-14 as compared with those for the four years ending 1917-18—and omit from the latter our short-term Treasury Bills, the contrast is still very marked. In the first period our net borrowings were £4·8 million in England and £5·9 million in India—in all £10·7 million. The second period gives a total of £49 million, of which all but £3 million have been raised in India.

"Next year again, as I have already informed the Council, we hope to draw on the Indian loan market to the extent of at least £47 million in respect of our war borrowing and fresh Treasury Bills, the latter representing the discharge value of the bills outstanding at end of 1917-18.

"118. We have further opened up new borrowing sources, and I refer here specially to the postal sections of the last three loans and to the cash certificates. The former method of utilising the Post Office to get into touch with the small investor was introduced for the first time in 1915-16 when it gave us £½ million; while in 1916-17 it yielded a little less. But this year the postal section of the War Loan produced nearly £3 million, a larger sum than we raised by ordinary methods in any year between 1907-08 and 1913-14; while the cash certificates will have given us in this first year of their issue about £6½ million (gross), a result exceeding those of any of our public loans before the present year. In all, in the three years since we started borrowing through the Post Office, we have been able, through this innovation, to attract funds to the extent of over £10 million, the bulk of which is new money which would not otherwise have found its way into the Government loan chest and has to a considerable extent been drawn from hoards and current savings. I should like in this connection to express to Sir William Maxwell and his Post Office staff my warm appreciation of the zeal and success with which they have co-operated with the Finance Department in the working of these new schemes.

"119. Some portion of the funds thus obtained no doubt represents money which has been deflected from the ordinary postal savings bank deposits, and in so far as this cause accounts for the decrease in these latter deposits as compared with the pre-war figures, there is no need to regret diversion to a more permanent form of investment. Post Office deposits, it will be remembered, suffered considerably from the dislocation caused by the outbreak of the war, and though the ground lost has not yet been fully recovered, the present figure (£ 10·4 million) is already somewhat in excess of the amount at the close of 1914-15. This result has been facilitated by an increase in the permissible limit of individual depositors' holdings which was introduced in the first year of my tenure of my office.

"120. In reviewing the events of the last four years, I have unfortunately to record a decrease in the provision for capital expenditure. In 1913-14 this provision was £14 million: in the year which is coming to a close we expect to spend less than a third of that amount, namely, £3·9 million. Irrigation capital outlay has dropped from £1·3 million to £½ million, owing to the completion of large projects, such as the Triple Canal scheme in the Punjab, and to the fact that further projects involving heavy outlay are not yet ready for execution. Under Railways the provision for capital outlay has fallen from £12·3 million in 1913-14, the highest figure yet touched, to £3·1 million in the current year and £4·2 million in the Budget for 1918-19. This is, of course, a consequence of the great struggle in which the Empire is now engaged. The war imposes on us the necessity for conservation of our resources, and it also precludes us, even if we had the funds, from obtaining the material we should require for a large railway programme. I have always regarded these necessities with profound regret. In connection with the Budget for 1914-15 I explained the efforts we had then made to keep the railway programme up to a standard of £12 million, and I had hoped that if times had remained peaceful and prosperous we should be able during my tenure of office to go beyond that figure; but here again Fate has willed otherwise. One of the main problems which will face my successor when peace returns will be consideration of the way to find money for making up the necessary lee-way under railways, more especially in view of the strain to which our present equipment has been exposed by the heavy traffic demands, and the impossibilities of regular and thorough renewal of lines and rolling stock. So far as it has been in my power I have endeavoured to assist in the solution of this problem. The special investment of £20 million in Home Treasury Bills, to which I have referred in paragraph 34, has been made largely with a view to this contingency, so that it may provide a means of meeting the liabilities which will in one way or another come upon us after the war is over.

"121. I will now make a few remarks on the various financial problems which have beset us during the last 3½ years. Briefly, the history of our war finance may be divided into two periods. The first period was marked, in India as elsewhere, by a general dislocation of trade and finance. We experienced a serious run on our savings bank deposits, and some panic encashment of our currency notes. There was a considerable demand for the remittance of money to London, and sterling drafts on London to the extent of £8¾ million had to be sold between August 1914 aud January 1915 to maintain the exchange value of the rupee. This temporary want of confidence soon passed away, though it left as a legacy £14 million of temporary debt which we had to raise to meet our current requirements, viz., £7 million from the Gold Standard Reserve, and £7 million raised by the Secretary of State in India Bills in lieu of a permanent loan of £4½ million which he had contemplated when the Budget for 1914-15 was framed. But it was not until the autumn of 1915, that is to say when rather more than a year had elapsed since the outbreak of the war, that the tide set in which was to bring with it entirely different, and by reason of their novelty peculiarly difficult, problems.

"122. The first period, then, was one calling for the consolidation and conservation of our resources. With a serious decline in the values of and demand for our leading exports, with prices of foodstuffs at an abnormally high level, with trade in a state of general depression, and with public confidence only lately recovered from the first shock of the war, prudence clearly dictated postponement of additional taxation in spite of a considerable temporary deficit. Meanwhile we did what we could in the form of indirect assistance to the mother country. During 1915-16 we reduced our net Home borrowings for capital expenditure from an estimated sum of £5½ million to about £2 million, and we also paid off £3 million of our borrowings from the Gold Standard Reserve. The object which we set before ourselves during the first period of our war finance was to abstain as far as possible from drawing on the resources of the London market, and to make provision, by the curtailment of expenditure in this country, to meet possible military contingencies.

"123. By the autumn of 1915, the effects of the dislocation which set in on the outbreak of the war had passed away. A considerable demand made itself felt, mainly as a result of war conditions, for the products of this country, and the export trade, which had been seriously curtailed, began to show a marked and growing revival. The circumstances attending this restoration of active trade conditions rendered possible not only a continuance of the policy of abstaining from borrowing in London, but also the imposition of additional taxation in India Accordingly we proceeded to strengthen our position by a programme of taxation, introduced in the Budget of 1916-17, which included the revision of our import tariff, save as regards the important item of piecegoods; the imposition of new duties on the exports of jute and tea; a small addition to the salt tax; and the enhancement and graduation of the income tax. And as a logical sequence of the last mentioned measure, the Council has now before it a Bill for the material improvement of our Income Tax machinery. We abstained from any fresh borrowing in England and paid off the £7 million of India Bills referred to above (paragraph 121) as well as some India Bonds which fell due for redemption in the ordinary course. We also cleared off the £ 4 million which we still owed to the Gold Standard Reserve.

"124. We had now cleared the decks for further action, and in 1917-18 we felt able to take the step, which we had always hoped we might be in a position to take, of making a direct pecuniary contribution by India towards the prosecution of the war. As I have said, we had now discharged the temporary debt liabilities which we had been compelled to undertake by the dislocation of our finances caused by the war The additional taxation imposed in the previous year had materially added to the strength of our finances, while the insistent demand for exports from this country made it clear that we need not anticipate the prejudicial effect on exchange which would otherwise have been caused by borrowing a large amount in this country for the purpose of remittances to London. We were thus able, with general approval, to offer a special capital contribution of £100 million to His Majesty's Government towards the expenses of the war, and to meet the recurring charges which this offer entailed by the imposition of additional taxation estimated to produce at the outset £3½ million, the balance being provided by the surplus revenue which was accruing to us through the taxation of 1916-17. The new taxation took the form of :—

(a) A super-tax on incomes.

(b) An increase in the export tax on jute.

(c) A small surcharge on railway goods traffic.

(d) Raising of the import duty on cotton piecegoods to the general tariff rate, while maintaining at the lower previous level the excise duty on local cotton manufactures.

"This last measure had the effect of removing, at any rate in large part, a grievance which had been felt for many years in India.

"125. These new sources of revenue account in considerable measure for the fact that our Imperial revenue receipts in the current year are about £22 million more than in 1913-14. Of this increase about £9½ million is due to the additional taxation of the last two years, and of the remaining £12½ million about two-fifths is accounted for by increase in net profits on Railways, which have grown from about £4¾ million in 1913-14 to £10 million in 1917-18. Concomitantly with this increase in our revenue, we have, of course, to record an increase in Imperial expenditure, which is now £19 million higher than the figure for 1913-14. £9 million of this accrues under Military charges and is almost entirely due to the war, and £6 million represents the interest and sinking fund charges in respect of our war contribution of £100 million to His Majesty's Government. There is also an increase of over £1 million under Political charges, due to the war, including special expenditure in Persia and the cost of militia employed on the North-West frontier. Put in other words, a growth of £16 million in what may be called war charges has been met to the extent of £9½ million by taxation, while the balance has been found from other expansion of revenue.

"126. This brief review of our war finance would be incomplete without reference to the magnitude and difficulty of our ways and means operations in the last two years. I have, however, dealt at some length with this matter in an earlier portion of my speech, and I need only now cite certain salient figures which will show how heavy this burden has been. War expenditure for His Majesty's Government and analogous items have involved us in a net outlay in India of £128 million during the last 3½ years. At the same time, we have had to meet heavy Council drawings representing the demand of trade for fresh funds in this country. These increased from £20 million in 1915-16 to £33 million in 1916-17, and will this year amount to about £35 million.

"Repayment in respect of these transactions has been in England, and to find the requisite funds for our disbursements here has been a matter of great and growing difficulty and anxiety. A large portion of the sums reimbursed to us in London by His Majesty's Government on account of war outlay has been re-lent to them for war purposes by investment in their Treasury Bills. As I stated in an earlier part of my speech, these investments, which are of course quite apart from our gift of £100 million, will amount to £67 million at the end of the current year, while the further investment from our Paper Currency Reserve contemplated next year will add £16 million more.

"127. I have already described the present composition of the Paper Currency Reserve, and need only add now that our Gold Standard Reserve at present stands at £34 million against £25½ million in 1913-14. This increase is, of course, mainly due to the coinage of silver in the last few years. Every effort has been made to obtain as ample supplies of silver for India as were available, and our recognition of the probable requirements in this respect was made at a date considerably earlier than is generally known. In all, we have in the last four years coined £33 million worth of fresh rupees, which is double the amount coined in the similar period ending with 1913-14. That none of this coinage has been redundant is shown by the prompt way in which it has been absorbed.

"128. It will be seen from these figures and remarks how much ground we have traversed during the last few years; and what strikes one first and last is the way in which the war has brought out the financial strength of India. No one could have imagined, for example, three years ago that we should be able, with a moderate increase of taxation, to offer His Majesty's Government £100 million as a special war contribution over and above the additional charges which the war has entailed on our own military budgets; that we could borrow in India anything like as much as we have done, raising, for example, more than one-third of the £100 million war contribution by direct loan in this country in a single year; or again, that we should have found it possible to meet, as we have done, the enormous demands for war supplies to His Majesty's Government and the immediate outlay they have involved. Generally favourable monsoons (taking the period as a whole and India as a whole) have assisted in bringing about this result. Our trade conditions, again, have been wonderfully prosperous, considering all the adverse circumstances which had to be faced, and have indeed led to the paradoxical result that the pecuniary resources of the Government of India have had to be strained to the utmost to meet the demands on us necessitated by the Secretary of State's Council drawings for the assistance of trade, coming as these did on the top of large war expenditure on behalf of the Home Government repaid in London.

"129. My present speech and previous utterances of mine have given the Council some idea of the difficulties and anxieties which the war has brought about in the realm of Indian finance and the special expedients which had to be resorted to in order to meet a succession of most difficult and constantly changing situations, based on circumstances for which there was no precedent in the period of pre-bellum finance. I say some idea advisedly, because transactions which can be very briefly described in our annual Budget chronicles or in Press communiqués have often been the fruit of long and detailed labour and thought. For example, as regards the action taken in respect of the amount of the Secretary of State's weekly Council drawings and rates of exchange, communications exchanged at various times between us and the India Office would fill a respectable little book. I may say without the least exaggeration that since the war began I have never been free from acute anxieties in regard to one or more important matters with which the Finance Department is directly or indirectly concerned, and decisions have often had to be taken at very short notice. Looking back with present knowledge on this crowded past, I do not, of course, claim that everything that has been done was done in the best possible way.

> 'That man was vain, and false as vain,
> Who said, were he ordained to run
> His whole career of life again,
> He would do all that he had done.'

"And this applies equally to the short official life of the holder of a high office such as mine, especially in the circumstances of this kaleidoscopic war time when, in the financial sphere as well as in the military, the events of one year mock at the fears or hopes of the year before. But I have done my best to serve India in these troublous times: and I think I can claim that her interests have not suffered at my hands; that the difficulties which beset us have been adequately met; that our financial structure has well withstood the storms which have beaten upon it; and that efforts have been successfully made to strengthen its walls and foundations.

"130. I should like to add that such credit as may be accorded to me in respect of the policy and actions of the last few years must be shared by my able lieutenants in the Finance Department. I owe a great deal, as I have always acknowledged, to their loyal and efficient co-operation, and they, in their turn, have been most ably seconded by those who work under them. I am indeed proud of the Department I am shortly to quit and in which I have myself served in a subordinate as well as in a directing capacity.

[Sir William Meyer.] [1ST MARCH, 1918.]

"I must also acknowledge with grateful thanks the constant help and support I have received from Your Excellency and Lord Hardinge, and from my colleagues, past and present, on the Executive Council. For, though the fact seems to be rather ignored in some quarters, while the Finance Member has to propose action in respect of important questions of financial policy, the final decision, on this side, rests with the collective Government.

"Lastly, I have to acknowledge with gratitude the support I have received from my non-official friends in the Legislative Council. Some of them have every now and then differed from me in regard to particular matters, but they have given me most welcome and helpful support in respect of financial policy as a whole, recognising that I love India and that her interests have ever been foremost in my thoughts."

THE INDIAN PAPER CURRENCY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

1-8 A.M. The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—"MY Lord, in introducing the Financial Statement, I have explained the circumstances which have necessitated the Bill which I now move for leave to introduce; and I would invite special reference to paragraphs 38—40, 45—46 and 68—71 of my speech where I have explained the measures required in order to enable us to meet the war expenditure which we have to incur on behalf of His Majesty's Government this year and next, and the Secretary of State's Council drafts for this year. Also to paragraphs 79 and 80 dealing with our metallic holdings in the Paper Currency Reserve. So I need only add some supplementary remarks now.

"At the commencement of the war our investment power against the Paper Currency Reserve amounted only to 14 crores of rupees, namely, 10 crores in India and 4 crores in sterling securities. The Chamberlain Commission recognised that this was an unnecessarily low proportion of the Reserve and made proposals for an increase of investment which have had to stand over for consideration, as permanent measures, till after the close of the war. In the meantime, however, the special circumstances of the war have compelled us from time to time to special temporary legislation. We began (Act V of 1915, as modified by Act IX of 1916 and subsequently embodied in the consolidating Act XI of 1917) by increasing the invested limit to 20 crores, the additional 6 crores being investible either in India or in England; but, as a matter of fact, the additional investment has been made in London in British Treasury Bills. To this 20 crores we have had from time to time to add further investments, and by our last Act, No. XIX of 1917 which superseded the Ordinance of the previous April, this additional amount, which must be held in British Treasury Bills, is fixed at 42 crores of rupees.

"It is now proposed, in order to meet our anticipated needs next year, to take powers to increase the permissible specific investment against British Treasury Bills by 24 crores (£16 million), our total powers of investment being thus raised to a total of 86 crores. The present Bill, however, only mentions 660 million rupees (66 crores) by specific amendment of section 2 of Act XIX of 1917, because, as I have just stated, the other Rs. 20 crores are provided for by previous enactments. Of the total, 86 crores, 14 crores represents our permanent pre-war investment; the rest is and will be a temporary investment in that the Acts authorising it are temporary measures which will lapse six months after the war, the present Bill being of the same character. When the war is over, we shall have to consider, with reference to the recommendations of the Chamberlain Commission, what our permanent methods in respect of the Currency Reserve shall be.

"Meanwhile, as I have explained on previous occasions, we cannot, while the war lasts, embarrass the Home Government by meeting our drafts on the Paper Currency Reserve here by what would be the normal expedient in peace time, the acquisition of an equivalent amount of gold in London, since this would cause the earmarking of a large stock of gold which it is very important for Imperial purposes that the Bank of England should continue to hold in a fluid shape. We, therefore, adopt the next best course, that is, investment in short-term Home Treasury Bills which can be readily realised if circumstances should require this.

"The increase in the investment is, as I have explained in my speech introducing the Financial Statement, justified by the great growth which has taken place in our note circulation, and also by the additions which we have been able to make to our holdings of gold in India in the last 12 months. The figures in respect of the active circulation of our notes (i.e., excluding the notes held by the Presidency Banks at their head offices or in the Government Reserve treasuries) show an increase from about 52 crores on the 1st February 1914 to 82 crores on the same date in the current year.

"It is not, however, our intention to take full advantage at once of the additional powers now asked for, but only to make investments gradually from time to time to the extent to which these prove to be necessary. But we have thought it better to apply to Council now for the powers which, so far as we can foresee, we are likely to require during the next 12 months, instead of taking these powers by instalments only when we actually want them, as in that case the Council might not be sitting at the requisite time, and it would consequently be necessary to proceed by an Ordinance in the first instance.

"I now move for leave to introduce the Bill."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"I now introduce the Bill. It is a very little one. The first clause gives it a name, and the second clause amends one section of the Indian Paper Currency (Amendment) Act of 1917 in the way I have already indicated.

"I move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English."

The motion was put and agreed to.

His Excellency the President :—"Before I adjourn Council I wish to call the attention of Members to the fact that under our new rules the Financial Statement, which has just been presented to Hon'ble Members, will come up for formal discussion on the 8th of March. On that date the discussion will be confined to observations on the Statement as a whole or any question of principle involved. Under our new system, it will be necessary for me to keep Hon'ble Members within the scope of our Rules, and I trust Hon'ble Members will, in preparing the speeches to be delivered on the 8th, bear this in mind and so avoid the unpleasant necessity of my having to call them to order. The very extended field over which Sir William Meyer has travelled, will, I think, afford Hon'ble Members abundant material for their speeches and the fullest scope for the expression of their views. I now adjourn Council to Tuesday, the 5th March, at 11 A.M."

The Council then adjourned to Tuesday, the 5th March, 1918.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for week ending Saturday, 2nd March 1918.

Burma.—The week was practically rainless. Threshing and winnowing of winter rice have practically been completed in Upper Burma. Cultivation of spring crops and harvesting of peas, beans and other dry crops is proceeding. Standing crops are generally good. Cattle are generally healthy. The price of unhusked rice in Rangoon has risen slightly but is below normal. The market for white rice is quiet at Rupees 230 for specials.

Assam.—The weather was seasonable. Harvesting of mustard is approaching completion. Pressing of sugarcane, pruning of tea, transplantation of spring rice and ploughing for autumn and winter rice and jute continue. Prospects and outturn of crops are generally fair to good. Cattle disease is reported from three districts. Fall in the price of common rice continues.

Bengal.—The week was again practically rainless. The continued absence of rainfall is keenly felt for the standing spring crops and the preparatory operations for the next autumn crops are also being delayed. Harvesting of spring cereals and planting of sugarcane are proceeding. Sowing of jute has commenced in some of the low lands of Eastern Bengal. The average price of common rice for the province remained stationary as compared with that of the preceding week.

Bihar and Orissa.—The week was rainless. Threshing of paddy is nearly finished. Pressing of sugarcane continues. Planting has commenced in some districts. Harvesting of spring crops is in progress. Standing crops are generally doing well but rain is needed in several districts. Price of common rice has risen in five districts, fallen in five and remained stationary in the remaining districts as compared with that of the preceding week. Cattle disease is reported from thirteen districts. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa is good.

United Provinces.—With the exception of light rain in Bundelkhand the week was rainless. Standing crops are generally doing well. Agricultural stock is in good condition but slight cattle disease is still reported. Irrigation of spring crops, weeding of poppy and pressing of sugarcane and preparation of land for it continue. Sowing of extra crops and extraction of opium have commenced in places. Fodder is scarce or dear in a few districts. Prices are almost stationary with a tendency to rise.

Punjab.—Light rain has fallen in or in parts of all the reporting districts except in the south-east. Though useful it was quite insufficient and more is badly wanted for unirrigated spring crops which are suffering from drought in many districts. Irrigated wheat and other crops are average to good but unirrigated crops are generally below average. Pressing of sugarcane has been completed. The yield is normal to good. Sowings of extra spring crops continue and those of sugarcane have commenced in some districts but are below normal. Stocks of food grains are sufficient. Cattle are generally healthy but fodder is getting scarce. Prices have risen slightly in some districts and range generally between warning and scarcity rates except in some south eastern districts where they are between normal and warning rates. Prices of wheat: Rawalpindi 6¼, Ambala 7¾, Lahore 8, Lyallpur 8¼, and Ferozepore 8¼ seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—Rain fell throughout the province. More rain is urgently needed. Prospects of spring crops are generally average. Sugarcane is being pressed and gur made. The outturn is average. Wheat:—Peshawar $7\frac{1}{16}$ and Dera Ismail Khan $9\frac{1}{16}$ seers per rupee.

Jammu.—Slight rain fell during the week. Prices are stationary. There is nothing else noteworthy.

Kashmir.—The week was generally wet and cool. Standing crops are in fair condition. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices are normal in the valley but high in Muzaffarabad.

Rajputana.—The weather is becoming warm. Spring crops are being irrigated. Prospects of spring crops and agricultural stock are good. Prices are steady.

Central India.—The rainfall during the week was practically nil. Winter rains are needed in Gwalior. Spring crops are being irrigated and harvested. Sugarcane is being pressed in Bhopal. Land is being prepared for autumn crops in Southern States. Standing crops and probable outturn are fair to good. Crops have been damaged slightly at some places in Bhopal by hail. Agricultural stock is generally good. Prices are high.

Central Provinces.—The weather has been clear and warm but nights and mornings are still cool. Condition of standing spring crops is poor in Seoni, Hoshangabad and Harsud tahsil of Nimar, generally fair in the remaining districts of Jubbulpore, Nerbudda and Nagpur Divisions and good in Chattisgarh and Berar. Harvesting of spring crops is in progress. Prices in Hoshangabad show a slight downward tendency but rice has risen sharply in Balaghat and in Gondia.

Feudatory States.—Harvesting of spring crops is in progress.

Bombay.—Standing crops are good except in parts of Larkana, Hyderabad and Thar and Parkar where they have been slightly damaged by frost and rats. Spring harvesting is progressing. Cotton picking continues in Hyderabad, Thar and Parkar, Ahmedabad, Broach, Surat, Panch Mahals, West Khandesh, Dharwar, Kolhapur, Rewa Kantha, Kathiawar, and Cutch. Agricultural stock is sufficient. Prices of food-grains are generally steady.

Hyderabad.—Slight showers fell in parts of Nander, Bidar and Nizamabad districts. The average was 3 cents. Spring harvesting continues. Crop conditions are the same as reported last week. Late rice is generally fair and is being weeded. It suffered slightly in parts of Nalgonda. Cattle are healthy. Prices in districts are practically unchanged but juar sells at 5 seers only in Nander.

Mysore.—The week was rainless. Standing crops are good. Harvesting of dry and wet crops is proceeding. Outturn is fair. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices are stationary.

Coorg.—The weather was dry. Picking of coffee and threshing of rice have almost been completed. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices of food grains are high.

Madras.—The week was rainless. Standing crops are fair to good generally. Harvesting of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops is proceeding with outturn fair to normal generally. Sowings of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops are proceeding normally. Condition of cattle is generally good. Prices are steady.

The number of plague deaths reported in the week ending February 23 was 2,238 fewer than in the previous week. The reduced mortality in Rajputana, Bombay and the United Provinces amounted to 2,152, 923 and 258, respectively. Increases of 793 and 677 on the previous week's total were reported from the Punjab and Bihar. The disease continued to be most severe in the eastern districts of the United Provinces; the western districts of that administration remain relatively plague free. The most rapid increase in plague incidence was reported from the Ludhiana District, Punjab.

NOTICES.

THE PATENT OFFICE, 1, COUNCIL HOUSE STREET, CALCUTTA.

Public room, open 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

1. All communications relating to applications for patents and for registration of designs under the Indian Patents and Designs Act (II of 1911), or in continuation of applications under the Inventions and Designs Act (V of 1888) should be addressed to the Controller of Patents and Designs, 1, Council House Street, Calcutta. Documents sent by post should be carefully packed.

2. Directions for the guidance of inventors and others are given in the Patent Office Handbook (price one rupee) which contains the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, the Indian Patents and Designs Rules, 1912, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary Rules) Act, 1915, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1915, together with current regulations and instructions. These should be consulted before an application is made to the Controller.

3. Advice. The Patent Office cannot undertake (1) to give opinions on the interpretation of Patent Law, or on the advisability of protecting inventions and designs or on their infringement; (2) to make searches in respect of information available in the public room; (3) to recommend any particular agent; or (4) to assist in the disposal of inventions. Applicants are warned that the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, is in force in British India only, and patents granted under it do not extend to the United Kingdom or any of the British possessions. The International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property does not include India. For information regarding patents in countries other than India applications should be made to the patent offices in the countries concerned.

4. Fees are payable in cash and must be received in the Patent Office within the time allowed by the Acts. When cheques are offered in payment of fees, it must be clearly understood that the office cannot hold itself responsible for any delay that may occur in the collection of cash on the cheques; any cheque not payable in Calcutta is subject to commission. In cases where it is not possible to have the fees handed in at the Patent Office, it is preferable to send them by money-order or postal order payable at Calcutta to the Controller of Patents and Designs, and to advise him that they have been so sent. Stamps will not be received in payment of fees.

5. Trade and property marks and names are not registered and medicines are not patented under the Indian Patents and Designs Act. There is no provision of Law in British India for their registration. Neither does this Act deal with pictures, photographs, etc., for which copyright is obtainable under the Indian Copyright Act, 1914.

6. Printed Specifications of applications, which have been accepted, are published within about three weeks after acceptance has been notified in the Gazette of India. These specifications can be purchased at the Patent Office at a uniform price of 8 annas per copy; and may be seen free of charge, together with other publications of the Patent Office, at the following places:—

(a) Candidates will be expected to be familiar with all the propositions in the above books, and will also be expected to solve simple riders.

(b) Two or three simple subjects will as a rule be given, from which a candidate may choose one only. He should endeavour to excel in good sense, not in quantity. The standard is roughly equivalent to Matriculation or School Final.

1. The examination is held annually at the Civil Engineering College, Sibpur, on the first Monday in June. The examination will be conducted, either at the College, or by an Accountant-General (including the Government Engineer of Railway Accounts) in Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, Assam and Burma only. The examination will be ipso facto vitiated, if it be not held (begun and completed) on the dates fixed; but the officer who will conduct the examination may make his own arrangements with the candidates in regard to the place and hour of examination.

Candidates will not be examined in any of the Calcutta offices.

A candidate already in permanent Government employ* may be allowed to compete in the examination, even if he is more than 25 years of age, and may be appointed to an accountantship, if he passes it; but if he is not already in pensionable service, he will be eligible only for appointment to the non-pensionable establishment on State Railways.

* This term includes employment under Local Boards and foreign bodies, if such is pensionable by the British Government.

2. The candidate should apply to an Accountant-General not later than 30 days previous to the date fixed for the examination and obtain his consent to conduct the examination if examination at the College is not convenient. The application must bear the address of the candidate, must be accompanied by a fee of Rs. 10 and the following certificates and registration form duly filled in, and must be forwarded by him not direct to the Principal, but through the Accountant-General.

Certificates may be submitted in original, or true copies attested by an officer of the Engineer or Accounts Branch, but they will not be returned—

(1) A certificate of good character signed by applicant's immediate official superior, or by the instructor under whom he has been educated or by some other superior under whom he may have been brought up or employed or to whom he may be well known. (This certificate must have special reference to the two years immediately preceding the application.)

(2) A certificate of age, baptismal or of birth (not required, if the candidate is already in permanent Government employ).

(3) A certificate that the application is in the candidate's hand-writing.

NOTE A.—A candidate already in Government service should, in like manner, submit his application through his immediate official superior to an Accountant-General (including Government Examiner of Railway Accounts, qualified to hold the particular examination and should state whether he desires to be examined at the office of the Accountant-General concerned or at the College.

NOTE B.—The usual examination centres are (1) the Civil Engineering College, Sibpur, (2) Chittagong, (3) Ranchi, (4) The Bihar School of Engineering, Patna, (5) Rangoon, (6) Shillong, and (7) Simla for candidates in the Government of India offices, no others will be admitted at Simla.

(4) Registration statement containing the following information :—

(a) Name in full.

(b) Father's name.

(c) Nationality or class, i. e., European, Anglo-Indian or Indian, of candidate ; and, if Indian, caste or tribe.

(d) Date of birth.

(e) Place of birth.

(f) Present address.

(g) Examinations passed.

(h) Thumb mark of candidate, left hand, to be made in the presence of a responsible person who knows candidate.

(k) Signature and address of above-mentioned witness.

It will rest with the Accountant-General (including Government Examiner of Railway Accounts) to whom the candidate submits his application, to decide on a consideration of the certificates submitted, whether the candidate should be allowed to appear for the examination, or whether his application should be rejected. The Accountant-General or the other officers referred to, will then forward to the Principal, for registration, the names of the accepted candidates, together with their registration statements, which should be signed by the Accountant-General. The registration statement should be carefully preserved by the Principal. The names of these candidates should be entered in a statement showing their ages and their addresses, and also showing where each candidate is to be examined, whether at the College or at the office of the Accountant-General. This statement, together with the fees, should be transmitted to the Principal not later than 15 days after the dates fixed in paragraph 2 for the submission of applications of candidates.

3. Examination papers that are issued for examination need not be returned.

4. Each examination is complete in itself. A candidate who has failed in an examination and presents himself for examination on a subsequent occasion, must undergo the full examination and furnish fresh a fee and certificates.

5. If from any cause a candidate fails to appear for the Examination, the fee paid will not be refunded.

6. It must be distinctly understood that the passing of this examination does not give any claim to an appointment, and that, in making appointments, preference will be given to qualified persons who are already employed in the department.

7. Passed candidates should apply, not to the Principal of the College nor to the Comptroller-General, but direct to the Accountant-General or Government Examiner of Railway Accounts in the province or railway under whom they may desire to be employed.

8. The Civil Engineering College acts, solely as an examining body in reference to admission to the 4th grade of Accountants, Public Works Department.

9. Candidates for the 4th grade Accountantship Examination, who are not Government servants and over 25 years of age, are allowed to appear at the examination of the Sibpur College centre only, but even if successful, they are debarred from employment in the service of Government, and their names will be excluded from the list of passed candidates which is furnished to the Comptroller and Auditor-General.

10. Candidates over 25 years of age not in Government employ should apply in writing to the Principal of the Civil Engineering College not later than 30 days previous to the examination ; the application to be accompanied by a Treasury receipt for Rs. 10, and the registration statement prescribed in rule 2 (4).

NOTE (1).—The question papers of previous years are not published separately. Those of the preceding year are printed in the Civil Engineering College Calendar— price, annas 12 and annas 3 postage, which must be prepaid.

NOTE (2).—Candidates for the examination are not provided with accommodation in the College barracks, but arrangements for their meals can be made on payment in advance of annas 4 per meal to the Assistant Superintendent of the Mess.

NOTE (3).—As for qualifications for admission to the examinations, candidates should refer the matter to the Accountant-General of their province.

NOTE (4).—There are no classes at the Sibpur College for teaching Book-keeping.

COTTON PRESS RETURN.

No. 7 OF 1917-18.

PREFATORY NOTE.

THE COTTON SEASON 1917-18.

The yield of the cotton crop of 1917-18 is estimated at 4,035,000* bales on an area of 24,781,000 acres, as compared with 4,489,000 * bales on an area of 21,745,000 acres, the revised final figures of last year. There is a decrease of 10 per cent in outturn. It will be seen from the appended tables that cotton is coming in much slower than last year. There were 298,000 bales of cotton pressed in the pressing factories, and 126,000 bales received in the spinning mills, from 1st September to 15th December, 1917, as against 533,000 bales and 134,000 bales, respectively, during the corresponding period of last year, or a decrease of 44 and 6 per cent, respectively. The figures for the Native States of Hyderabad, Central India, Rajputana, and Mysore are, as will be seen from the footnotes to the tables, incomplete and have been excluded from this comparison.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA,
March 8, 1918.

G. FINDLAY SHIRRAS,
Director of Statistics.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

CALCUTTA, FEBRUARY 21, 1918.

Final General Memorandum on the SUGARCANE Crop of 1917-18.

This memorandum is based upon reports furnished by provinces, which contain 99 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India.

The total area sown is estimated at 2,796,000 acres, as against 2,416,000 acres, the revised figure of last year, or an increase of 16 per cent. The total yield of raw sugar (gúr from sugarcane) is estimated at 3,229,000 tons, as against 2,728,000 tons, the revised figure of last year, or an increase of 18 per cent. The present figures for both area and yield are the highest on record.

The season was on the whole favourable, and the condition of the crop is reported to be good, although excessive rain and floods injuriously affected the plants in parts of most of the important cane-growing provinces.

Detailed figures for each province are given below :—

Provinces	Yield (1,000 tons)		Area (1,000 acres)		Yield per acre (lbs)
	1917-18	1916-17	1917-18	1916-17	1917-18	1916-17
United Provinces	1,576	1,180	1,497	1,202	2,359	2,190
Punjab	413	348	502	414	1,843	1,883
Bihar and Orissa	290	305	263	278	2,470	2,458
Bengal (a)	241	212	207	204	2,608	2,328
Madras (b)	295	266	123	114	5,372	5,227
Bombay and Sind (c)	320	328	113	115	6,348	6,380
Assam	30	29	35	30	1,920	1,804
North-West Frontier Province	33	32	31	30	2,385	2,389
Central Provinces and Berar	31	28	25	23	2,778	2,727
Total	3,229	2,728	2,796	2,416	2,587	2,529

In addition to the areas for which particulars are given above, the crop is grown on a very small scale in certain other tracts in British India, and the average area of such tracts for the last five years has been some 22,000 acres with an estimated production of 29,000 tons.

The provincial reports are summarised below :—

United Provinces (54·2 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area sown amounts to 1,497,000 acres as against 1,202,000 acres last year, or an increase of 24 per cent. The total yield is estimated at 1,576,000 tons, which is 34 per cent above the revised estimate of last year. High prices of gúr and favourable weather conditions in the earlier part of 1917 led to a considerable increase in the area under cane. The crop did well in the Meerut, Agra, and Rohilkhand divisions, but in other parts of the provinces the cane was injured by insect pests and suffered from floods in low-lying areas. For the province, as a whole, the average outturn is estimated at 95 per cent of the normal, as compared with 85 per cent last year.

Punjab (14·7 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area is estimated at 502,000 acres, as against 414,000 acres, the revised figure of last year, or an increase of 21 per cent, which is ascribed to plentiful rains, a good supply of water in canals, and high prices of gúr. The total yield is estimated at 413,000 tons, as against 348,000 tons last year, or an increase of 19 per cent. The season was favourable, except in some districts in the centre and north-west of the province, where the excessive rains and floods of September and October damaged the crop, and the outturn was below normal.

Bihar and Orissa (10·9 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area is estimated at 263,000 acres, as against 278,000 acres, the revised figure of last year, or a decrease of 5 per cent. The total yield is estimated at 290,000 tons, which is also 5 per cent below the revised estimate of last year. The weather conditions have generally been favourable, but some damage by floods is reported from Patna, Gaya, Shahabad, Cuttack, and Puri. Insects also did some injury to the crop in parts of Saran. On the whole, however, the condition of the crop is reported to be good. According to the estimates of District Officers, the average outturn for the province works out to 93 per cent of the normal. The provincial Director of Agriculture is, however, of opinion that the outturn has been underestimated in many districts, and that the crop will not fall short of the normal, i.e., 100 per cent, on which the estimate of total yield stated above is based.

Bengal (9·2 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area is estimated at 207,000 acres, as against 204,000 acres last year or an increase of 1 per cent. The total yield of cane sugar is estimated at 241,000 tons, which is 14 per cent above the revised estimate of last year. Since the issue of the second forecast, weather conditions have on the whole been favourable for the crop. Excessive rainfall and floods accompanied by storm in October caused considerable damage to the crop in the northern and western districts. In the eastern districts, however, a good crop is expected. The average outturn for the province is estimated at 89 per cent of the normal, as against 80 per cent last year.

The total quantity of raw sugar (gúr) likely to be obtained from the juice of date and palmyra palm in Bengal is estimated at 101,000 tons, as against 100,000 tons last year. The Provincial Director of Agriculture estimates the total quantity of gúr in the province from all sources (cane, date and palmyra palm) this year to be 342,000 tons, as against 312,000 tons last year.

Madras (3·8 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area is estimated at 123,000 acres, which is 8 per cent above the area of last year. The total yield of cane sugar is estimated at 295,000 tons, as against 266,000 tons last year, or an increase of 11 per cent. The increase in area is general and is due to the favourable season and to the high prices of jaggery at the time of planting. Bumper yields are expected in the north of the Presidency, where the season has been particularly favourable. In the central districts and South Arcot the crop suffered slightly from drought in the earlier stages. On the whole the average outturn is estimated at 106 per cent of a normal crop, as against 95 per cent last year.

(a) Excluding estimates of sugar obtained from date and palmyra palms (101,000 tons in 1917-18 and 100,000 tons in 1916-17)
(b) Excluding estimates of sugar obtained from palmyra palm (85,000 tons in 1917-18. Estimates for previous years are not available)
(c) Including Native States

The total yield of raw sugar (gúr) from the 2½ million palm trees, which are usually tapped for sugar making, is roughly estimated at 35.000 tons.

Bombay and Sind (2·6 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area is reported to be 113,000 acres (4,000 acres being in Sind and 34.000 acres in the Native States), which is 2 per cent below the area of last year. The total yield is estimated at 320,000 tons (6,000 tons being in Sind and 95,000 tons in the Native States), which is also 2 per cent below the estimate of last year. The crop suffered at first from the prolonged break in July; but later on the rains have been plentiful, and the crop has generally done well, except in places where excessive rains in October and November injuriously affected the crop and postponed the harvest of the early plantations by about a month. The crop in Sind is reported to be fairly good.

Assam (1·5 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area is estimated at 35,000 acres, as against 36,000 acres last year. The total yield is estimated at 30,000 tons, which is 2 per cent above the estimate of last year. In the earlier part of the season the crop suffered from deficient rain. The weather subsequently improved, and the outturn is expected to be favourable. The average outturn for the province is estimated at 97 per cent of the normal, as against 92 per cent last year.

North-West Frontier Province (1·3 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area is estimated at 31,000 acres, which is 3 per cent larger than the area of last year. The yield is estimated at 33,000 tons, which is also 3 per cent in excess of last year's yield. The season was favourable and the outturn is reported to be normal.

Central Provinces and Berar (0·9 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area sown is reported to be 25,000 acres (2,000 acres being in Berar), which is 9 per cent above the area of last year. The total yield is estimated at 31,000 tons (2,000 tons being in Berar), which is 11 per cent above the estimate of last year. The weather conditions were favourable for the crop. The average outturn is estimated at 113 per cent of a normal crop, as against 110 per cent last year.

Sugarcane crop in foreign countries.—From the latest information published by the International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, it appears that in Paraguay the total area under cane in 1917 is estimated at 15,000 acres, which is the same as in the preceding year. Frosts, locusts and drought recurring in two consecutive years have caused damage to more than half the area planted. In Java and Madura the area under sugarcane in 1917 was 302,000 acres.

From unofficial sources it appears that in Louisiana the weather continues fair and cool, and is favourable for harvesting the crop. The condition of the Hawiian crop is said to be improving. In Cuba the weather conditions have been favourable, and an abundant crop is expected this year. In Porto Rico the crop has been adversely affected by drought, especially in the unirrigated tracts. The world supply is approximately 7 per cent higher than that of last year. The following are the unofficial estimates of the more important foreign producing countries in 1917-18 (the figures in brackets are the production figures of 1916-17) :—Cuba 3,200,000 tons (3,024,000); Java 1,800,000 tons (1,596,000); Hawiian Islands 525,000 tons (579,000); Porto Rico 475,000 tons (449,000); Mauritius 224,000 tons (209,000); Formosa and Japan 450,000 tons (436,000); Australia 265,000 tons (195,000); Argentine 150,000 tons (84,000); Brazil 375,000 tons (300,000); United States (Louisiana and Texas) 227,000 tons (278,000); Mexico 35,000 tons (50,000); Natal 115,000 tons (115,000); and Egypt 100,000 tons (102,000).

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

CALCUTTA, FEBRUARY 21, 1918.

Final General Memorandum on the RICE crop of 1917-18.

This memorandum is based upon reports received from provinces, which contain 99 per cent of the total area under rice in British India. The statistics of acreage, outturn, etc., refer to all rice crops, both early and late, in all the reporting provinces.

The total area reported is 79,698,000 acres, as compared with 80,080,000 acres, the revised final area of last year. The present figure, therefore, shows a decrease of only 382,000 acres or 0·5 per cent as compared with the area of 1916-17. The total yield is estimated at 35,945,000 tons of cleaned rice, as against 34,791,000 tons, the finally revised estimate of last year, or an increase of 3 per cent. The present estimate of yield is the highest on record.

The season has, on the whole, been favourable, especially for the winter crop, except in parts of Bombay and Sind, where the crop was adversely affected by heavy rain.

(a) Includes summer, autumn, and winter rice. (b) Including Native States.

The average yield per acre, it may be noted, works out to 1,010 lbs, as against 973 lbs in 1916-17, 941 lbs in 1915-16, 796 lbs in 1914-15, 855 lbs in 1913-14, 891 lbs in 1912-13, 1,041 lbs in 1911-12, and 1,077 lbs in 1910-11.

In addition to the areas for which particulars are given above, rice is grown in certain other tracts in British India, and the average area so grown for the five years ending 1915-16 has been some 764,000 acres with an estimated yield of 345 000 tons.

The provincial reports are summarised below :—

Bengal (26·6 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The total area under winter rice is reported to be 15,515,000 acres as against 15,667,000 acres last year, or a decrease of 1 per cent. The total yield is estimated at 6,839,000 tons, which is 5 per cent above that of last year. Since the issue of the second forecast in December, the weather was dry and the season was generally favourable for harvesting. The average outturn for the province is estimated to be normal (i.e., 100 per cent), as against 94 per cent last year.

If the figures for the summer and autumn crops, given in the second forecast issued in December last and reproduced in the appended table, are added to the above estimates, the total area and yield of all kinds of rice in Bengal amount to 20,966,000 acres and 8,647,000 tons, as against 21,120,000 acres and 8,028,000 tons last year.

Bihar and Orissa (21 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The total area under winter rice is estimated at 11,964,000 acres, which is 4 per cent below last year's area. The total yield is estimated at 7,581,000 tons, showing an increase of 0·4 per cent over last year's yield. A good crop is reported to have been harvested in most districts. According to the estimates of district officers the average outturn for the province works out to 102 per cent of the normal ; but the provincial Director remarks that the outturn has been under-estimated in some districts and that the damage reported to have been done by excessive rain and floods in August was on the whole slight, while material benefit was caused by favourable late rains. He is, therefore, of opinion that the outturn for the province will be 115 per cent of the normal. The total yield stated above is estimated on this basis.

Adding to the above figures those for the summer and autumn crops, given in the second forecast issued in December last, and reproduced in the appended table, the total area and yield of all kinds of rice in the province amount to 15,798,000 acres and 8,989,000 tons, as against 16,258,000 acres and 8,808,000 tons last year.

Madras (13·9 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The total estimated area under rice is 11,554,000 acres, which is practically the same as the final figure for last year. The total yield is estimated at 5,899,000 tons, which is 2 per cent below last year's yield. The season has been generally favourable, especially in Ganjam, Vizagapatam, and the Deccan districts. In Chingleput, the Arcots, and Tanjore the crop was adversely affected by prolonged breaks in the north-east rains, and also by unexpected rains and cold weather at the time of harvest. In the south conditions have been favourable, the crop in the Periyar area being above normal.

Burma (13·3 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The total area sown with rice is estimated at 10,702,000 acres, which is 1 per cent above the area of last year. The total yield is estimated at 4,637,000 tons, which is also 1 per cent above the yield of last year. Threshing and winnowing operations are nearing completion in almost all districts. In five districts the crop is reported to be threshing out light; elsewhere the grain is said to be normal. The average outturn for the province is estimated at 95 per cent of the normal, as against 93 per cent last year. The surplus available for export is estimated at 2,700,000 tons of cargo rice, equivalent to 2,287,500 tons of cleaned rice.

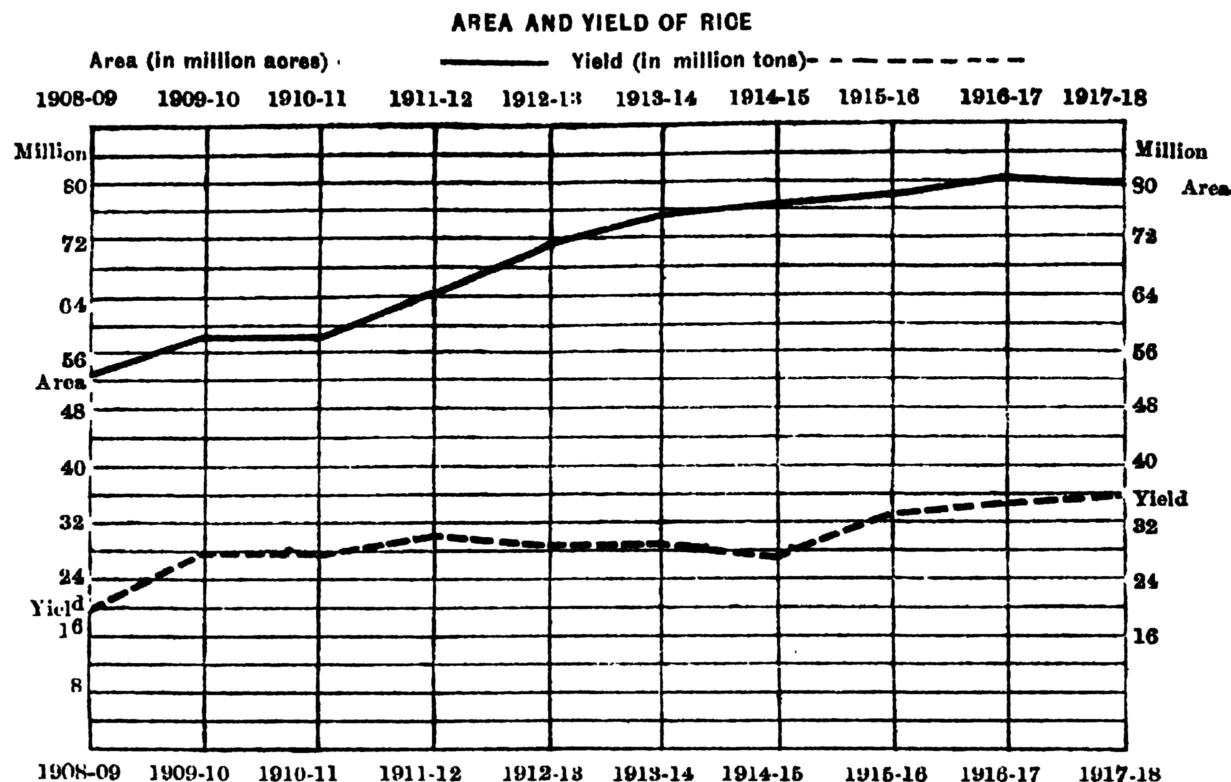
United Provinces (8 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The total area under both early (autumn) and late (winter) crops is now reported to be 7,427,000 acres, which is 4 per cent above last year's area. The yield is estimated at 2,647,000 tons, which is 1 per cent below the yield of last year. The season, on the whole, was favourable for the rice crop, although the early crop suffered to some extent from deficiency of rain in parts of the province in August, and from excessive rain towards harvest time. The outturn of early rice is estimated at 90 per cent of the normal. The late crop matured well, and its yield is estimated as normal. Taking both crops together the average outturn for the province is estimated at 95 per cent of the normal.

Adding to the above figures, those for the hot weather crop, given in the second forecast issued in December last, the total area and yield of all kinds of rice in the province amount to 7,451,000 acres and 2,658,000 tons, as against 7,182,000 acres and 2,686,000 tons last year.

Central Provinces and Berar (6·4 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—As reported in the December forecast, the total area is estimated at 5,226,000 acres, which is 3 per cent above the area of last year. The total yield is estimated at 1,647,000 tons, which is 11 per cent in excess of last year's yield. The seasonal conditions were, on the whole, favourable.

Assam (6 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The total area under winter rice is estimated at 3,284,000 acres, which is 1 per cent below the area of last year. The total yield is estimated at 1,549,000 tons, which is 30 per cent above last year's yield. Weather conditions from the time of transplanting have been excellent, and bumper harvests have been reaped in Sylhet, Lakhimpur, Darrang, and Nowgong; elsewhere the crop was normal, except in the Garo Hills, where it was less by 5 per cent. The average outturn for the province is estimated at 111 per cent of the normal.

If the figures for the summer and autumn crops, given in the second forecast and reproduced in the appended table, are added to the above estimates, the total area and yield of all kinds of rice in Assam amount to 4,370,000 acres and 1,882,000 tons, as compared with 4,385,000 acres and 1,461,000 tons last year.



Bombay (2·3 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The area and yield of late (spring or rabi) rice in the districts of Belgaum, Ratnagiri, and Kanara are estimated at 25,000 acres and 14,000 tons, as against 27,000 acres and 15,000 tons last year.

With the figures for the autumn rice, given in the December forecast, and reproduced in the appended table, the total area and yield of both kinds of rice in Bombay come to 2,461,000 acres and 1,146,000 tons, as against 2,599,000 acres and 1,177,000 tons last year.

Sind (1·4 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—As stated in the December forecast, the total area sown is 1,086,000 acres (8,000 acres being in the Khairpur State), which is 15 per cent below the revised estimate of last year. The total yield is 399,000 tons, which is 21 per cent below that of last year.

Coorg (0·1 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The total area and yield are estimated at 84,000 acres and 41,000 tons, as against 84,000 acres and 54,000 tons last year.

Chart.—The chart below illustrates the present figures of area and yield as compared with those of the preceding nine years.

Rice crop in Foreign Countries.—From the latest information published by the International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, it appears that in Japan the total area under rice is estimated at 7,608,000 acres, as against 7,540,000 acres last year. In the United States of America the total area and yield are estimated at 969,000 acres and 667,000 tons, as against 866,000 acres and 816,000 tons last year. In Italy the estimates are 346,000 acres and 503,000 tons, as against 352,000 acres and 511,000 tons last year. In Egypt (Lower) the total area is estimated at 266,000 acres, against 150,000 acres last year. The "Official Gazette" of Japan for November 1917, places the rice crop of 1917 at 7,301,000 tons against 7,765,000 tons last year.

Proceedings of the Indian Legislative Council.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.
LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915 (5 & 6 Geo. V, Ch. 61).

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Tuesday, the 5th March, 1918.

PRESENT :

The Hon'ble SIR GEORGE LOWNDES, K.C.S.I., K.C., Vice-President, presiding and 59 Members, of whom 54 were Additional Members.

OATH OF OFFICE.

The following Additional Member made the prescribed oath of allegiance to the Crown :—

The Hon'ble Colonel Alfred Joseph Caruana.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble Nawab Syed Nawab Ali Chaudhri, Khan Bahadur, asked :—

Recommendations of the Public Services Commission re the Education Department.

1. "Do Government intend taking any action at present on the recommendations of the Public Services Commission affecting the Education Department? If so, from what date is it intended to give effect to such recommendations?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"The Hon'ble Member's attention is invited to the published Circular of the Government of India No 866 of the 6th October 1917, which shows that the Government of India have already addressed the Local Governments on the subject. As already explained in the answer given on the 1st March to the Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri's question on the Educational Services, the replies of all the Local Governments have not yet been received, and it is not possible at present to indicate a date from which the final decision arrived at will take effect."

[Nawab Syed Nawab Ali Chaudhri, Khan Bahadur; Sir C Sankaran Nair; Raja Sir Muhammad Ali Muhammad Khan; Sir William Vincent.] [5TH MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Nawab Syed Nawab Ali Chaudhri, Khan Bahadur, asked :—

Vacancies in the Indian Educational Service.

2. "Is it intended to let the existing vacancies in the Indian Educational Service stand over sine die, or is it intended to fill them by promotion from the Provincial Educational Service?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"The Government of India are at present considering, in consultation with Local Governments, proposals for filling the existing vacancies in the Indian Educational Service by promotion from the Provincial Educational Service, or if suitable officers are not available in that Service, then by Indians who are candidates for the Service."

The Hon'ble Nawab Syed Nawab Ali Chaudhri, Khan Bahadur, asked :—

Number of Hindus, Muhammadans and other Indians in the Indian Educational Service.

3. "Will Government be pleased to state the number of Hindus, Muhammadans and other Indians, respectively, in employ in the Indian Educational Service, separately for each Province, and the number which it is intended to admit into that Service?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"In reply to the first part of the question, a statement* giving the necessary information is laid on the table.

As regards the second part, as already explained in a reply to a previous question, the matter is at present under consideration in consultation with the Local Governments."

The Hon'ble Raja Sir Muhammad Ali Muhammad Khan asked :—

Persons interned in India.

4. "Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement giving the number of persons interned in India, including Burma, their names and the following particulars relating to each case :—

(a) The native place of each interned person

(b) Age.

(c) Profession.

(d) Enactment under which interned.

(e) Date of internment.

(f) Dependants (if any).

(g) Where interned, with name of gaol, if in custody.

(h) What allowance (if any) is given to the interned person.

(i) What allowance (if any) is given to his dependants."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"The Government of India have considered the matter, but it is in their opinion sufficient that the relatives of internees should be in possession of information about them, and they do not think that it would be in the public interest that information as to their names and other particulars should be generally advertised as suggested."

* Vide Appendix A.

[5TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mr. Srinivasa Sastri; Sir Robert Gillan; Sir George Barnes.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri asked:—

Reserved saloons and carriages for high officials.

5. "(a) Will Government be pleased to supply a statement showing the cost to Government in capital and in recurring expenditure involved in the provision of reserved saloons and carriages for high officials?

(b) Do Government propose to consider the question of curtailing, while the war lasts, the privilege at present allowed to high officials of travelling in reserved saloons and carriages?"

The Hon'ble Sir Robert Gillan replied:—

"The capital cost of carriages reserved for the use of high officials of Government is R19,67,179. Information regarding the recurring expenditure of these carriages is not available; it has been asked for and will be supplied to the Hon'ble Member when received.

As regards the second part of the question, the Railway Board more than a year ago, in January 1917, in view of the curtailment of passenger services, pointed out to Railway Administrations that, in order to meet actual public requirements and provide as much third class accommodation as possible, everything in the nature of luxuries, such as restaurant cars and reserved accommodation, should be either suspended entirely, or reduced to the absolute minimum; and that upper class accommodation should be reduced to meet actual demands only. They dealt also with the case of railway officers' saloons I may say that railway officers who spend much of their time on the line must have saloons; but a restriction on their use was suggested so as to avoid interference with public traffic, and, as far as local conditions allow, the wishes of the Railway Board have been carried into effect. At the same time, we addressed the other departments of Government and asked that Government officials desiring to have special carriages taken by mail or passenger trains should consult beforehand the Agents of the railways by which they intended to travel as to the trains which it would be most convenient for them to use from the point of view of railway working. Finally, steps have been taken to limit the running of special trains to cases where they are really necessary. The Hon'ble Member will see therefore that the matter has been very carefully considered, and the Government do not feel that it is desirable to go further in the direction of curtailing the use of facilities which are not privileges, but which are provided in the interests of the public service."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri asked:—

Memorials from sorters of the Railway Mail Service.

6. "(a) Have the sorters of the M. Division of the Railway Mail Service submitted through the regular channel to the Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs memorials setting forth certain disabilities and grievances?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state whether any, and, if so, what orders have been passed on these memorials?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied:—

"The answer to the first part of the Hon'ble Member's question is 'yes.'

With regard to the second part orders have not yet been passed on these memorials. Before they were received the Director-General, Posts and Telegraphs, had however already issued orders for the general improvement of the pay and prospects of the Railway Mail Service. The average pay of sorters has been raised by a uniform rate of one rupee, with effect from the 1st February 1918, and, under the order already passed, further improvements will be made in the next financial year in the average pay of sorters of the M. Division as well as of other Divisions. One-third of the sorters on Rs. 20, which is the lowest grade, have been promoted to the next higher grade, Rs. 30, with effect from the 1st January 1918; and in the next financial year the minimum pay of sorters will be raised from Rs. 20 to Rs. 25; paid probationers will receive Rs. 20 instead of Rs. 15. These improvements represent an additional expenditure of Rs. 9,660 a month."

[Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda; Sir William Vincent; Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea] [5TH MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

Hunger strike at the Alipore Central Jail.

7. "(a) Is it a fact that 20, or any other number of, State prisoners or detenus at the Alipore Central Jail have gone on hunger strike on the following among other alleged grounds :—

(i) being kept in solitary cells, in some cases for days together;

(ii) being deprived of the liberty of talking to anybody;

(iii) being deprived of the right of reading newspapers, current periodicals and books;

(iv) their communications and complaints being stopped;

(v) their inability to meet the barest necessaries of life;

(vi) being banished to, and detained in, uncongenial and unhealthy places;

(vii) being insulted, threatened and subjected to torture extending even to emasculation.

(b) Will Government be pleased to state how the matter was dealt with in each case? Was any inquiry made? It so, by whom? Will Government be pleased to publish the result of inquiry in every case?

(c) Is it a fact that friends and relations of the prisoners offered to meet them in the Jail, and advise and use their influence with them to take food? If so, in how many cases? And in how many cases was any facility granted to such friend or relation?

(d) Is it a fact that the persons who went on hunger strike were transferred wholesale from the Central Jail, Alipore, to places outside Bengal, rendering access to them by their friends and relations difficult?

(e) Will Government be pleased to consider the propriety of appointing a Committee with an adequate non-official element to inquire into and report on the allegations made by the said persons as the grounds for their hunger strike?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"Altogether 20 prisoners went on hunger strike. Three of them gave up the strike practically at once, and almost all the others have done so since They made no representation to Government, but each one of them was interviewed separately by the Inspector-General of Jails, Bengal, and by the Additional Secretary to the Government of Bengal. Each of them stated definitely that he had no complaint to make regarding his treatment in jail, and that he struck solely as a protest against his incarceration. The strike was clearly the result of a combination, and to break this combination 14 prisoners were sent to other jails Relatives of the prisoners were given every possible facility for seeing and reasoning with them whether at Alipur or elsewhere. Government do not propose to appoint a Committee of inquiry into this matter."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea asked :—

Hunger-strikers in Bengal.

8. "Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) why the hunger-strikers, or at any rate some of them, were removed from Bengal?

(b) were any statements taken from the hunger-strikers as to their reasons for the strike?

(c) if the answer is in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to lay the statements on the table?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"The Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply given to the questions put by the Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda on the same subject."

[5TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mir Asad 'Ali, Khan Bahadur; Sir William Vincent; Sir William Meyer.]

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur, asked:—

Mussalmans interned in India.

9. "Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the following particulars as regards the Mussalmans interned in India, including Burma:—

(a) the total number interned;

(b) the name, birthplace, age and profession of each interned;

(c) the enactment under which each was interned;

(d) the date as well as the period of internment;

(e) the place of internment and where the interned person is confined in jail, the name of such jail, and

(f) the amount of allowance given to (i) the interned, and (ii) his dependants, if any."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied:—

"The Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply given to the question put by the Hon'ble Raja Sir Muhammad Ali Muhammad Khan on the same subject."

THE INCOME-TAX BILL.

11-15 A.M.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—"Sir, I beg to present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Income-tax. It is not usual to make a speech on such occasions, but I should like, with your permission, to say a few words in supplementary explanation of the most important alteration the Select Committee has made in the Bill, that is, in respect of the period of assessment

"In the Bill as introduced we went frankly on the principle that it would be convenient alike for Government and the assessee, especially now that we have to ascertain a man's taxable income from all sources and graduate the varying rates in Schedule I of the Bill accordingly, that he should be taxed in year B with reference to his actual income in the preceding year A. This procedure has, however, evoked considerable opposition from the representatives of the commercial community, and I indicated in my speech introducing the Bill that we would consider in Select Committee any practical suggestions for its amendment in this and in other respects. We have, therefore, decided, in deference to the criticisms made, to accept the principle that a man's final assessment in respect of any year shall be with reference to his actual income in that year. I say final assessment, because it is obvious, as I indicated in my introductory speech, that a man's actual income cannot be known till after the year has expired. It, therefore, becomes necessary to have a provisional as well as a final assessment The provisional assessment will be made contemporaneously in regard to income taxed at the source, that is, salaries and securities, as provided for in clause 15. Income of other kinds will at the outset be provisionally assessed with reference to the assessee's returns of the previous year; and when these returns are presented and adjudicated on, we shall have available the amount of income to be provisionally taxed and the graduated rate to be applied thereto.

"Then, when the assessee is able to produce returns as to his actual income for the year, a re-assessment will be made as provided in our new clause 19, which may result either in refund to the assessee of an excess amount previously paid on the provisional assessment, or in a further payment by him to Government by reason of the inadequacy of the provisional assessment. This remedies the patent defect of section 33 of the existing Act, to which I referred in my introductory speech, which allows, in certain circumstances, a remedy of this sort to the assessee as against the Government, but gives no corresponding remedy to Government, as trustee of the community, against him if an assessment based on the actuals of the year preceding proves to be inadequate. As I said then, people cannot have things both ways in this manner, and, I think, it will be admitted that if there is to be re-adjustment, it must tell in favour of the community as well as against it.

"That a certain amount of income improperly escapes taxation under the present system will, I think, be clear from the following extracts from a letter written by an Indian gentleman in Bengal who was formerly concerned with the income-tax administration. He says there—

'While the Sara (now the Hardinge) Bridge was under construction, very large contracts for earthwork were given out to some up-country men—many of whom made as much as Rs. 50,000 to Rs. 1,00,000 of net profit in a year, and then having finished the work left the place not doing any business at all next year... ... Then, again, I found that in an exceptionally favourable year, enormous profits were made in jute, but in the following year I found the business fall, and we had to refund to people who had been assessed on the profits they had made in an exceptional year.'

"These extracts show conclusively that if you are to assess equitably, you must have better provision than the existing law allows.

"Taking three consecutive years—A, B and C—the procedure now contemplated will be—

(1) In year B provisional taxation with reference to information furnished in respect of year A.

(2) In year C final assessment for year B with reference to information then furnished, and provisional assessment for year C in accordance with the same statistics That is, the same set of returns will serve for final assessment in respect of year B and provisional assessment in respect of year C.

"Ordinarily, therefore, there will be a running account between Government and an assessee, any payments to or from him required with reference to his final assessment for year B being made in connection with the provisional assessment for year C.

"It may be, however, that an assessee dies without leaving a business successor, or becomes insolvent, or otherwise winds up his business. In these cases, we provide for settlement of the account as quickly as possible under the second proviso to clause 19

"We also, in the first proviso to this clause, lay down that no re-adjustment shall be made thereunder in respect of income-tax assessed or paid before the passing of this Act. That is, since the Bill will, we hope, come into law on 1st April next, we shall not apply the provisions which would otherwise enable a final re-assessment to be made for 1917-18 if such assessment would be to the disadvantage of the assessee or would give him any further right which would not accrue under section 33 of the existing Act. The proviso in clause 53 of the Bill, as it now stands, covers rights at present exerciseable under section 33. We want, that is, to avoid any appearance of retrospective action in a direction which the present law did not contemplate. But in 1919-20 there will, of course, be a final re-adjustment as provided by the Bill in the case of incomes provisionally assessed in 1918-19 with reference to the returns of the previous year.

"I may add that, for the sake of simplicity, we do not propose to make this provisional and final assessment procedure applicable to the small people who will be subjected to summary assessment under Chapter III of the amended Bill, that is, men whose taxable income is between Rs. 1,000 and Rs. 2,000. In their case, the summary assessment will be made by the Collector on the best information he can procure.

"I may mention, too, in connection with assessment under clauses 18 and 19 that some of our Indian colleagues on the Select Committee suggested that the Collector should be directed to accept certificates by a chartered accountant. It was decided, however, that no such absolute direction could be given though the Collector would naturally attach much weight to a certificate of the kind, and departmental instructions directing such weight to be given will be issued.

"Lastly, my friend Mr. Sarma raised a point as to parties being able to appear by Counsel in proceedings under this Bill concerning their assessments. I understand that in most Provinces this is already allowed; but I propose to address Local Governments departmentally on the subject, in view to the alleviation of any grievances which may exist on this score.

"The Bill will, I may say, be taken into consideration on the 14th instant".

THE CINEMATOGRAPH BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Sir, I move that the Report of the Select Committee appointed to consider the Bill to make provision for regulating exhibitions by means of Cinematographs be taken into consideration. The Report of the Select Committee is a unanimous one, and I do not propose to detain the Council for any time over it. There are, however, a few points to which, I think, I should advert. It will be observed that a sub-clause has been added to clause 1 providing that the Act shall come into effect from such date as the Governor General in Council may prescribe. Some fear was expressed that the premature introduction of the Bill might cause hardship to those engaged in the cinematograph business. Well, in answer to that, I am prepared to give an undertaking that, provided something totally unforeseen does not occur, say a terrible fire, which would necessitate immediate action, the Bill will not be brought into force earlier than the 1st of July. We did not insert that date in the Bill, because it is just possible, though I hope very improbable, that the machinery and the regulations for giving effect to the provisions of the Act may not be ready by then. 11-21 A.M.

"The Council will also observe that clauses 7 and 8 have been modified; the reasons for the amendments are sufficiently stated in the Report of the Committee, and I need say no more on the point. I ought, however, to draw attention to clause 9, the main intention of which is to enable Local Governments to exempt, subject to any safeguards or restrictions that may be essentially necessary, casual cinematograph entertainments at marriage festivals, private entertainments and the like, from the provisions of the Act. Local Governments will be addressed on this point by the Government of India, and their attention invited to the advisability of providing for such cases.

"Clause 10 of the Bill which gave power to the Government to apply the provisions of the Act to other spectacular and dramatic performances has been omitted by the Select Committee for the reasons stated in the Report.

"With these remarks, Sir, I commend the motion to the favourable consideration of this Council.

"The motion was put and agreed to."

The Hon'ble Mr. Ayyangar:—"Sir, I beg to move that in clause 7, sub-clause (2), for the words 'a film is suitable for public exhibition,' the words 'the exhibition of the film will not be punishable under section 124-A or 153-A of the Indian Penal Code, or is not objectionable on the ground of indecency' be substituted. 11-26 A.M.

The section as amended would run thus;—

'If any such authority after examination considers that the exhibition of a film will not be punishable under section 124-A or 153-A of the Indian Penal Code, or is not objectionable on the ground of indecency, it shall cause the film to be marked in the prescribed manner.'

"While in the Objects and Reasons of the Bill it is stated that this Bill is intended to prevent the presentation of improper or objectionable films, there is not a word in the Bill itself to indicate what is improper and objectionable for the purposes of this Act. If my amendment be not adopted, then it would mean something like giving a blank cheque to the executive to deal with the censoring of films. It may be said that the rules to be framed hereafter will deal with the nature of the films that are to be passed, but I should contend that the rules are intended to work out the law we make, and not to lay down the policy for us. Besides, when the Act does not work satisfactorily, we can bring in an amendment, but an amendment of the rules can be done, I believe, only by a resolution in the Council in an indirect way. It has been said that this Bill is brought with a view to prevent improper and obscene exhibitions. In my amendment I have gone a step further and suggested that other films too which may incite the commission of offences under 124-A and 153-A must be censored. Though these offences after commission may be taken cognizance of by the sections of the Penal Code referred to, since this Bill is specially designed for controlling of cinematographs, I think it better to include the provision of those sections in withholding licenses for such films. Evidently by section 7, sub-clause (1) of the Bill, by restricting a certificate for a film to any specified area, i.e., by prohibiting a film in one part of a Province and allowing it for the other parts, the offences under these sections which will depend upon local conditions are contemplated; otherwise if it should be only for obscenity or indecency, then it is the same everywhere and would come under section 292 of the Indian Penal Code.

" Since there is the necessity for guarding against the special danger that would be caused by exhibiting films such as the different campaigns in the war against Turkey in a Mohomedan centre, I have specially put in that if it is likely that the film exhibited would come under provisions of section 153-A of the Indian Penal Code, then it is better to restrict the film before exhibition. When under the guise of supplying news we have seen news-agencies sending forth long telegrams of flimsy witnesses exaggerating scenes of atrocities committed by one community against the other, the exhibitors of cinematographs will certainly be tempted to the manufacturing of such films as are likely to set one community against the other. Such films should be suppressed with a strong hand.

" On the other hand, there is the likelihood of this Bill working unnecessarily harshly, and any film that may not suit the taste of any censoring officer will be prohibited. I contend that it must be made clear that the censoring of a film should be on strong political or moral grounds, and the Censor may be required to state why he considers any film objectionable. A few years ago there was an incident of a film of a boxing match between a Johnson and a Jeffrey being proscribed in South Africa or America, simply because it portrayed the black Johnson defeating the white Jeffrey. When films advertising the valour of others are being freely admitted, that of the black Johnson alone need not be taken exception to and his being advertised need not be unjustly restricted. There was another incident of a 'gold rooster film' being prohibited in which a child in spite of all the obstacles placed in its way manages to go and play with a Negro boy and make common cause with him. I believe this Bill may not be used for censoring films on such silly grounds as are implied in these and other instances.

"Again, objection was taken to staging certain dramas not on account of any obscenity or immorality therein, but because somebody read some political or other allegorical meaning into the stories. The London 'Times' took exception to certain stories from the 'Mahabaratha' and the 'Ramayana' such as the 'Keechaka Vadha' and the revivifying of 'Ahalya' because some one was ingenious enough to suggest that these were caricatures or inuendos, that the bad characters suggested men in high authority and the oppressed suggested India. Any real attempt at libellous political caricature should certainly be put a stop to. But we should understand that any episode in ancient or modern literature may, if a man is ingenious enough, be squeezed to give some objectionable allegorical meaning. Simply because some biased theatrical or cinema company twists these plays in the manner mentioned, it would be unjust to censor these exhibitions outright. The 'Keechaka Vadha' and similar stories form part of the sacred literature of the Hindus, and very great indignation is felt when any such spectacular exhibitions are proscribed.

[5TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mr. Ayyangar; Sir William Vincent.]

"I would therefore by my amendment define what will be unsuitable. By 'indecency' in my amendment, I mean the same thing as obscenity in section 292 of the Indian Penal Code subject to the exception of religious plays and literatures. Three years ago there was a case of religious literature by name 'Kavadi Chinthu' being proscribed at Madras, and the order subsequently withdrawn after representations to the Local Government that this book came under religious literature. I hope such scenes as the 'Raslila' of Sri Krishna if represented will not be prohibited by this Act, and I may add the aspersions already cast on this subject by the gazetteer of the Muttra District has created a profound indignation among the Hindus.

"With these words I beg to move my amendment."

11-30 A.M.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"I am afraid, Sir, that I cannot accept this amendment. The Bill was very carefully considered by a Select Committee on which the non-official Members of this Council were strongly represented, and no such objection as that now made was then put forward. But my real objection to the proposal is this, that the words which the Hon'ble Member proposes to substitute for those now in the Bill are not sufficiently comprehensive, and that the acceptance of this amendment would impair the utility of the measure. There are, in my judgment, and, I hope, in the judgment of the Council too, many cases in which films might be unsuitable for exhibition, though they would not come within the mischief of the clause as the Hon'ble Member proposes to modify it.

"For instance, there might be films which would be offensive to the religious feelings of some community—that has happened in the past—the exhibition of which it might be desirable to prohibit. Similarly, there might be films discouraging recruiting or prejudicial to the conduct of the War; for instance—and this is quite a possibility—films illustrating some success of our enemy's in a manner which the military authorities considered undesirable. Then there might be films giving information which the military authorities similarly would not wish to have published in a picture. Again, there might be films which might have a very depraving effect upon the morality of children, or which might debase the public taste quite apart from their being indecent. It is well known that the influence of particular films upon children has been, as I stated in my opening speech in September, the subject of severe comment in England. None of these films would come within the mischief of the clause as the Hon'ble Member seeks to amend it. He has referred to an official Censor who might exercise his powers arbitrarily. I took some pains to explain, when I introduced this Bill, that the authority which will examine these films will not consist of one man, and that there will be a strong non-official element on it; and I think that there is therefore the less reason for restricting the discretion of this Board. As I say, if you make a definition which is not sufficiently comprehensive, you may be doing a very great deal of harm. And it would be most unfortunate not to give this Board the fullest power to prohibit films which might be injurious to children or offensive to others.

"For these reasons I am afraid I cannot accept the amendment on behalf of Government."

11-33 A.M.

The Hon'ble Mr. Ayyangar:—"Sir, I do not object to the censoring of films that are objected to by the Military authorities. I merely want to define the subject more clearly; and, as I have brought this to strengthen the hands of the Government, I want the Government to accept my simple suggestion......"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"I have already explained that I cannot accept the amendment on behalf of Government."

The Hon'ble Mr. Ayyangar:—"If the Military authorities object to it, I do not press for this. It was only to define what we meant by this Act that I put forward my amendment. We should know what we are about by this Act."

[The Vice-President; Mr. Ayyangar; Mr. Khaparde.] [5TH MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"Does the Hon'ble Member wish to press his amendment?"

The Hon'ble Mr. Ayyangar:—"If the Government are not for it, I do not want to take votes. We know the result."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"Then I take it that the Hon'ble Member withdraws his motion."

The motion was, by leave, withdrawn.

11-34 A.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde:—"My amendment, Sir, reads like this:—

'That in clause 7, sub-clauses (3), (4) and (5), for the words 'Local Government' the words 'High Court of the Province' be substituted.'

I put in this amendment because I look upon this Bill—and I hope this Council will also look upon this Bill—as a limitation sought to be imposed upon the liberties of the people. We all know that everybody can say what he likes, but he should not offend against section 499 of the Indian Penal Code. That is, he can say what he likes, but he should not defame anybody. Similarly, there are limitations of all sorts imposed all through the Penal Code, which makes this further limitation unnecessary, as one of the Judges has expressed it in the opinions circulated with the Bill; because all seditious matters, all matters which are likely to set one community against another, are already covered by section 153A and other sections of the Indian Penal Code.

"The intention of the present Bill is that nobody shall exhibit any picture by means of a cinematograph unless permitted to do so by the licensing authority; and then the license is to permit certain things only under these rules. Well, I find that the word 'suitable' used in this clause has not been defined in any other part of the Bill. Then supposing the licensing authority prohibit the exhibition of a film, the Bill provides that the appeal shall lie to the Local Government. My amendment proposes that, in place of the Local Government, the appeal should lie to the High Court. This amendment, I submit, is very necessary for this reason, that the action being more or less confined to the Magistracy, and, any special agency that may be brought into existence, the discretion vested in them is very liable to be abused. The word 'suitable,' as I have said, is not defined at all. What may appear suitable to one person may not appear suitable to another, and there is a great deal of room for the play of personal impressions in that matter. The appellate authority, really speaking, should be the High Court, which is in a better position to exercise discretion. I do not know exactly how the appeal allowed by the Act, as it stands, will work in this matter, whether there will be any discussion with the Local Government, or whether it will be merely by a petition presented by the aggrieved party, and either granted or refused. So, I submit, that it is very necessary in this particular case, more especially as the word 'suitable' is not defined, that the appeal should lie to the High Court In the case of an order under the Criminal Procedure Code for security, the appeal lies to the High Court—not exactly an appeal but a proceeding which comes very close to an appeal. It provides that the matter can be argued out and considered Now, in this particular instance, I think that similar discretion should be given; or, rather, that the discretion should be taken away from the purely executive officers and vested in the High Court. In the first instance, the District Magistrate or the licensing authority will either grant or refuse an application. If they grant it, the matter ends there. If they refuse it, then the aggrieved party will have, under my amendment, the power to go to the High Court and say that this discretion has been wrongly exercised. It would not be a matter of considering any evidence at all. Usually in matters of this kind there is not much evidence to be considered or adduced on either side. It will practically always be a question as to whether, under the circumstances that exist and are known to exist, the order deserves to be executed or does not deserve to be executed. The discretion, I submit, would be better vested in the High Court than in an executive officer. Under the Criminal Procedure Code, the same thing happens when a security is demanded from a Press, and it is the High Court which decides whether it shall be paid or not.

"There is a further reason why I press this amendment, and that is that, in matters where the liberty of the subject is to be curtailed, I believe it has always been the rule—at least so far as I know—it is rightly considered that the final decision should rest with a Court of Law. Under this Bill it would be in the power of a District Magistrate or in any other licensing authority to take away the liberty of a person to exhibit what particular pictures he likes, and this taking away of the liberty of the people should always pass through a Court of justice. In England, such matters are often settled by compromise. In India, there would be no compromise of this kind. I believe it will be simply an application made by a person who undergoes the expense of getting out the film and making all the arrangements for the exhibition; and, supposing the application is refused after he has spent a good deal of money already on it, it would be rather hard on him that he should have to depend entirely on one word issued probably without even a hearing. So, I submit, that my amendment does not make the Act unworkable; in fact it makes the Act more workable and more acceptable. The discretion to determine the meaning of the word 'suitable' under the circumstances as they arise is rather a great power, a high jurisdiction as I should say, to define a word which is not defined by law; and then that it should be vested in one particular individual, or even in a small group of individuals, I humbly submit, is very objectionable, more especially because, though in the executive branch of the Service there are very able people and very clever men, still they do not possess judicial experience and training that is gained by practice and by patient hearing in a matter of this description. My proposal, therefore, is that all appeals from individuals who have the power to grant permission for the exhibition of cinematographs should lie to the High Court. If it is thought that appeals would be a little difficult, and that revision petitions might be substituted, as they are under the Criminal Procedure Code, I would submit that in the Criminal Procedure Code there are distinct grounds set forth as to when an appeal would lie and as to when a revision petition would lie; in cases under this Act there are no specific grounds, and therefore an appeal would be better than a revision petition. I have also proposed that clause (6) of this section should be omitted altogether................"

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"I shall be glad if the Hon'ble Member will treat his amendments separately. I will put them separately to the Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde:—"In that case, these are the remarks which I have to offer on this amendment."

11-45 A.M.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Sir, I regret I am unable again to accept this amendment. My view is, and, I think, the view of many in this Council will be that the question whether a film is suitable for public exhibition or not is scarcely a matter for judicial decision. I also apprehend that the acceptance of the proposed amendment would involve considerable expense, delay and inconvenience to everybody. I would remind the Council that it is not in the power of the Local Government under this section to set aside the order of a licensing authority where a license has been granted; where a body consisting of a large number of non-officials and officials has certified that a film is fit for exhibition there the matter ends. It is only when they have refused to certify that an application will lie by the person aggrieved under section 7 (3). I will deal with 7 (4) and (5) later. Now, I do not think that the Hon'ble Judges of the Court would have before them the information or materials necessary for a proper decision as to whether a film was a suitable one or not. I doubt, also, whether they would be at all willing to undertake the duty of deciding such a point. I remember the remarks of Mr. Justice Stephen in a somewhat celebrated case of an analogous character under the Press Act, namely, in which he said that the Court had not the materials before it or the information to enable them to decide the question referred to them.

"Well, the Hon'ble Member has said that the liberty of the subject is curtailed, and therefore there should be an appeal to a judicial authority. I aver that the liberty of the subject is not really curtailed, and I must demur to the allegation that in such cases there is any question of a right of appeal to a judicial authority. So far as I am aware there is no precedent for such an appeal, nor is there in England any appeal whatever. Again, though in many of our Acts the authorities are authorised to impose particular restrictions on such things as public processions in towns and so on, I do not know of any case in which a right of appeal to the High Court is given. My view is, as I have said, that if we ask the Court to decide questions of this kind without evidence, we shall be placing them in an impossible position and, if a decision on these appeals is to be delayed until the evidence is forthcoming and affidavits filed, and so on, the maximum amount of delay, expense and inconvenience will be caused. I would remind Hon'ble Members again that the Boards constituted under the Act will not be Boards of one man, but comprise a number of non-officials. I really think, therefore, that the fears of the Hon'ble Member are somewhat exaggerated. It is quite true, however, that under clauses 4 and 5 action may be taken as regards particular Provinces by a District Magistrate. Even in such cases the order is not, I submit, a judicial but an executive one. In such circumstances, the proper authority to whom an appeal should lie is the Local Government, and not the High Court."

11-48 A.M.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde:—"Sir, It has been said that this does not refer to the liberty of the subject. I humbly submit, with due deference to the opinion of the Hon'ble the Home Member, that it does curtail the liberty of the subject. As I understand the word 'liberty' in British India and elsewhere, it is that you are entitled to do what you like to do unless it is prohibited by law or is believed to be injurious to others. Now, in this particular instance, the person who has chosen to invest his money in the purchase of a film does so in the expectation of being able to exhibit it either for his own private entertainment or the entertainment of his friends or for the purposes of its public exhibition for profit. Now, if a person tried to do this, his liberty is to this extent curtailed in that he could not do so unless with the permission of the Magistrate; to that extent there is curtailment of his liberty just as in the case of publishing, printing and so on.

"Well, then, as to the contention that was raised about the creation of a Board, in the Bill at any rate there is no indication of this Board so far as I can see. It may be that there is a Board intended, and that the constitution of that Board might be a matter for great congratulation so far as I am concerned; but I should like to see some provision about that in the Bill itself. If it springs up under executive orders the matter is something which at present is not before the Council, because the rules themselves are not before us; we only give power to the Local Governments to frame rules, and what those rules will be and how they will work is a matter entirely at present beyond the knowledge of the Council so far as I can see. Therefore, I submit that the High Court is the proper place where the liberties of the subject will be considered, and is also the proper place where limitations tried to be imposed on that liberty are likely to be best considered. The objection that the High Court would not have information is rather a double-edged objection. I should think that if the High Court is not placed in possession of sufficient evidence, how is it going to reach the executive authority to enable them to judge? Information, if it is to be information, would have, I believe, to be in writing, and could always be produced before the High Court, so that the materials on which the Magistracy would act would always be available for the High Court. So, in these circumstances, I submit that the proper authority to hear appeals would be the High Court as in the case of the Criminal Procedure Code, and not the executive authorities who have already decided the matter one way or the other. I wish the amendment put to the vote.

The amendment was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde :—" The second amendment which I have the honour to move is that sub-clause (6) of clause 7 be omitted. It runs as follows :—

'(6). The Local Government may of its own motion, by notification in the local official Gazette, direct that a film covered by a certificate valid in the Province shall be deemed to be an uncertified film in the whole or any part of the Province.'

" __, object is two-fold; in the first place action having been taken by a District Magistrate or a licensing authority, it appears unnecessary to give this further power to the Local Government, and, in the next place, supposing a license is granted and a person is permitted to exhibit a cinematograph in one part of the Province, if it is not allowed in another part, it would not be right. That looks a difficult point to work. It appears likely to be difficult in this way. In a matter of this kind it is necessary not only to be right, but one must appear to be right. Further, these reports are not based on personal knowledge; a Local Government must act on information supplied and that information is not tested by cross-examination; there is no counter evidence; the whole thing will be decided more or less on paper. There is therefore a chance of injury being done. I therefore submit that this power which it is proposed to give to the Local Government should be withdrawn altogether."

11-55 A.M.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Sir, I am in an unfortunate position to-day. I should be very glad to accept some of these amendments, but I am quite unable to do so without really injuring the Bill. If, however, I explain to the Council what the intention of this sub-clause is, I think they will agree that there really is no reason for omitting it. Under sub-clause (5), which the Hon'ble Member does not propose to touch, the Local Government may on the report of a District Magistrate direct that a particular film shall be deemed to be an uncertified film in the whole of the Province. That sub-clause the Hon'ble Member does not attack, he attacks sub-clause (6) only, which says that the Local Government may take this action of its own motion Now I fail to see myself why in such cases a report from a District Magistrate should necessarily be awaited. If the Government have information from some public association, we will say from a Muhammadan Association, that a film is likely to cause offence to Muhammadan feeling in the Province, although the film may have been passed in some other Province and the matter is emergent, why should it be necessary for the Local Government to await a report from a subordinate officer before taking action. As a matter of fact, I suppose the only result of retaining an obligation to wait for such a report would be that the Local Government would call for reports from District Magistrates until it got what it wanted. Take another case, let me take an instance in which a Magistrate in Bengal had reported a film to the Local Government as unfit for exhibition for some particular reason, and the Government of Bengal had accepted the recommendation under clause 5 and had cancelled the certificate so far as that Province is concerned. This power would remain unaffected by the Hon'ble Member's amendment. Surely it is not unreasonable that the Local Government of an adjacent Province in exactly the same position as Bengal should be authorised to take action in respect of the film without going through the formality of awaiting a report from a District Magistrate, and this is the power which the clause confers. I am afraid, in these circumstances, that I cannot accept this amendment."

[Mr. M. A. Jinnah; Sir William Vincent; Mr. Khaparde.] [5TH MARCH, 1918.]

11-58 A.M. The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—"Sir, after hearing the Hon'ble the Home Member I still have difficulty in accepting his reason. It seems to me that clause 7, if I have read it correctly, comes to this. First of all you have a Board and that Board will certify or uncertify films that are suitable for exhibition. After a decision is given, it is open to a person who wants to exhibit a film to appeal against the order of the Board if not certified. That is provided for in sub-clause 3. Then the Local Government has power on his appeal to decide whether the decision of the Board was correct or not. Similarly, after the decision of the Board it is open to the government machinery under sub-clause 5, that is the Magistrate or District Magistrate, to suspend the certificate given by the Board pending an order of the Local Government; of course the Magistrate will have to state his reasons why he thinks this certificate should be suspended. So you have on the one hand the remedy given to the subject to appeal against an order made by the Board against him, and on the other hand, you have a remedy given to the Government—to their machinery, that is it to say to the District Magistrate, when his attention is called to the matter that, notwithstanding the granting of a certificate, it may be suspended. It seems to me that sub-clause 6 is superfluous, because it says that the Local Government may of its own motion move in the matter which is to grant a power and unnecessary in view of sub-clause 5. The Hon'ble the Home Member gave an example that supposing our District Magistrates or Presidency Magistrates do not move in the matter, but supposing we get some independent information such as he cited from a Muhammadan Association . . . "

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"From anybody."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—"Or from any responsible person or body or association. Now, Sir, the answer is this. Will the Government really act upon the ex parte information without making further inquiries? Will the Government do so? Will it be safe for the Government to do so? They can always move the Magistrate. Then where is the necessity of this power? If you get a representation from an individual or an association or a body, then necessarily the Local Government must institute inquiries. Otherwise it comes to this, Sir, that purely on an ex parte report or information from a person or body or organization, the Government will be satisfied and make the order of their own motion. That I cannot imagine. Very well, then, the Government must naturally, if it is in the district or towns, refer the matter to the Magistrate, or they must refer the matter to the district officers, and it will be after all upon the information from their own subordinate officers that they will move. Therefore, Sir, it seems to me that instead of having this clause there is sufficient guarantee to secure to Government to have a film that has been certified by the Board uncertified through the machinery of the District Magistrate or the Presidency Magistrate. I must, therefore, say that I am really not satisfied as to what utility there is of this sub-clause (6), and therefore I give my support to the Hon'ble Mover."

12-4 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde :—"Sir, after the explanation given by my friend Mr. Jinnah, it appears unnecessary to dwell at any length on that aspect of the case which he has put forward so ably. I only wish to point out that it has been said that my amendment leaves clause 5 altogether untouched and merely objects to clause 6. I humbly submit that the Council will remember that in my earlier amendment I did propose that the words 'High Court of the Province' should be substituted for the words 'Local Government' in clause 5. So my original amendment as it was made was all right, namely, I proposed to substitute the words 'High Court of the Province' for the words 'Local Government,' and I now propose that sub-clause (6) of clause 7 be omitted. Even now, though my earlier amendment has been disallowed, I submit that the arguments I urged in support of that amendment still remain, and those arguments have been further supported by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Jinnah."

[5TH MARCH, 1918.] [Sir William Vincent; The Vice-President; Major-General A. H. Bingley.]

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"May I say one word? If it is not in accordance with the rules I would rather not speak."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—"I think the Council would like to hear what the Hon'ble Member has to say."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"I desire only to make it clear with reference to what Mr. Jinnah said that the point which he made would not cover the instances that I cited of films exhibited in one Province which might for similar reasons be considered undesirable in an adjacent Province. I may say also that I do not think that really there is any probability that the Local Government would set aside a decision arrived at by a competent authority of its own nomination without making proper inquiries unless there was clear necessity for intervention and the matter was a very emergent one in which immediate action was necessary." 12-5 P.M.

The motion was then put and negatived.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"Sir, I move that the Bill as amended, be passed."

The motion was put and agreed to.

THE INDIAN ARMY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble Major-General A. H. Bingley :—"Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill further to amend the Indian Army Act, 1911. The objects of the Bill are so clearly set forth in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, that it hardly seems necessary for me to supplement the latter. 12-6 P.M.

"The Council may, however, like to know something about the policy which has led to the introduction of this Bill, with a brief outline of some of its more important provisions.

"So long as field operations were confined to minor expeditions of short duration, generally, on the frontiers of India, the disciplinary code provided by the Indian Army Act was found to be generally satisfactory, and there appeared to be little necessity for altering its provisions. The present war, however, has led to the employment of Indian troops in almost every theatre of war in which His Majesty's Forces are engaged, and, owing to the varied conditions arising from such employment and the long duration of hostilities, several defects in the Indian Army Act have come to light, calling for early remedy. Other defects have also disclosed themselves, suggesting the desirability of improvements from the point of view of peace administration.

"Certain amendments, designed to remove these defects were accepted by this Council last year, and it is now proposed to take further steps in the same direction, by adopting certain provisions of the English Army Act and the Indian Code of Criminal Procedure, and making them part of our Indian Military Law.

"For instance, it is proposed to abolish dismissal from the service as a necessary consequence of a sentence of rigorous imprisonment of over three months.

"Another change proposed, is the assimilation of the punishments awardable under the Indian Army Act, for offences committed against the person and property of an inhabitant of the country in which the soldier is on active service, with those awardable under the English Army Act, thus rendering British and Indian soldiers liable to the same punishment for such offences.

"It has been found that suspension from rank, pay and allowances for prolonged periods is a very undesirable punishment for Indian Officers and

[Major-General A. H. Bingley.] [5TH MARCH, 1918.]

Warrant Officers, and it is therefore proposed to limit such suspension to a maximum period of two months.

"Similarly, it is proposed to introduce 'reprimand' or 'severe reprimand' as a suitable punishment for offences which are not of a serious nature, so as to place Indian Officers on the same footing in this respect as British Officers.

"Under the English Army Act, forfeiture of pay is one of the punishments awardable for offences on active service. As it stands, this punishment is not provided for in the Indian Army Act. It is therefore proposed to assimilate Indian to British practice in this matter, thereby providing an alternative, in some cases, to severer and perhaps less suitable punishments.

"Another instance of assimilation of the kind referred to, may be mentioned. It is proposed to provide for the forfeiture by an Indian soldier of a proportion of his pay and allowances when he is detained in hospital by reason of sickness certified to have been caused by his own misconduct or imprudence. This penalty is already enforced in the case of the British soldier, and its extension to the Indian soldier in like circumstances will, it is thought, prove salutary to the individual, as well as beneficial to the State.

"Under the Indian Army Act, as it stands at present, an Indian soldier awarded imprisonment in the field when serving overseas, has to be returned to India, as soon as possible, to undergo his sentence. It is now proposed to provide for the confinement of such offenders in a suitable manner in the country in which they are serving. The advantages derivable from such a course are so obvious that it hardly seems necessary to specify them.

"The Indian Army Act empowers a Court-martial to try civil offences in certain cases—for example, when the offender is serving out of British India—and to award the punishments prescribed for such offences under the Indian Penal Code Although, in such circumstances, a fine is one of the punishments awardable, the Indian Army Act does not itself provide the machinery necessary for the recovery of such a fine. The amendment now proposed will remedy this defect.

"In the exceptional conditions brought about by the war, it has been found desirable, in certain cases, to grant conditional pardons or remissions of sentences to military offenders. Provision for the grant of such conditional pardons and remissions exists in the Indian Criminal Procedure Code, but it was not considered legally possible to resort to the provisions of that Code in respect of Court-martial sentences. It is, therefore, necessary that such powers should be included in the Indian Army Act itself, and one of the amendments now proposed provides for this addition.

"The restitution of property in respect of which an offence has been committed is provided for under the Indian Code of Criminal Procedure, as well as under the English Army Act. No provision for such restitution exists, however, in the Indian Army Act. It is accordingly proposed to introduce an amendment to make good this defect.

"Last year, this Council passed the Suspension of Sentences Act, so as to enable General Officers Commanding to give the Indian soldier the same opportunity of retrieving his character as has been given to the British soldier. Many of the amendments now proposed are in furtherance of the same policy of clemency, the object of Government being that power of punishment should be restricted to what is essential to the maintenance of a high standard of discipline, and to approximate the provisions of our Indian Military Code in this respect to those of the English Military Code on which it is modelled.

"The only other amendment that I need mention is, the substitution of the word 'Indian' for 'Native' wherever it occurs in the Indian Army Act. This amendment is, of course, only verbal, but it is in accordance with popular sentiment and in conformity with what is now the accepted practice in similar cases."

The motion was put and agreed to.

[5TH MARCH, 1918.] [Major-General A. H. Bingley; Sir Claude Hill; Sir William Meyer.]

The Hon'ble Major-General A. H. Bingley :—"Sir, I now introduce the Bill, and move that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee, consisting of the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes, the Hon'ble Khan Zulfikar Ali Khan, the Hon'ble Sardar Bahadur Sardar Sundar Singh Majithia, the Hon'ble Subadar Major and Honorary Captain Ajab Khan, Sardar Bahadur, the Hon'ble Lieutenant-Colonel S. L. Aplin, the Hon'ble Colonel A. J. Caruana and myself, with instructions to report on or before the 13th March, 1918." 12-13 P. M.

The motion was put and agreed to.

THE INDIGO CESS BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill :—"Sir, in moving that the Bill to provide for the levy of a cess on indigo exported from British India be taken into consideration, it had been my intention to add nothing to what I said in explaining the nature of this very short Bill when moving for its introduction, especially since no criticism has been received and no amendment suggested since that date. But by the courtesy of an Hon'ble Member of this Council, I have been put in possession of a criticism of the Bill, which appears to have been published on February 27th by a paper called 'Young India,' and I think Council would wish me to describe to it that criticism. The writer of the article in question says in the first place, 12-15 P. M.

'We do not think that the levy of an export duty on indigo is the particular form recommended by the expert,' and goes on to ask 'to whom then are we indebted for the revival of this idiotic system?'

He then proceeds to say that the proper form in which to recover the necessary funds is by a levy on the Bihar Planters' Association. Well this Council is better informed than the writer of the article, and is aware that the Bihar Planters' Association is merely a political or domestic association of the planters, and not a commercial concern, as appears to be the idea of the writer. But then, after reading so far with some concern, I was refreshed by a later sentence in the article which suggests the levy of 'an export duty on cotton' instead of on indigo! and this is his design for raising money for the indigo industry after having condemned the whole system of export duty on principle!

"Well Sir, no other criticism has been received and no other observation, so far as I know, made on the Bill, and I do not think this Council will wish seriously to discuss the only alternative suggested, namely, the substitution of an export duty on cotton. I therefore move that the Bill to provide for the levy of a cess on indigo exported from British India be taken into consideration."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill :—"I beg to move, Sir, that the Bill be passed."

The motion was put and agreed to.

THE INDIAN COINAGE BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"I beg to move that the Bill further to amend the Indian Coinage Act, 1906, be taken into consideration. On the 20th of February, in introducing the Bill, I explained its object. It is a simple measure to provide for the substitution of a nickel two-anna piece for the silver two-anna piece at present current. We have had no criticism on the Bill; I therefore now move that it be taken into consideration." 12-17 P. M.

The motion was put and agreed to.

[Sir William Meyer; Sir Hamilton Grant; Mr. Srinivasa Sastri.] [5TH MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"I now move, Sir, that the Bill be passed."

The motion was put and agreed to.

THE CRIMINAL JUSTICE ADEN (AMENDMENT) BILL.

12-19 P. M. The Hon'ble Sir Hamilton Grant :—"I move, Sir, that the Bill to amend the law to provide for the administration of criminal justice at Aden be taken into consideration".

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir Hamilton Grant :—"I move, that the Bill be now passed."

The motion was put and agreed to.

RESOLUTION RE INCLUSION OF CERTAIN SUBJECTS AMONG THE SUBJECTS FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION.

12-20 P. M. The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri :—"Sir, I beg to move the following Resolution :—

'That this Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that the Secretary of State for India be requested to include Indian History, and Persian, Arabic, and Sanskrit among the subjects for the examination for the Indian Civil Service.'

I should state at the outset that under the regulations which are now current, Arabic and Sanskrit are already among the subjects included for this examination. Indian History and Persian are not. The Public Services Commission, however, have recommended the removal of Sanskrit and Arabic from the subjects, and it is with reference to that recommendation that I have framed this Resolution for the inclusion of all the four among the subjects included for the examination.

"It will be within the recollection of this Council that, during the discussion at the Simla Session last year, it was made clear that the Commission had recommended that the candidates for the examination proceeding from India should produce along with the others a certificate of having attended for three years at a recognised school in Great Britain till within six months immediately preceding the examination, unless specially exempted from the production of such a certificate. It also came out that the Commission had recommended a considerable reduction of the age-limits for this examination. It was therefore feared, and I think with good reason, that these recommendations might have the effect of shutting the English door on the Indian candidates while nominally keeping it open. I do not know whether it was in consequence of this fact or for any other reason, that the Commission have recommended now that Sanskrit and Arabic should be removed from the list of subjects. There is nothing in their report to indicate the reasons which guided them in making this recommendation, nor am I able to see anything in the evidence which might support that course of action. On the contrary, here and there in the evidence, there has been, on the part of Indian witnesses especially, a desire that Indian History and Persian should be introduced among the subjects. This is obviously intended, I may at once admit, in order to afford some facilities for the candidates who proceed from India to sit for this examination, and it is the more necessary that this should be done because, if our desires on this subject are at all to be fulfilled, the restrictive recommendations to which I alluded a minute ago, namely, that the age-limits should be reduced and that candidates should produce a certificate of having received three years' education in Great Britain, should likewise go. If those desires of ours be fulfilled, then there is a possibility of some Indian candidates appearing in England for this examination. In order to enable them to compete more nearly on equal terms with the English candidates, it would be desirable to introduce some subjects which they might be expected to have studied carefully in India. I am aware that the course of studies for this examination is modelled more or less on the lines of what obtains in the English Universities and in the English High Schools, in order to enable English candidates to compete without special preparation for it. But I think that system will in no way be impaired and the chances of the English candidates will in no way suffer by reason of the recommendation that we make here. For it is only amongst the optional subjects that these will be introduced, and no English candidate will be under a compulsion to choose any of these subjects unless he desires to do so. If, therefore, I make this recommendation it is with the full confidence that, while it may benefit those Indian candidates who appear at the examination, it will not in any way prejudice the English candidates appearing at the same examination.

"I move, Sir, that these subjects be introduced among the subjects for the examination for the Indian Civil Service."

The Hon'ble Sir James Walker :—" Sir, the terms of this Resolution were a little perplexing to me in that they referred to Sanskrit and Arabic as not being included, while, as a matter of fact, at present these subjects carry two hundred marks more than the French, German or Italian languages, including the history of the language and literature of those tongues, rather heavy subjects. 12-25 P.M.

" Sir, I regard the Resolution as really a protest against the counsel of despair given by the Public Services Commission in the matter of making the open competitive examination an avenue to the service by which Indian recruits can be obtained in any appreciable numbers, and in that sense, Sir, I heartily support the Resolution.

" Sir, the Public Services Commission, as I understand them, distinctly came to the conclusion that the open competition must be kept open to all without distinction of race, and also that it cannot be confined to candidates educated only in Europe. Well, if that was really their genuine conclusion, I entirely fail to understand why they did not definitely allude to their reasons for striking out two subjects which are so universally studied in India, and which actually hold a place already in the list of subjects. I trust the Hon'ble Mover has studied the small library which constitutes the Commission's Report. I only profess to have looked at the Report itself and annexure 10. I cannot find there any statement on the subject, but what I would conjecture led the Commission not to specify a reason must have been that they felt that the retaining of these subjects in the conditions under which the examination is proposed by them to be held would be practically an empty farce. I allude of course particularly not only to the striking out of these subjects, but to the reduction of age to the school-leaving age from the college-leaving age. Well, Sir, I do not suppose that I shall be expected to argue that selection at the school-leaving age stands condemned by its results, seeing that I myself, and I suppose every other Civilian in this Council, are the products of that system. In fact, I should say that I agree with the Commission that, on the whole, for the selection of Europeans, and Europeans only, the balance of advantages is rather with selection at the school-leaving age. But I certainly think that the Commission have very much exaggerated the disadvantages of selecting the British candidates at a later age, and I think that these disadvantages are quite infinitesimal compared with the disadvantage of not making the competition one at which Indian educated candidates have a fair chance of success. For one thing, of course, it is obviously most irritating for the Commission to protest as they do and then to make the conditions such that there is no reasonable chance of success. It is not merely on sentimental grounds that it is eminently desirable that Indian recruits of the Service should enter by the same portal as their British compeers That portal ought to be the front door and not any side entrance. I think it is a great pity that the Commission did not more seriously tackle the problem of trying to devise an examination, fixed about the age at which Indians in their hundreds proceed to Europe merely to pass for the Bar and giving a fair weight to the subjects which they study in their ordinary educational life out here. That problem is no doubt a difficult one, but I do not think it is incapable of solution.

"Well, Sir, as regards the question of Indian History and Persian, they are on the same footing as the two other subjects, except that they have not actually got a place in the list. I will read to the Council what the Commission say on this point. It runs as follows:—

> 'If there is one proposition pressed upon us more than another by the educational witnesses in England, it was that an external competitive examination, if it is not to do injury, must be closely adjusted to the subjects which are actually being learnt by the candidates in the normal course of their educational life.'

If these observations have any application to India, it seems to me not possible that any of the four subjects mentioned by the Hon'ble Mover can be excluded.

"For these reasons, Sir, I beg to support the Resolution."

12-31 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea :—" Sir, I desire to associate myself with the Resolution which my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sastri has moved. I only wish my Hon'ble friend had made the scope of his Resolution a little wider. The Public Services Commission have not recommended the inclusion of Political Science, Economics, or Modern History among the subjects prescribed for the open competitive examination. I think those subjects ought to be included, and I wish my Hon'ble friend had included them in his Resolution. I may say, as being in close touch with Indian students who from time to time proceed from Bengal to England for the open competitive examination, that these are among the subjects to which preference is given by them, and in respect of which they hope to score high marks. If the results of these examinations are tested and examined, it will be found that the successful Indian candidates have generally obtained considerable marks in these subjects.

"Sir, my Hon'ble friend over there has observed that the open competitive examination should be kept open. It seems to me that the exclusion of Arabic and Persian would have the effect of closing the door of the open competitive examination as against Indian candidates. Sir, there was no greater opponent of Oriental education than Lord Macaulay. We people of India owe him a great debt of gratitude for having introduced English education; but, in that great Minute that he wrote in or about 1835 giving preference to English education, he also wrote a diatribe against Oriental education and against our classics. A Committee was appointed, and Lord Macaulay was the President of that Committee, and the Committee recommended the holding of open competitive examinations for the Indian Civil Service. Lord Macaulay had no sympathy for Sanskrit or Arabic or for the Eastern classics Now let me read an extract from the Minute in which he recommended that Sanskrit and Arabic should form prescribed subjects in the open competitive examination for the Indian Civil Service. This is what he wrote, the extract is a short one:

> 'These classical languages are by no means without intrinsic value in the eyes both of philologists and men of taste. Sanskrit is the great parent stock from which most of the vernacular languages of India are derived, and stands to them in a relation similar to that in which Latin stands to French, Italian, Spanish, and Portuguese. Arabic has contributed, though not in the same proportion as Sanskrit, to the formation of the vocabularies of India, and it is the source from which the Muhammadan nations derive their religion, their jurisprudence, and their science.'

Then he goes on to add :—

'They can be learnt here in England as well as in the East, and they are not likely to be studied in the East unless some attention has been paid to them here.'

"Therefore, even Lord Macaulay recommended in 1853 that these two languages should be included among the subjects prescribed for the open competitive examination With his prejudice against Oriental classics he recommended that only 375 marks be given to them. I think the number of marks allotted to Western classics was 800 if my memory serves me aright These marks were raised to 500. Then, again, there was a change after Satyendra Nath Tagore, brother of Sir Rabindranath Tagore, had passed the open competitive examination. I think that was in 1863 or 1864; and, for some reason or other after he had passed, the marks for Sanskrit and Arabic were reduced from 500 to 375, and the late Manomohan Ghose, who was a candidate and who felt himself seriously handicapped by this reduction, wrote a strong protest against it, which at the time excited a considerable measure of public attention. Then subsequently the marks were raised from 375 to 500, and at that figure these marks, I think, have ever since remained. There ought to go forth an unanimous protest from the people of India against the abolition of our great classical languages from the curriculum of studies prescribed for the open competitive examination for the Indian Civil Service. Sir, is it possible, I ask, to know a people well and properly—int he words of General Gordon, 'to enter into their skins—without knowing their language, without knowing their history, without being able to talk to them in their own vernaculars? Sympathy is and ought to be the watchword of the Indian Administration. 'Sympathy,' said His Majesty, the King-Emperor, 'should be the key-note of our administration.' I ask, is it possible to sympathise with an alien people, to understand them, to know them in their homes and to know them as they live in their daily lives, without being conversant with their language and their history? My Hon'ble friend has properly included Indian History as one of the subjects which ought to be included in the curriculum of studies. An Englishman, not knowing the great past of India, not knowing our glorious moral and spiritual record, might take us to be so many Zulus. Surely he ought not to come out to this country with an estimate of that kind. Surely he ought to know something of the glories of ancient India and of the past achievements of the great races over whom he is called upon to rule? And, therefore, it is a matter of the first importance that he should know our literature and language; and he can only know them properly through the medium of Sanskrit and Arabic. It seems to me marvellous how the Public Services Commission could formulate a suggestion which would exclude these two languages. I am afraid that taint runs through the whole of their recommendations, and I trust this Council will unanimously accept—there is every indication from the speech we have just listened to—that the Council will unanimously accept the Resolution of my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sastri.

"Persian ought to be included in the curriculum of studies prescribed for candidates for the open competitive examination. It is a great language. I do not know Persian nor French; but I have been given to understand that Persian is as sweet, as mellifluous, as copious, and rich in its vocabulary as French. It is really the French of the East. Surely a tribute ought to be paid to the great Eastern races by prescribing a language to which they attach such great importance. Evidently the Public Services Commission did not possess, in a superlative degree, the gift of imagination, which is the supreme gift of all connected with matters of administration. If they did, I am sure they would have recommended Persian and Indian History, and I am surprised that they have recommended the exclusion of Arabic and Sanskrit which have ever been the fixed subjects for study for candidates of the Indian Civil Service ever since we have had an open competitive examination, that is, since 1855: I hope, Sir, there will be a unanimous vote on the Resolution and the official Members will stand by us in this matter."

12-40 P.M. The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru :—" Sir, I desire to wholeheartedly associate myself with my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri. Sir James Walker has been good enough to remind us that there should be the same front door open for Indians as for Europeans As an Indian I should consider it very offensive to my self-respect if I was admitted to any high position by any back door. But while I do appreciate the suggestion made by the Hon'ble Sir James Walker may I, in all humility, be permitted to ask him what is the good of keeping the front door open for us when that front door is not equidistant so far as the Indian and the European are concerned? You might as well have the front door in the North Pole and say 'Well, here is the front door for the Indians open and therefore they can have no grievance at all; they have only to reach the North Pole and then they can sit for the examination and enter the Service' If we are to enter the Civil Service through the front door, what are the steps by which we can reach that front door? So far as Europeans are concerned, we find that in England in the public schools the boys read either Latin or Greek or any one of the modern Continental languages. Therefore, so far as they are concerned, it cannot be very difficult for them to enter by the front door. On the other hand, look at our country and at the education that is given to our boys, and that must continue to be given for generations to come. In our infancy we are either taught Urdu or Hindi; as we grow we are taken over Persian or Sanskrit or Arabic; and then when we want to enter the Civil Service by the front door what do we find? We find that all the years that we have spent at home in acquiring a knowledge of Persian or Sanskrit or Urdu or Hindi are practically of no utility to us so far as competition at this open examination is concerned. I submit it is starting our boys with a handicap against their European compeers to ask them to enter into a competition in subjects which they have not learnt in India, and over which they can acquire at best a very imperfect mastery during the two or three years of their stay in England. Therefore, I submit, let us not make too much of this theory of the front door; let us remember that it is not one but a series of obstacles to which we are subject. I am astonished that the Public Services Commission should have disposed of an important branch of the subject so summarily. So far as Arabic and Sanskrit are concerned, they are to be excluded; so far as Persian and Indian History are concerned, well, there is practically not one word about them. It is, no doubt, true that the Commission do in their Report lay great stress upon the young Civilians knowing Indian History; but I fancy that their recommendations are in the nature of a pious hope that these men, after they have passed their competitive examination may devote themselves to the study of Indian History. But what I submit is this; if Indian History has got to be carefully studied, why not make it one of the subjects which candidates may offer and which in the case of Indian students would be of the greatest possible utility? Similarly, with regard to Persian. I submit, therefore, that so far as Indian students are concerned, they are very much affected by some of the retrogressive suggestions of the Public Services Commission—retrogressive, no doubt, from the point of view of Indians. I think the Resolution of Mr. Sastri is an eminently fair and just one, and should be accepted. You cannot reduce the age for examination from its present level to seventeen or eighteen, and then ask our young boys to perform miracles by going six thousand miles from this country. I would ask those who advocate the continuance of such handicaps to put themselves in the position of Indian parents and Indian boys, and then ask themselves how they would have felt if similar handicaps had been imposed upon them."

The Hon'ble Mr. E. H. C. Walsh:—"I rise, Sir, to support this Resolution. As the Hon'ble Sir James Walker has pointed out, the subjects of Sanskrit and Arabic are already at the present time included in the subjects prescribed for the Indian Civil Service examination. But the origin of this motion I understand to be the recommendation of the Public Services Commission as to the subjects prescribed for the examination which they propose in which Sanskrit and Arabic are omitted. I think it probable that they have omitted those subjects because their scheme is for a reduction of the present age of admission and for an examination to be based upon the education given in the English public schools, in which those subjects, naturally, are not taught at present, neither is there any likelihood of their being taught in the future. Whether their recommendations in this respect will be accepted or not cannot be said, but at the same time, I think that it is only fair that even if the age be reduced and the subjects for the examination are such as are at present taught in the public schools in England, Indian candidates should be given the advantage of the time which they have devoted to the study of Sanskrit and Arabic, and the inclusion of these subjects will not give them any unfair advantage as against English boys who necessarily have a corresponding advantage in their knowledge of Latin and Greek. I think, also, that Indian candidates should have the advantage of their study of Persian and Indian History. There is no doubt that here, again, there is not necessarily any unfair advantage; as English boys will have the corresponding advantage of their study of European modern languages and of English History. Therefore, whether the age for the examination is reduced, as is proposed by the Civil Service Commissioners, or whether the age is retained as at present—which point has not yet been decided—I think that in both cases it is desirable that Sanskrit and Arabic and Persian and Indian History should all be subjects for the examination. If it should be the decision to keep the age at the present standard, I think there is still more reason for the inclusion of these subjects, because then it would provide an inducement for English students to take them up at an earlier period than they do at present, which, I think, would be a great advantage in giving them that extra period for their study.

12 47 P.M.

"In regard to this I would point out one misapprehension which perhaps, may have arisen from the remarks of the Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea, which is that these subjects should be included so that Englishmen may come out to this country with some knowledge of these classical languages and with some knowledge of Indian History. If this were so, that would be the highest reason for including those subjects; but, as a matter of fact, although these subjects are not included in the open examination, Sanskrit, Persian and Indian History are the subjects in which the candidates have to undergo their training during the time in England before they come out to India, and in which they have to pass their periodical and final examination. I think the Council should not be in any misapprehension on that point. It is not that the exclusion of these subjects from the open examination will have the effect of bringing out to India Civilians ignorant of these languages and ignorant of Indian History; but it is in the one case that even if the age for the examination be reduced, as proposed by the Public Services Commission, it is desirable to give equality of treatment at the examination to Indian candidates who have studied these subjects with English candidates who have a corresponding advantage in having studied Latin and Greek, and Modern European languages; and in the other, that if the age should be retained as at present, it is still more desirable as, in addition to the above reasons, it is very desirable to give an inducement to English candidates to take up those subjects at an earlier date than they at present do.

"Apart from the educational value of the study of Sanskrit and Arabic, and, to a less extent, Persian as classical languages, and the advantages to Civilians of a knowledge of their literature, the knowledge of Sanskrit and Persian is of practical use in acquiring a knowledge of the vernacular languages which are based on them. That has been very clearly expressed in the extract from the report of Lord Macaulay's Commission which has been read by the Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea. They also have this practical value not only for English candidates to facilitate their learning the vernaculars but also in the case of Indians who are required to learn vernaculars other than their own. I have had a good deal to do with the departmental examinations of Civilians and Deputy Collectors, and I have found sometimes that an Indian candidate who speaks one vernacular appears to have difficulty in acquiring another, which seems strange considering that those vernaculars are derived from the same classical language. The inclusion of these languages is, therefore, desirable from the practical, as well as from the literary, point of view. Therefore, whether the age-limit is reduced or whether it is retained as at present, in either case I strongly support the present Resolution."

[Mr. E. H. C. Walsh; Mr. Ayyangar.] [5TH MARCH, 1918.]

12-53 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Ayyangar:—"I would like to commend this Resolution to the favourable consideration of this Council, not on the ground put forth by the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri that it will facilitate Indian candidates succeeding in the Indian Civil Service examination if Indian subjects are prescribed, but on a different ground; and that ground is on the merit of the study of these subjects themselves.

"The one reason why even after a hundred and fifty years of British rule the individual members of the British race find themselves estranged from the people is due to lack of their appreciation of Indian literature and India's unique culture. It is in the interests of both the great communities of the world that some stimulus should be given to the study of India's classical literature in Western countries, at least to the future rulers of India. It is advantageous to India, because to study them means to cultivate regard for the inheritors of that culture and love them. All Civilians, teachers, and others who have studied the ancient language have treated Indians with sympathy and consideration. As some remarked the study of Sanskrit takes away the animalism in man and puts forth in its place the superior wisdom and higher outlook of life characteristic of the Oriental. How Indianised that learned scholar Max Müller came to be was seen after his deep study of the Oriental language. In the person of Sir George Birdwood, only because of his great Oriental Scholarshship, India had a great friend.

"Then if at all India can do any service to England it is by grafting some of its ancient civilisation, and this can be done only if Englishmen can read our literature at least for the sake of getting through an examination. I am tempted to quote the words of Sir Thomas Munro 'if civilisation is to become an article of trade between the two countries I am convinced that this country (England) will gain by the important cargo'. Though quoted a hundred years ago it had not gone out of date. It will also help rulers a great deal to understand India and simplify the difficult process of ruling the great nation. Though not a scholar of Persian or Arabic myself like the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea I know these languages favourably compare with Sanskrit in all respects. Then in the matter of Indian History, I am surprised that it is not included in the syllabus of studies. Only after the Resolution I glanced at the syllabus to satisfy myself if it has not been included, for I could not conceive of the agents paid to rule over us not being asked to study the history of the people they are going to handle. Perhaps they come to India filled with all the grandfatherly tales of the Maharatta and Rohilla wars, the tough fight with the Sikhs or the Afghans, or the horrible tragedies of the Black Hole, and the Sepoy Mutiny. Now I can guess the misunderstanding and the lack of sympathy if the administrators of an alien culture should come to a quite different atmosphere, not knowing the culture or the ancient history of the people, how their ancestors were dealt with in the past, and what gratitude should be shown to them in the future. These are things which I should think every Indian Civil Service candidate must learn better than any number of Homers and Virgils. For these reasons I strongly support the Resolution."

[5TH MARCH, 1918.] [Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma; Mr. Shafi.]

12-58 P.M.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"Sir, we non-officials are extremely gratified at the attitude taken up by official Members, such as the Hon'ble Sir James Walker and the Hon'ble Mr. Walsh, towards this Resolution. It is not difficult to understand the logical consistency of the Public Services Commissioners or the various recommendations they have made on the subject. The decision of the Government of India will depend on their attitude towards two alterations which the Public Service Commissioners have recommended: firstly, that the age-limit should be lowered and secondly, that candidates, including those from India, should be restricted to residence at a British school for three years and for six months before the examination. If these restrictions are to obtain I do not see that we need quarrel with the recommendations of the Public Services Commission No public schools in England can be expected to teach Sanskrit or Indian History. The Commissioners really contemplated the exclusion from the examination of Indians. Therefore, the decision chiefly depends upon the attitude of the Government of India towards the above recommendations. I feel that the attitude of Government at the Simla Session practically settled the question. If the age-limit is not to be reduced then it follows logically that there is absolutely no necessity for the removal of Sanskrit or Arabic from the curriculum, the subjects being there at present. I do not think there would be any difficulty whatever in including Persian or Indian History. Then Mr. Walsh said that even if the age-limit be lowered, there is no reason why these subjects should not be included in the curriculum; there would still be something to be said in favour of inclusion, but, as a matter of practical politics, if the restriction that the Commissioners recommended of residence in a college or British school for three years be not removed, I see no good from their inclusion. I feel sure that with the support now accorded by the official Members to us, the recommendation of the Public Services Commissioners would not be accepted by the Government of India. If that be not accepted, then it follows that these subjects can be included in the curriculum.

"I have only to make just one more observation, and that is this. The suggestions of the Public Services Commissioners, if adopted, would lead to the production of one type among Civil servants what may be said to be History-Law Graduates—English, Mathematics Greek or Latin up to the school course would correspond to our own Matriculation or Intermediate standard, and the training or knowledge acquired cannot therefore be of a very high standard. Then what is taught in the University or post-examination course is said to include a modern language, vernacular or Sanskrit and History, subjects with a little law. The net result would be the production, on a large scale, of History-Law Graduates, and I do not think such a thing can be contemplated without some misgivings. I hope to see a variety among the Indian Civil Service men, and not that they should be all History-Law Graduates. For that reason also, Sir, I hope the Government of India will be able to see their way to accept the proposals of the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri."

1-2 P.M.

The Hon'ble Mr. Shafi:—"Sir, I desire to associate myself whole-heartedly with my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sastri in the object which he has in view in bringing forward this Resolution. The action taken by him has been obviously necessitated by the recommendations of the Public Services Commission in connection with the subjects mentioned in his Resolution. In England, the study of a classical language and at the same time of one of the modern languages has come to be a part and parcel of an English youth's education and, I suppose, it is for this reason that the list of subjects which it is open to a candidate in England to take up for the competitive examination includes Latin and Greek on the one hand, and French, Italian and other modern languages on the other. For the same reasons, out here in India, both amongst the Hindus and Muhammadans, it is now almost a recognised rule for the Hindu and Muhammadan students in our schools and colleges to take up one of the two classical languages, I mean either Sanskrit or Arabic, and at the same time to adopt as part of their curriculum one or other of the modern Oriental languages. It seems to me, therefore, that it would be opposed to principles of fair-play to shut our Indian candidates for the competitive examination in England out of a chance of taking up both Sanskrit and a modern language or Arabic and Persian, as the case may be, for the purposes of competing with their European brethren The justice of my Hon'ble friend's contention is, so far as I have been able to understand, acknowledged by all Members of this Council, and I trust the Government of India will be pleased to adopt the proposals mentioned in the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri's Resolution.

"Then look at it from a utilitarian point of view, from the point of view even of efficiency, so far as the Indian Civil Services are concerned. A knowledge of Persian or of Sanskrit or Arabic, as well as of Indian History for British as well as for Indian candidates for the competitive examination would be of the highest benefit to the successful candidate in after life when he has come out to India, and has begun to take part in the administration of the country. Therefore, it is obvious that from a utilitarian point of view also the exclusion of these subjects from the curriculum of the open competitive examination in England is absolutely unjustifiable. For these reasons, briefly, I have great pleasure in giving my support to the Resolution brought forward by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sastri."

1-6 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay :—"Sir, there are two reasons which have been advanced in this Council for including the subjects for the open competitive examination,—and I think the Members were talking about the open competitive examination,—there are two reasons which have been advanced which are not very convincing to my mind One of those used was by the Hon'ble Mr Bannerjea. I understood him to say that a knowledge of these subjects would enable a man coming out to India to enter into the life and conversation of the people of this country ; and the other was an argument used by the Hon'ble Mr. Ayyangar that a study of Sanskrit would reduce animalism in man. Well, I may say that I myself studied Sanskrit. I dare say my studies did not go deep enough, but at any rate they did not enable me to enter into conversations with gentlemen in Kanara when I first arrived there, and I am afraid it did not reduce animalism in me. The Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea seemed to me to put his finger on the spot when he went back to rather ancient history and referred to the Report of Lord Macaulay's Committee in 1854 (not in 1853). That was the basis of the Indian Civil Service examination even as it is now constituted, and they looked at it from this point of view. 'Our opinion is that the examination ought to be confined to those branches of knowledge to which it is desirable that English gentlemen who mean to remain at home should pay some attention.' That is the basis of their recommendations. . . ."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea :—"I said it would be useful for them too."

The Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay :—"And it was argued that no service would be rendered to India by inducing those who meant to spend their lives there to neglect in the earlier years European literature and science for studies specially Indian That Report was produced at a time when I do not suppose there were any Indian candidates for the Indian Civil Service, and when Indian Civilians still went to Haileybury as a preliminary to coming out to India. They were not, as the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea has pointed out, consistent in that they recommended that Arabic and Sanskrit should be included. I think Mr. Bannerjea has read out all that extract and I need not repeat it. Well, as a result of that Report, Arabic and Sanskrit were included in the syllabus of the open competitive examination from the year 1855 onwards, and they are included even to this day. I think Mr. Walsh made a mistake in stating that they were not included as subjects for the examination."

The Hon'ble Mr. E. H. C. Walsh :—"I did not say that, I said that they are at present included."

The Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay :—"Well, somebody suggested that they were not a subject for examination just now, but they are.

"There is one small point on which I should like to correct the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea, and that is about the marks for those two subjects. The marks for those two subjects now are 800 and not 500."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea :—"At present?"

The Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay :—"Yes, at present.

"Now as regards Persian, it seems to me that it would not have been inconsistent with their remarks about Arabic and Sanskrit if the Macaulay Committee had recommended its inclusion in the syllabus on the same lines as other modern languages, for it could not be reasonably excluded on the same arguments as those which they applied to the vernacular languages of India, that they were of no value except for the purpose of communicating with the Natives of India, and therefore ought not to be a subject for examination. But the question of Persian does not seem to have arisen at the time, and it was not discussed in their Report, and it is possible that nobody thought of it. On the other hand, it is possible that Persian was considered too light a subject for separate treatment. That is a view which certainly found some acceptance with scholars of a more recent date, and I believe that in several of our Universities the study of Persian has from time to time been combined as one subject with Arabic on that ground.

"Whatever may have been the reason for the omission, there does not seem to me to be any good ground for its continuance, and it may not be without interest to the Members of this Council to learn that in the year 1913 the Government of India actually informed the Secretary of State that they recognised that Persian is entitled to consideration as an element in a liberal Oriental education, and that they had no objection to its inclusion in the syllabus. No change was, however, made at that time.

"A reference to the Regulations for the Indian Civil Service examination will show Members that at the present moment of the subjects under discussion Arabic and Sanskrit find a place both in the syllabus of the open examination, and in that of the final examination, while Persian appears in the latter only, and it will be noticed that any candidate who offers Sanskrit and Arabic for the open examination is precluded from offering it at the final. The reason for this is not far to seek. It will be observed that, except Arabic and Sanskrit, there is no other subject which finds a place in the syllabus for both those examinations, and I think it is clear that if a candidate were allowed to take up the same subject at both, he would have a distinctly undue advantage over his fellows at the final. For this reason, I think there is no doubt that, if Persian were admtited as a subject of examination at the open competition, the same rule which now applies to Sanskrit and Arabic would have to apply to it, namely, that a candidate who took it at the open competition would be debarred from offering it at the final.

"As regards Indian History, I may say that so long ago as 1900 the Government of India held that Indian Civilians, before they came out to this country, should be thoroughly familiar with the broad outlines of general Indian History,—the succession of Dynasties, the rise and fall of Empires, the movements of races, the principles of successive Governments and so forth, and Indian History now forms a subject for the final examination. But there is this difference between the case of Indian History and that of Persian, that Indian History is a compulsory subject and Persian an optional subject, and this, I think, will make it difficult to apply the same rules as apply in the case of Arabic, and to say to a candidate that if he offered it for the open examination he could not offer it for the final, inasmuch as it is compulsory for the final; and I do not myself see how this difficulty could be got over, though I may remark that in 1913 when they wrote about Persian, the Government of India also wrote about Indian History, and said they had no objection to its inclusion, but did not raise this particular point to which I refer. They were probably content to leave that difficulty to the skilled examination of the Civil Service Commissioners. I may remind Hon'ble Members that in section 99 of the Government of India Act it is provided that the Secretary of State in Council may, with the advice and assistance of the Civil Service Commissioners, make rules for the examination; and it is that body of gentlemen to whom he actually turns for guidance on the subject.

"The Public Services Commission, as has been pointed out several times already, contemplated an examination in England which would be adapted to the best school curricula in Great Britain, and then left the details to the Civil Service Commissioners, but they did prepare a rough draft scheme of the sort of examination they had in contemplation, and in that scheme there is no mention of Sanskrit, Arabic, Persian, or Indian History, and that no doubt is the reason why my Hon'ble friend has tabled this Resolution. I would remind this Council of the interesting discussion we had last September in Simla on the question of the age-limits, and they will no doubt realise that this is still a very open question But I venture to think that, whether the age-limits are changed or not, and whether the recommendations of the Commission on that subject are accepted or not is a matter of no great importance in deciding the question before us. The Commission definitely considered the proposal that only candidates educated in Europe should be allowed to compete in England, and that only those educated in India should be permitted to appear for the examination in this country, and they considered that proposal only to discard it, and in these circumstances I can see no possible reason why, even if the age-limits were lowered very considerably, it should not remain open to those who come forward to offer such subjects as Sanskrit and Arabic, Persian and Indian History for their examination. And indeed, though the age-limits have varied (at the top from 19 to 24 and at the bottom from 17 to -2), Sanskrit and Arabic, as I have already said, have continued to find a place in the syllabus of the open competition ever since 1855, and even when the age-limits were at their lowest. I might mention, however, that no candidate has taken Arabic, at any rate since the year 1905, as a subject for the open competition. There may have been many before that, but those are the figures that I happen to have looked up. Such are the facts of the matter, and I would only add that Government consider that this question should be left to an open vote, official Members being at liberty to speak and vote as they please. Government reserve to themselves the right of making a further examination of the subject in the light of this discussion, and any other circumstances that may supervene, but I think I can safely promise that they will, in due course, let the Secretary of State for India know the views that have been expressed here."

1-18 P. M.

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha :—"Sir, the competitive Civil Service examination was established in the mid-Victorian age, 1855. In the mid-Victorian age the classics were, of course, a sine qua non in all the great Universities of Oxford, Cambridge and London. Taking that fact into consideration it was quite intelligible that the first Commissioners of the Indian Civil Service laid such great stress on the value of classical languages in which Sanskrit and Arabic are also included for purposes of examination. But, Sir, between 1855 and 1917 great progress has been made, and even the English people themselves have been asking, for some time past, I should say for the last five or ten years, of what use is it to insist on the study of Greek and Latin in the Universities. The British are a practical people: they have large international trade throughout the world; are Latin and Greek of any use at all, even recognising that they impart culture to University students? Nothing of the kind. For all practical purposes, even in Parliament, as well as in all the different branches of administration, Greek and Latin are held to be practically useless. Similarly, I should say that in the practical administration of India, Sanskrit as much as Greek and Latin is useless. English is the lingua franca throughout India and in all parts of the world where English interests prevail. In fact, I think, the English people should be proud of their language which is now used and talked by one-half of the people of the globe, if not more. Therefore, Sir, to me it seems that it is an anachronism now-a-days to insist upon either Greek or Latin for the Indian Civil Service, or, for that matter, Sanskrit. Let us look to what is practical In Indian administration we have more to do with China and Japan; we have more to do with Africa and Zanzibar, and such countries with which India has large commercial and political relations. I should have preferred that, instead of having any Greek or Latin or Sanskrit, we should have Chinese, Japanese, and Arabic languages which would be of the greatest use to us in the future after the war. We shall have great economic questions, both in China and Japan, also in South Africa and other places; and I consider that, for the purpose of carrying on the Indian administration in a most practical way, it would be a great advantage to recognise those living languages.

"We eternally hear high Indian officials emphasising the value of Efficiency! Efficiency, efficiency—that is the unceasing cry. I would ask the members of the Government what efficiency is derived from the study of Greek and Latin. I admit that, independently, Greek and Latin as Greek and Latin have their use; I am a great lover of the classics myself, but I ask from the practical point of view what efficiency you gather from a member of the Indian Civil Service, English or Indian, who has passed his examination in these languages—nothing at all. The war has made us unlearn many old things, and has also made us learn many new things, and I hope that the Government of India will see that in future, if the administration is to be carried on with the greatest efficiency, if international trade and many other cognate matters of the highest importance are to be stimulated, they will insist upon the study of those living languages which are of the greatest practical use, and I do say that Chinese, Japanese and Arabic on the one side, and the South African languages on the other, will be the most suitable for this purpose.

"Throughout the whole history of the Civil Service examinations age and language conditions have been the subjects of great controversy. Age has, of course, been shifted from 17 to 19, from 19 to 21, and from 21 again back to 19. The pendulum has been swung from the minimum to the maximum and vice versâ. As far as languages are concerned, we have heard in the speeches already made here to-day how people differ on the subject and how-marks are moved up and down. It is all purely arbitrary on the part of the Civil Service Commissioners, or on the part of the Government of India As far as the Public Services Commission's Report is concerned, you have heard already what opinion I hold upon their recommendations. I think they might be consigned to the waste-paper basket. That is my opinion.

"Therefore, Sir, I think it will be far better to abolish all classical languages from future examinations for the Indian competitive Civil Service, Greek and Latin, Sanskrit and the rest, and to substitute for these living languages which will be of great practical use to us in the future. If people are very anxious that Greek and Latin and other classical languages should be studied, simply for the sake of culture, then I would suggest the establishment of a University at Timbuctoo, where all these languages might be taught and where research work in these might be leisurely undertaken. But, as far as the Civil Service examination is concerned, which is an examination for the purpose of efficiently carrying on the administration of India, I repeat, they are perfectly useless, and all these recommendations suggested are a great waste of time and energy."

1-24 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—"I think, Sir, that the Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha's speech would have been an excellent one in its own way if he or we were sitting here for the purpose of reforming wholesale the curriculum or the syllabus which is now prescribed for the open competitive Civil Service examination. The question before the Council to-day is a very simple one; and, as the question is left to the vote of the Members—although that question is clearly brought out before the Council—I wish it not to go astray in view of what the Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha has said. We are not dealing with wholesale reform of the curriculum or of the syllabus......"

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha :—"It will have to come."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—"I dare say it will have to come. Nobody will be more glad, Sir, than I would. I do not say that the syllabus or the curriculum is perfect. But the question before the Council to-day is this. You have an open competitive examination for the Civil Service of this country. You have to deal with two classes of people: one who are educated in Great Britain, another who are educated in India, and the system of education in India is different from the system of education in Great Britain. In Great Britain, the boys learn Latin and Greek; in India, having regard to our own educational institutions, we learn here either our vernaculars or Persian or Arabic or Sanskrit. Now, if you have in the syllabus Latin and Greek, and if you exclude Arabic and Sanskrit and Persian, you at once put the Indian students at a great disadvantage. On the one hand, the English student who learns Latin and Greek when very young, or, as soon as it is possible for him to do so, would naturally offer that subject for examination, and very high marks would be scored by him. On the other hand, if you exclude Arabic and Persian and Sanskrit, then you deny to him the advantage and do you expect the Indian student who goes to England to learn Latin and Greek and offer those subjects in competition with his English compeers? That is really the question, and what really appeals to me is this, that the object of the Mover of this Resolution is to give a fair and equal chance, having regard to our facilities for education in our country, and having regard to the facilities that the English boys have for education in their country. That is the point, and I am sure that every Member will support this Resolution. It has already been indicated by the non-official Members who have spoken that, in fairness to us, if it is going to be a real open, fair, competitive examination, we should have that advantage which is denied to us if the proposals of the Royal Commission are accepted and Arabic and Sanskrit are excluded. That is the only question, and I therefore hope that every Member will support this Resolution."

1-28 P.M. The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya :—"Sir, I had hoped, after the remarks of the Hon'ble the Home Member, that there would be no necessity for a further discussion on this Resolution......"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"May I interrupt the Hon'ble Member. I said nothing."

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya :—"I beg the Hon'ble Member's pardon. I meant the Home Secretary. But the speech of the Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha compels me to take up a few minutes of the time of the Council. One aspect of the question covered by the Resolution has been very well pointed out by the Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah, namely, that justice demands that English and Indian students should be put on a footing of equality, so that the test should be so far as may be fair and equal in the case of both. In further amplification of the same point, I may say that if the people of any country or community want to give a certain kind of education to their youth, and you want the youth of that particular country or community to be enlisted as a competitor in an examination, you have to bear that fact in mind in fixing the subjects for that examination. This is necessary if they are to be induced to compete for that examination and not to be turned away from it by their task being made unnecessarily difficult. So long as the English people love to teach the classics—Latin and Greek—to their boys, I think it is desirable that those subjects should be included in the curriculum, for the Civil Service examination. Similarly, so long as Indians—Hindus and Muhammadans—think it fit to educate their sons in Sanskrit or Arabic or Persian, these subjects also ought to be included in that curriculum, in order that Indian students should not be subjected to an unnecessary extra strain. But, apart from that, Sir, I should like to say a few words in regard to the utility of Sanskrit and Arabic. I have great respect for my friend the Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha, from whom I have learnt many things, and at whose feet I love to sit to learn many more. But I must say that he has not taken a correct view of the advantages of a study of Sanskrit, especially by those who want to compete for the Indian Civil Service with a view to serve in India. Latin and Greek may not be useful to those who are going to administer public affairs in India, because, presumably, all that is of value from that point of view in Latin and Greek has been translated into English, and, except for the beauty and the literary advantages of Latin and Greek, there is no loss likely to be suffered by an English student who does not devote laborious days in learning to compose in Latin or Greek. But, so far as Sanskrit is concerned, and so far as Arabic is concerned, they have a living connection with the people of India.

" There is not an institution in this country with which Hindus are connected which a knowledge of Sanskrit will not explain or throw light upon. All the religious worship, all the various social and socio-religious institutions of Hindus, the customs which prevail among them, the institutions which exist and have existed from time immemorial—matters which govern the life of Hindus and their every-day affairs up to this date—trace their roots in their sacred literature which is in Sanskrit. There is, therefore, no better study which a man who wants to understand the people, the great bulk of the people of India, can make than a study of Sanskrit. Whether it is religious worship—the various phases of religious worship—, or whether it is the many institutions, religious or socio-religious institutions, customs, or whether it is the ancient policy of the Hindus which still forms the basis of much of the administration of this country, we have to go to Sanskrit to find their roots, and I feel confident that the bulk of the Members of this Council will agree with me in the view that there is no better means of understanding, of sympathising with and appreciating the religious, socio-religious and political institutions and customs of the bulk of the Hindus than a knowledge of Sanskrit. For this reason, I think that not only should the study of Sanskrit be given the same encouragement as other languages, as Latin and Greek for example, but that a decided preference should be shown for the study of Sanskrit, and also of Arabic, in the case of every student who wants to serve in India. That would apply to all students, whether they are Europeans or Indians; but in the case of Indian students in particular, it should be a matter of reproach to an educated Hindu that he should not have sufficient familiarity with the language in which his sacred books are written, and a knowledge of which is so essential to enable him to understand the institutions which he and his people have inherited. Similarly, with regard to Arabic. It should be a matter of reproach to an educated Musalman who has learnt Greek or Latin and English in the way in which our students acquire a mastery over these languages that he should be unfamiliar with the language of the most sacred book of the Musalmans.

" I think, Sir, that in order that the administration of the country should be carried on in sympathy with the spirit of the people, it should be regarded as a matter of extreme advantage, if not of necessity, that Indian public servants should possess a knowledge of Sanskrit and Arabic.

"Besides, there is another practical advantage associated with the study of Sanskrit, Arabic and Persian. Our vernaculars are derived from these languages. They have been largely influenced by them. A knowledge of Sanskrit enables a man the more easily to understand Bengali, Ooriya, Hindi, Urdu, Marathi, Punjabi, Gujerati and Sindhi. It is only the Tamil and Telegu languages which have not been derived from Sanskrit; but I have learnt from friends that even in them there is a large admixture of Sanskrit words. Sanskrit, therefore, enters into the composition of even Tamil and Telegu—of Telegu perhaps more largely than of Tamil, but of both. A knowledge of Sanskrit is, therefore, of practical importance in enabling a man to understand the vernaculars of the country. So also, though not to the same extent, is the case with Arabic, Urdu and Hindi, and other Sanskrit dialects have all a certain number of Arabic words incorporated into them. Urdu and Hindi are only two different forms of the same language. For these reasons I hope that, notwithstanding the remarks which my esteemed friend, the Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha, has made, Government will always give a decided encouragement to the study of Sanskrit and Arabic in the examination for the Indian Civil Service. I look forward to the time—I hope it is not distant—when Hindu and Muhammadan boys will consider it a reproach to them as cultured men that they should not know their own sacred languages. As regards Persian, it has a beautiful literature. Though it has not the same value for Indians as Sanskrit and Arabic, it has its own value and it ought to be encouraged. I hope the Government will give full consideration to what has been said here on this Resolution, and ensure the retention of Sanskrit and Arabic and the inclusion of Persian in the curriculum of studies for the Indian Civil Service examination. As for Indian History, it should not be an optional subject to be taken up only at the final stage, but its study should be insisted upon at the earliest stage. It would be strange and anomalous if those who aspire to join the Civil Service of India should not be required from the first to acquaint themselves with the history of India. I hope the Government will give full effect to the Resolution which has been moved by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sastri"

1-37 P. M. The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri :—"Sir, there are just a few remarks which I seem to be required to make. From the way in which Hon'ble Members who took part in this discussion have referred to the cultural value of the Sanskrit Persian, and Arabic languages, it would appear that I made a mistake in omitting all reference to that aspect of the subject. But, on thinking it over, I think I was not wrong. I am not one of those who can possibly be suspected of under-rating the importance of these languages as affording a key to the study and sympathetic understanding of Eastern civilisation and culture; but it appears to me that those who make these remarks are under some sort of misunderstanding as to the way in which the Public Services Commission have looked at the subject. They do not want that Indian Civilians who come out here from England should come out without a proper preparation in these subjects. They have made provision during the probationary period for these subjects being adequately studied. The history of India is compulsory throughout the compulsory period of three years, and the classical Indian languages have been included among the additional subjects that they have recommended. But, Sir, there is one remark which I might be allowed to make in this connection. The Hon'ble Pandit Malaviya has caused in my mind a feeling of some melancholy at the way in which Sanskrit is looked at in certain parts of India. He was keen that everyone, whether Englishman or Indian, should study some classical Indian language. But this morning I happened to read in a Madras newspaper the conclusion at which certain associations there have arrived with regard to this Resolution, to the effect that if Sanskrit is to be given the place which I (Mr. Sastri) am going to plead for in the Imperial

[5TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mr. Sastri.]

Legislative Council, Tamil and Telegu should be given places of equal importance. Now that seems to me to open to some of us a vista of—what shall I say ?—misgiving and suspicion as to the way in which the classical languages of India are regarded as in some sort rivals to the vernacular languages of India. But there I will leave it, Sir.

"There is one remark which I feel called upon to make in connection with what my Hon'ble friend Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea said. He seemed to think it was a pity that I had omitted such subjects as Political History, Political Science, and the study of Higher Economics Now the Economics of India especially is prescribed among the courses for the probationary students, but that is not the whole point. The point is that Lord Macaulay, whom the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea quoted, wanted that the course for the Civil Service examination should be modelled on the course of a liberal education in England, the highest liberal education available to a gentleman in England. The age, therefore, was fixed high, and it would have been quite proper then to include such subjects as he mentions. The Public Services Commission, however, have proposed to lower the age till it becomes co-eval with the school-leaving age. Surely Political Science, Political History or Higher Economics are subjects that are not within the comprehension of such immature students. I had to frame my Resolution largely in speculation as to whether finally the recommendation of the Public Services Commission in this regard would be accepted or rejected. I had, therefore, to fit in such subjects as would be profitably studied, whether it was at the school-leaving age or at the age of collegiate study."

The Resolution was put and accepted.

The Council adjourned for Lunch till 2-45 P.M.

RESOLUTION RE THE CIVIL MEDICAL SERVICE.

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri :—" Sir, I beg to move the following Resolution :— 2-48 P. M.

'This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council—

(a) that a civil medical service should be constituted which should be wholly independent of the medical organisation of the Indian Army ; that the higher medical posts, which are at present filled by officers of the Indian Medical Service should be transferred to the civil medical service ; and that the civil medical service should be recruited from the civil medical officers and the independent medical profession ;

(b) that the salaries of Indian Medical Service officers employed on civil duty should not be enhanced as recommended by the Public Services Commission ; and

(c) that military assistant surgeons should not be given preference over civil assistant surgeons, and that not more than one-sixth of the higher posts reserved for subordinate medical officers should be given to them.'

Before I proceed to deal with the Resolution, I beg leave of the Council to say that I recall with feelings of sorrow a conversation I had on this subject with the late Sir Pardey Lukis, who occupied the position of Director-General of the Indian Medical Services. When it became clear that these Resolutions that had been on the agenda paper would not be reached and that it would be necessary for us to select a few of the Resolutions dealing with the subject, Sir Pardey expressed much anxiety that this medical Resolution should be among the selected. He said that he was considering the matter most anxiously, and that he might be able to go some way towards meeting our wishes. It is a great pity that we are discussing these Resolutions without his sympathy and friendly assistance. We are now dealing in this Resolution with two departments : one is known as the Indian Medical Service and the other is known as the Subordinate Medical Department Both these are military in their organisation, although the great bulk of them are lent in peace times to the service of the Government of India. Both these departments or services may be said to have for their appanage the civil medical departments of this country. The Indian Medical Service consists of 772 officers, of whom 475 or 62 per cent. are described as the War Reserve and are employed in civil posts in the Medical Department. The Subordinate Medical Department contains 718 officers, 289 of whom or 40 per cent. are employed ordinarily in civil duties. Of the superior officers in civil medical employ, the military cadre represents 87 per cent., that is 493 out of 566. The civil portion comprises 73 officers only, or 13 per cent. In these circumstances, it is somewhat anomalous to describe the civil medical service as civil, it is predominantly military. If we look at the different branches the figures are striking. The staff posts are 7, they are all in the hands of the Indian Medical Service Professorships, Chemical Examinerships, and Alienist appointments which are 50 in number, 45 are in their hands; of the 27 Bacteriologists whom the Government of India employ all are drawn from the Indian Medical Service; of the sanitary and plague officers of whom there are 67, 53 are from this service; in the Jail Department 38 out of 46 belong to the Indian Medical Service; of the medical sanitary officers in districts and in Presidency-towns out of a total of 285, as many as 192 are Indian Medical Service officers, 46 belong to the Subordinate Medical Department, a few are civil medical officers. I think it might not be wrong to say that the military practically have this department in their hands, though it is called the Civil Department. When this arrangement was proposed many years ago, it seems to have struck the authorities, at any rate a great part of them, as somewhat anomalous, as being against the practice of other countries, for nowhere in the world is the Civil Medical Department mainly occupied by military officers. Neither Germany nor France nor America seem to order their medical services as in this country. At first there must have been some opposition about which we have only scanty information. Dr. Bahadurjee, a late eminent practitioner in Bombay, took great pains to bring the subject before the authorities, and before the Welby Commission he gave certain information. I beg leave of the Council to quote certain striking passages :—

'You will observe from the same papers that I mentioned to you just now, namely, the papers respecting medical officers in India, that, when that scheme was submitted to several authorities, both civil and military for their opinion, it was most adversely commented upon. The Government of Madras and the Government of Bengal said that if the Civil Medical Service was to be purely for civil purposes and primarily for civil purposes, there was no occasion to make it primarily military.'

And the Madras Government went a little further and said—

'that among the defects of the system (of reserving all high grade civil appointments for members of the military service only), must be recognised a want of stability, a want of strict identification with the interests of the natives of the country, an exclusiveness which renders it difficult to introduce the natives of the country to the higher employments of the service.'

And naturally so, for, if you look at the system followed in the Arts, the Law and the Engineering Faculties, you will find that Western education is provided in these colleges as in the medical schools.

"I want the Council to listen to this with attention :—

'But to the scholars of these institutions all the highest appointments in the faculties are open. The Professors of these schools are drawn direct from Oxford, Cambridge or London or Indian Graduates, and when natives are found equally competent and equally qualified, they are appointed to these places without any distinction of being members or not, of any particular service

The Government of Bengal urge also that—

'the local medical service should be no longer primarily military, its chief function being now civil.'

The Surgeon General of Her Majesty's Forces complained.
This is a quotation from him—

'That the application of the principle of one Military and one Civil Medical Service, acknowledged by the Secretary of State, was maimed by qualifying conditions, whereby the proven errors of the old were attempted to be perpetuated under a new system. If real re-organization is to be attempted—and that such is needed none who are acquainted with the present system will deny—it can be effected by no partial measure. The division of civil from military duties must be trenchant and distinct.'

[5TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mr. Sastri.]

"The Decentralization Commission have also quoted the Madras Government's desire for a separate medical cadre for that Government, although this cadre was to be drawn in the opinion of that Government from the Indian Medical Service. In 1899 the Madras Government considered the position so unsatisfactory that it asked for a completely separate cadre of Indian Medical Service Officers for duty in that Presidency, and from which no officer should be withdrawn without reference to the Local Government. They go on to add—

'In 1903, again, the Bombay Government asked for a separate civil and military medical service, but the Government of India declined to take up this question on grounds of policy and expense.'

The Decentralization Commission themselves are against the measure that I have suggested, but they grant that there is a good deal to be said in favour of it. It is not, therefore, the destructive idea that it is so often represented to be, seeing that it has occurred to many in authority.

'Special restrictions on Local Governments'—I am reading again from the Report of the Decentralization Commission—

'Special restrictions on Local Governments might be obviated if superior civil medical work of the Provinces were made over to a separate civil medical service, military exigencies being met by giving officers of this Service some preliminary training with Indian troops and by rendering them liable to be called up for military duty in case of emergency.'

"I am reading that passage, because it has often been suggested against the cause I am pleading for that if that were the case, and the Indian Medical Service men were to be confined to purely military duties and the War Reserve were to be struck out, there would be no arrangement in the country for finding officers in times of war. Now I speak without of course any express authority, but I have ascertained the opinions of many young men educated in the Medical Colleges in various parts of India, and they tell me that they would be quite willing to support a measure which Government may bring forward for the purpose of laying it as an obligation on all civil officers in Government employ, although not expressly military, to undergo a certain amount of military training and also to be liable to be called up for military service in case of necessity. Now this is a proposition which I advance with some diffidence, not being myself authorised expressly to say so. But I am one of those who think that if Government felt that sufficient voluntary offers would not be made in time of difficulty, every man whom Government trains and enrols into its service in the Civil Medical Department should be called upon to undergo a certain amount of military training for a certain period with the Forces, and at the same time hold himself liable to be called up for military duty as the War Reserve has been called up now. There would be nothing extraordinary in this and, as a matter of fact, I believe firmly myself that such a step of compulsion will not be necessary. I think the Director-General of the Indian Medical Service will acknowledge that the private medical profession over the whole of India has been fairly responsive to the calls that have been made upon it, and many men of more or less high qualifications have offered themselves for temporary service with the Army in the present crisis. The measure of compulsion will not be necessary, but if it were I should be the first to support it.

"Against this Resolution there have been other suggestions also made. For instance, it has been said that if we adopted the complete separation of the civil medical service from the military medical service the Indian Medical Service would become extremely unattractive by the removal of a very large number of well-paid officers from its grasp. That may be so. But the question is, Are we to keep the civil medical service of the country in subordination to the needs of the military so that when the trouble really comes on there is absolute dislocation and paralysis of the civil work all over the country? At the present moment nearly all who are regularly employed in the Civil Medical Department have been replaced by others who have been taken into temporary service, and it is remarked that even the scientific and professorial chairs have not been left alone in this great call for military work. Now, that state of things should not be possible. The interests of the civil medical service are paramount in themselves. They require careful guarding and provision for emergencies, and I do not think it is right, I do not think it is defensible, except on grounds of inferior and false economy that they should be entirely subservient to the needs of the military.

"I was just now speaking about the recruitment question. Now officers have given evidence that recruitment is becoming more and more difficult, that whereas five or six people competed for each vacancy in former years, during recent years there have not been even two candidates for a vacancy. In one year there were barely two candidates in addition to those who would have been recruited for the number of vacancies existing. Many causes are assigned as bringing about this unpopularity of the Indian Medical Service. They say now that private practice has gone off altogether. A number of independent practitioners have established themselves in the more important towns, and the busy officers are unable to get the same amount of private work which they were once able to. Another thing that is usually said is, that they may now in consequence of the larger infusion of the Indian element have to serve under Indian superiors, and that is a thing that they cannot bear. But the most interesting thing that has come out is that the military officers on leave in England and retired men seem to have been very busy in dissuading young people who are likely to compete at examinations. They were very much dissatisfied with the orders passed by Lord Morley when he was Secretary of State, and in their dissatisfaction they seem to have gone to the length of proclaiming a general boycott of the Indian Medical Service. I say this on the evidence recorded in England from an eminent officer of the Madras Service, Lieutenant-Colonel Elliott. This is what he said in reply to Sir Theodore Morrison :—

'There was information before the Association to the effect that officers of the Indian Medical Service were advising students not to go into the Service until they saw what its future was going to be. The stories being spread were thus referred to in the Memorandum; for instance, the changes in the conditions of the Service, the enormous increase of official work, the fact that private practice was passing into other hands, and the fear that further changes were imminent. For these reasons officers of the Indian Medical Service were advocating a boycott, and when officers were asked if they would advise a young man to go into the Medical Service they said it was not worth the while of a first-class man.'

"I think, Sir, it must be admitted that the somewhat exaggerated fears entertained—I do not say justifiably—but the somewhat exaggerated fears entertained by the officers were responsible for the slight unpopularity into which the Service seems to have fallen.

"Now with regard to private practice, there is just one thing that I should like to say. There is a remarkable letter addressed by the Government of India to the Secretary of State in November 1910. I desire to read to the Council one extract from it. While the officers themselves said that they had, had considerable practice in a former day, but that, that practice had fallen low, the Government of India seem to have been at work in restricting the facilities for private practice that these officers enjoyed; and while in one place referring to this circumstance as one of those that would contribute to the unpopularity of the Service, in another place they say that the time of an Indian Medical Officer is so fully occupied with his official duties that it is impossible for him to take much private practice. I will read that paragraph to the Council. I will ask the Council at the same time to remember that the paragraph is in connection with a suggestion that has been made that private practitioners should be allowed hospital work. When it was recommended to them that private practitioners should enjoy facilities in hospitals and in research laboratories the Government of India, anxious to find arguments against the course, said :—

'If we admitted these people into hospital work, they would not give it the time that they must spare from their private practice, and as private practice is very remunerative, these private practitioners are hardly likely to come up to the expectations that we shall have to make of them.'

[5TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mr. Sastri.]

And in enforcing their argument, they go so far as to urge this :—

'It appears impossible for Government to exercise the necessary control over any private practitioner, and it is certain that, if he has any practice of his own, the interests of Government would be sacrificed to it. The ordinary duties of a Civil Surgeon, if properly performed, are of themselves sufficient to occupy nearly all of his time, and most Civil Surgeons have little leisure to devote to private work. It cannot therefore bes upposed that a private practitioner with even a fairly large practice of his own, can give that time to Government work that is necessary.'

"Now if there is any force in this argument, it seems to imply that we cannot expect these people to resume private practice and derive any considerable emoluments from that source. Therefore, it is urged among other things that their pay should be increased. Now the second part of my Resolution is intended to protest against that suggestion. We consider that the coming in of the Indian Medical Service into civil employ shuts out Indian talent, hinders the progress of the independent medical profession, and makes the civil population, for their ordinary medical needs depend upon a Service which is called upon to serve in the military both in the beginning and at the end of their careers, and in war time would not be available at all. When we are asking therefore that a complete separation should be made, it is impossible for us to countenance the suggestion that, in order to render civil employ attractive to these officers, their salaries should be raised and a further drain imposed on the resources of the country.

"In the third part of my Resolution I refer to the class of officer of whom I just made mention in the beginning, Military Assistant Surgeons. Now here is a peculiar class of people. The Military Assistant Surgeons, being military, are looked upon with special favour by the authorities in this department. So high is the favour accorded to them that, notwithstanding their admittedly inferior professional qualifications, they are allowed to enjoy as many as 47 appointments in the superior grade. There are only 98 of them altogether in civil employ. To these 98 as many as 47 appointments in the superior grade are thrown open, while out of 770 Civil Assistant Surgeons, only 46 officers are to be found in the superior grade. Now what is the civil assistant surgeon in comparison with the military assistant surgeon? The Civil Assistant Surgeon goes through a course of medical training which is comparable to that obtainable anywhere in the United Kingdom. It is acknowledged over and over again in the evidence laid before the Public Services Commission that the curriculum they go through is of very high quality. It is a period of five years' training they have. They have hospital practice nearly every day of their lives. Their training is exceedingly good, so good indeed that many men who pass this examination here, and even several who do not pass the examination here, find it easy to get into the Indian Medical Service by the competitive door that is open in England. Now, if that is the case, is it fair that officers of this high calibre should be ranked as equal, and in many cases made to serve under, the Military Assistant Surgeon whose professional qualification is so low that it is not registrable in Great Britain? I will read to the Council certain authoritative opinions on this class of Military Assistant Surgeons, which will enforce the point much better than I can. I will read first of all the opinion of Sir Pardey Lukis himself. Sir Pardey Lukis was one of those who thought that the Military Assistant Surgeons as a class deserved encouragement, but this is what he says of their qualifications :—

'I have during the past two years had the opportunity of scrutinising the papers written by fourth-year military pupils at the so-called Director-General's examination before appointment to the Department, and I am of opinion that the lamentable lack of primary education which, as already explained to Government, characterises the class on their admission to the Medical Colleges, operates throughout their course of training, and results in their being incapable of assimilating the instruction offered them.

'At the last passing out examination had the standard of 50 per cent. of marks been required, not more than a quarter of the whole class would have been successful, and more than a quarter would have got less than 33 per cent.'

But there is more. The Marquis of Crewe, who gave away the position assumed by Lord Morley with regard to the curtailment of the cadre of the

[Mr. Sastri.] [5TH MARCH, 1918.]

Indian Medical Service, while yielding on almost every point to the demands made on him by the Government of India under the pressure of the Medical Department, thought that the preference shown by the Indian Government to Military Assistant Surgeons was too much even for him to swallow. So he said, referring to the Military Assistant Surgeons: 'These men, however, are not recruited with reference to any qualifications for the important duties of a Civil Surgeon, and they are, as a rule, unsuitable for the work. It may therefore be desirable that, as far as possible, Civil Surgeoncies not reserved for the Indian Medical Services should be given to Civil Assistant Surgeons I leave it to your Government to consider whether effect can usefully be given to these suggestions.' How did the Government of India meet it? Of course we are aware that it is quite usual to urge the existence of undiscoverable qualifications where the ordinary literary and professional qualifications are obviously unsound. The Government of India seem also able to discover these undiscoverable things. 'All Military Assistant Surgeons in civil employ,' they say, 'are liable to recall for active service, and they constitute an important part of the War Reserve. Since they already fall short of the number required for complete mobilisation, any reduction in their number would, in our opinion, be a grave mistake. 'Some of them' (and that is the point) 'possess exceptional qualifications and the majority make up in administrative capacity what they may lack in professional ability, and given equal medical attainments, the Military Assistant Surgeon frequently makes a better Civil Surgeon, than a Civil Assistant Surgeon.' Of course professional qualifications can be tested by means of examinations and by means of work done every day. The administrative capacity is a thing to which officers alone can speak, and, as they can put it down in their reports, we are unable to attach to that circumstance the importance which, in the Government of India's opinion, it is entitled to.

"Now, the Public Services Commission who have paid some attention to this subject have felt that preference of Military Assistant Surgeons is not justifiable, and with the caution that becomes those who do not like to disturb vested interests, they merely make this dry remark:—'It is an unsatisfactory feature of the present arrangement that there are still districts in the charge of officers who would not be allowed to practise in Great Britain, and we trust that this will become increasingly infrequent'. The wonderful caution of the Commission comes out there. They are unable to put their foot down on this anomaly and say 'this shall not be'. Why it is that it should be so cautiously treated I cannot see, except that, throughout the whole of this business, there is the idea that the interests of the military should be kept supreme, and that nothing should be done to disturb what they may consider to be their requirements. Now, it is not my intention at all to dispute the supremacy of the military in military matters, and, because we want them to have an absolutely free hand, we want the War-Reserve to be taken away from its present place, where it dominates the Civil Department. Then it would be open to them to make their necessary arrangements.

"Now, Military Assistant Surgeons are composed entirely of Europeans and Anglo-Indians—the natives of the soil are expressly excluded from admission to this class They are considered to be assistants and auxiliaries to the Royal Army Medical Corps, and they serve, therefore, the British troops only. The Indian Medical Service treats only the Indian troops. Now that is a thing we have got to bear in mind. It is considered proper that Europeans should treat Indians, but when it comes to Indians treating Europeans, all sorts of imaginary difficulties crop up. There is an extraordinary statement made and repeated several times in the course of the evidence, to which it is my unfortunate duty to call attention. One of the great arguments upon which the Government of India and the Public Services Commission also lay stress is that British officers (and their wives) employed in scattered areas throughout the whole country will find it very difficult to consult Indian practitioners when disease troubles them. They have got some sort of expectation that they would get gratuitous treatment from British medical officers, and it would appear—the Government of India go this length in supporting their case—that if it were to be known amongst the Services, the Indian Civil Service, the Indian Educational Service, the Indian Forest Service and so on, that hereafter there would be a paucity or a diminution in the strength of the Indian Medical Service and British officers may not be available to treat them, not merely the Indian Medical Service, but all the Services recruited in England would become unpopular and there would be increasing difficulty in recruiting them. If that is the length to which the Government of India are obliged to go in supporting their case, it must be a very weak case indeed which has got to be supported by an overstrained argument of that kind. That all the Services recruited in Europe should consider at the time they seek employment whether when they are ill in India, they and their wives will get gratuitous medical treatment from British officers or whether they would be obliged to depend on the advice of Indians, is a circumstance that seems to me to be very fanciful. One never would have expected it until one came to read the evidence given in the course of the Public Services Commission's inquiry into the Medical Services. Now that is a point which, were it true, it would be impossible for those who administer the affairs of this country and have to be responsible to this country in a moral, if not in a constitutional, sense, to take account of at all. I may say emphatically that it is a consideration which on this side at least will not obtain any credit. Indian officers and their wives, Indian ladies, Indian gentlemen, of all ranks do not feel the slightest hesitation in asking for the services of British medical officers. If, contrariwise, there is not the same cosmopolitanism, it is, I think, rather a weakness to be lamented than a virtue to be encouraged at the expense of the State and the poor tax-payer of India.

"Sir, I have come very nearly to the end of my speech, but there is just one remark that perhaps I might be allowed to make.

"It is not my intention that the Indian Medical Service should be swamped out by taking away from them the civil posts that they have hitherto enjoyed. I do not see how the needs of the military could suffer. If in order to meet the requirements of the War Reserve a large number of civil posts have to be annexed to them, I want to know, before I attach full importance to this argument, what becomes of the 200 odd people who never seek civil employ, who are always employed on the military side even during peace-time. If they do not seek civil employ why should the others seek civil employ? The attractions of the Service, it seems to me, lie in a different direction. I have been speaking hitherto only of the Civil Surgeoncies; but there are the professorial chairs, there are the research chairs, and there are the places occupied by those who conduct chemical analysis and so on. Now to all these appointments Indian Medical Service officers are now appointed by a sort of preferential right. In Europe, these appointments are not considered to be prescriptively open to a particular Service only, but are recruited from the open profession. In India, too, we want that a similar practice in accordance with the dignity of the profession and in accordance with the great needs of the population should be followed. These great chairs upon the successful occupation of which depends the welfare of millions, besides the advance of medical science, should not be treated as the private property of any Service constituted primarily for war needs. If they are thrown open to the independent medical profession it is certainly not my object that in such an important matter it should be only Indians that should be employed. I should be quite willing to support any measure which will allow officers from Europe to be recruited for these posts; but they should not necessarily be Indian Medical Service officers. If Indian Medical Service officers are qualified for them, by all means let them be appointed. And here, before I resume my seat, let me say that if it be considered necessary to take a certain proportion of Indian Medical Service officers into the Civil department, I should be content even with such a measure—provided however that it be understood that they enter the Service at the bottom, like Civil Assistant Surgeons, whatever pay they may draw—that may be higher than the salaries of Assistant Civil Surgeons: I do not mind the salary question, but I want that they should not be pitchforked into the higher posts straight off as they come over from the military service, but that they should work up in the civil cadre grade by grade. Even members of the Indian Civil Service, when they enter departments like the Customs or Finance, are appointed at the bottom and they work their way up side by side with the officers of that department. It is only in this department that officers are drawn at once into higher posts, keeping down and depressing hopelessly the men who ought rightfully to belong to the civil cadre of the department. Now, I know a great many men who serve as Civil Assistant Surgeons in various capacities Whatever, Sir, the members of the Indian Medical Service may say, it would be very difficult to get any opinion accepted which was adverse either to their character, their attainments or their capacity to fill the great places now occupied by the Indian Medical Service. They are unduly depressed; they are classed as subordinates; holding professional qualifications quite as good as the Indian Medical Service, they are still artificially kept down grinding in low places with small salaries. Sometimes even Military Assistant Surgeons—that is a thing I should like the Director-General of the Indian Medical Service to attend to—even Military Assistant Surgeons, by reason merely of their being military, in spite of professional inferiority, are in large hospitals placed in positions of authority over Civil Assistant Surgeons who may not draw such high salaries as they, but who are much better qualified, who do far higher professional work, and who may in favourable conditions, if the Government only did them justice, occupy positions of trust and responsibility I plead for the Civil Assistant Surgeon, because I know that on him the future of the medical profession in this country rests. The Indian Medical Service, I know, has hard times before it If one hears the truth said, the Indian Medical Service is probably at one of its crises. What may happen to it I cannot say. Perhaps no one can say at the present moment. The end of the war will probably give the authorities the leisure to look into that very difficult matter. I do not deny that the Indian Medical Service has done wonders for India in the past. It has produced many eminent doctors. It has contributed much to the sum of medical knowledge. But when this is said—and I say it with all my heart without meaning to take away anything from the credit due to the Indian Medical Service—let me say further that it must not be allowed any more to dominate the whole of the civil medical profession, to keep the children of the soil out of what is their rightful place, and generally check the growth of the independent medical profession and treat all the professorial chairs and the research chairs as their private appanage, thus producing, as I said before, some harm to the progress of the science itself, and at the same time in many cases doing no good to the positions themselves. Once more, Sir, acknowledging the great worth of the Indian Medical Service, I move this Resolution. In the last part I have suggested that not more than one-sixth of the higher posts reserved for superior military officers should be given to Military Assistant Surgeons. I know that proposals are on foot to give these Military Assistant Surgeons higher professional training than they have hitherto received. When that is the case, the whole question will have to be re-considered. In the meantime, I think my case is made out under (c) also."

3-34 P. M. The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"Sir, I associate myself most heartily with the Resolution that has been moved so ably by my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri. Viewed from any standpoint whatsoever, it seems to be difficult to resist the conclusion that the Government of India must in the very near future take up this question of the formation of a Civil Medical Service for India on its own merits. Now this unhappy war has brought to light certain points of view from which we can look at this problem, and it seems to me that whether we consider the interests of the Indian Military Department or those of the civilian population, the same conclusion is irresistibly forced upon one's mind that the time has come for a separation of the two Services; and I am not without hopes that the Government of India will look at this problem from a new standpoint, because the recommendations of the Vincent-Bingley Commission lend support to the views urged by us. If this all devastating war should bring about the millenium of peace and armaments be considerably reduced, then it seems to me that the question of the larger increase and utilisation of the military reserve would solve itself and the formation of a Civil Medical Department would become a possibility. Let us also take the other view—which is quite possible—that the events during recent years may end in the realisation of the fears entertained that the Army Reserve will be largely increased. Even then, I think, the time has come for a separation. At page 151 of the Mesopotamian Commission Report, the Commissioners whose views are supported by the general Commission state:—'Whatever may be the cause, the inadequacy of the organisation to meet such demands is apparent. Not only has the supply of personnel and equipment proved insufficient to maintain medical establishments on the normal scale, but it may be doubted whether that scale itself is adequate to meet the requirements of a force engaged in campaign against a well-armed enemy and serving in unhealthy surroundings. If this view is correct it follows that the medical organisation of the Army in India will have to be re-examined and revised at the conclusion of the war. The personnel of officers, subordinates and menials will have to be largely increased, and the system by which medical officers nominally in military service are allowed to remain in civil employment so long that they lose all touch with military work, will have to be re-considered.' I think, therefore, that in the interests of the efficiency of the Military Department itself, there is a change of opinion that it might not be wise to keep Indian Medical Service men long in civil employ. There is another danger also, Sir, and that is this. If the Indian Medical Service officers are while in civil employ receiving large salaries for special work, the Government of India would be reluctant to dislocate all civil work, and they themselves would be rather reluctant to see the work on which they are engaged dislocated, and mobilisation would be slow; and some of the difficulties which were experienced in the beginning of the war were rightly attributed to that cause. Therefore, it is possible in the interests of military discipline itself that the problem would receive consideration from a new standpoint. In the revision of the general war hospitals and general equipment, a great deal of work is in store for reserve men, and consequently it would not be easy to lend any more of them for civil work. If you look upon the strength as being the same as at present all the reserve men will have ample work to do. If it is to be decreased, then they would have their hands full. If it is to be increased and men are available, then there is another standpoint from which you have to look at the question and it is this. Even now the Indian Civil Medical Service is recruited from the Assistant Surgeons to such a small extent that if it is to be swamped still further by the Indian Medical Service officers' reserve being increased, there would be absolutely no scope whatever for the Civil Medical men, and that is a state of things which we cannot contemplate with equanimity. Therefore, from any point of view, I think the problem would have to receive a new solution.

"Then, again, let us take the recommendations of the Public Services Commission. The Public Services Commission contemplate the professorial chairs and the higher administrative posts to be recruited in such a way as would make it impossible for them to be drawn upon in case of war. If so, some of the arguments which have been urged in favour of these large attractions for the Indian Medical Service will have disappeared, and a large number of posts will have to be removed from the cadre of the Indian Medical Service. If those recommendations are to be accepted, about 94 would have to be removed from the cadre together with their leave reserves, and consequently the Indian Medical Service will hereafter find only the Civil Surgeoncies and possibly the Sanitary Department and the Jail Department open to them. In the case of the Sanitary Department also, the Commissioners say that it is found necessary to draw from the best sanitary experts in the Civil Department in order to help in the organisation of work in the actual field of war. That is because sanitary science is becoming an expert science, and the ordinary recruits to the Medical Department are not able, and will not be able hereafter, to cope with the work of the Sanitary Department. So, if these specialised departments are hereafter to be recruited on a different scale and in a different manner altogether, then the problem resolves itself to this, as to whether the 192 Civil Surgeoncies alone should be open to the Indian Medical Service out of the 285. There again we find that during this war almost all of them had to be drawn off, absolutely dislocating the work of the civil department; that is not a state of things which we can look upon without dismay.

"Then, again is there any great danger from the point of view of efficiency if those appointments which are now filled by Indian Medical Service men are handed over to the civil medical department. Here I have one or two extracts from the reports with regard to the conduct of men who had to fill these high appointments during the course of the war. 'The places of the Indian Medical Service Civil Surgeons have been filled by retired officers to some extent but chiefly by the temporary promotion of Civil Assistant Surgeons of the Provincial Cadre. I am glad to say that all these officers have worked conscientiously and discharged their duties of appointments in an efficient manner, and that as far as can be judged from the result of the past year's work, the popularity and usefulness of the medical institution have not materially suffered under the altered arrangements.' That is from Bengal. Then with regard to Madras the position is equally clear. This is what the Madras Government have said in their report.—'The most noticeable point in the Surgeon-General's report is the increase in the amount of work done in spite of the depletion of the staff of all ranks. Less than a third of the ordinary establishment of Indian Medical Service officers remain in civil employment, and in the past year specially it has been impossible to keep all the dispensaries open continuously owing to the shortage of sub-assistant surgeons, but the attendance has gone up almost everywhere. Hospitals both in Madras and in the mofussil have been short-handed, but have been kept going by the exertions of the officers in charge and the number of patients treated and the number of operations performed have been larger than ever before, while the death rate has been lowered.' That shows clearly that the Civil Assistant Surgeons are fully equal to the work of Civil Surgeoncies and that the efficiency of the department will not suffer in any of the slightest degree.

"Then, one of the most important arguments urged in favour of the retention of the present system is that it is economical and that it is therefore to the interest of the tax-payer that it should be preserved. Well, if the recommendations of the Public Services Commission are to be accepted, and the professorial and higher administrative appointments as well as Bacteriological appointments, etc., are to be removed from the cadre, there seems to be very little in the way of economy to be effected or attractions to be offered by promoting Indian Medical Service officers to the Civil Surgeoncies. I think a scale of Rs. 500—800 has been proposed for the Indians, in the case of Europeans it is very much larger. It would be in the interests of economy that the medical service should be manned from recruits in this country. I think therefore that the arguments in favour of economy will not on strict scrutiny be found to avail the Government of India in support of their past policy. It would also be difficult hereafter to support the absolute dependance on England. It has been found, as Sir Pardey Lukis stated, difficult to get men for the service even in England. This is what he said:—'We must also remember that there has been a great decline in the number of medical students studying in England. During the past 21 years the average number of students showed a decline of 27·16 per cent., the admission having fallen from 1944 in the years 1891-93 to 1408 in 1909-11. The number of men qualifying in the same period had fallen from 1479 to 1082.' The attractions for service in England are greater than they have been hitherto, and consequently we cannot go on increasing the salaries in order to attract men from England. Therefore, I submit that the arguments of economy do not hold the field against the proposals submitted. Mr. Sastri dealt largely with the question of the needs of European ladies. I think it is a question of sentiment, and I do not think we should import racial considerations into the matter. Looked at even from that standpoint, there is no force in the argument; we find that the number of lady Doctors has largely increased, and facilities of communication have been greatly multiplied. But, apart from that, the experience of the last three years shows that, though there has been a decline in the number of European officers, no hardship has been felt; and as regards Indians working with Europeans the war has shown that Indian medical officers are as welcome in the ranks of the Army as British officers. It is also suggested that, if necessary, the civil appointees should be asked to pledge themselves to serve outside India if necessary. The point was referred to in a Despatch in 1910 to Lord Crewe. In answer to a question in 1916 it was said that 332 had volunteered, and, although there have been withdrawals, still the number of recruits from the civil ranks for military service has been very large. The real point is, whether we shall have a large number of medical men in India ready for service or whose services can be obtained. I think the growth of the Indian Medical Service can be fostered by the attraction that it would be possible for the men to aspire to the higher posts; the growth of the Indian Civil Medical Service and profession is the only way in which that problem can be solved. You will be able to reduce the number of the military reserves as has been possible in England. I hope that the arguments which were advanced in 1910 have lost much of their value in the light of the experience derived from the war and will receive no weight, and that the dream of a Civil Indian Medical Service which Lord Morley hoped to see realised in India at an early date will, during the régime of His Excellency Lord Chelmsford, become a reality and an accomplished fact."

3-52 P.M.

The Hon'ble Surgeon-General R. W. Edwards:—"As the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri's Resolution profoundly affects my own Service I rise to reply to it. I need not dwell on the fact that the Resolution is tantamount to the abolition of the distinguished Service to which I have the honour to belong, but, before proceeding with my reply, I wish to say a few words concerning the work which has been done, by this Service, in recent years, and which is still being done. For I do not think that this Council is fully aware of the extraordinary value of the Indian Medical Service, not only to India, but to the world at large.

"I may begin by saying that no less than 34 members of the Indian Medical Service have gained that blue ribbon of the scientific world, the Fellowship of the Royal Society.

"This Service has worked out the life history of the malarial parasite, a discovery which has revolutionised our ideas concerning malaria, and which, among other things, has enabled the Panama Canal to be successfully built.

"It has reduced the mortality of cholera by two-thirds, and shorn amœbic dysentery of most of its terrors, liver abscess, as a consequence, is no longer feared.

"It has worked out the method of transmission of bubonic plague, work which points the way to the ultimate eradication of that disease.

"Indian Medical Service officers have discovered the cause of relapsing fever, and its means of transmission. Enlarged prostate, that terrible and fatal concomitant of old age, can now be overcome, thanks to a member of the Indian Medical Service, and it was again an Indian Medical officer who invented the method of evacuating stone, in the bladder, by crushing.

"The work of Indian Medical Service men in the domain of eye surgery, more especially with regard to cataract and glaucoma, is recognised throughout the scientific world.

"This Service discovered the origin of that dread disease Kala Azar, which is now no longer incurable.

"We are carrying out extensive investigations into ankylostomasis, a disease which is costing India millions of pounds a year, and also into bilharziosis, which now threatens to invade India.

"Very important contributions, to the knowledge of the world concerning snakes and their venom, have been made, and are being made, by this Service.

[Surgeon-General W. R. Edwards.] [5TH MARCH, 1918.]

"An Indian Medical Service Officer is the greatest living authority on goitre. I may also mention the valuable work done on short fevers and the method of transmission of disease by 'Carriers' which is of such world-wide importance. All this may be known to the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri, but, if so, it seems to me another case, of a prophet not being without honour, save in his own country.

"The Hon'ble Member will, no doubt, say that all this can be done by the Service he proposes to create, but I doubt it.

"I will only touch lightly on the magnificent educational work done by the Indian Medical Service: our students compete with success in England, and, according to the Hon'ble Member, are now fitted to replace the Civil side of the Indian Medical Service. Sir George Makins told me that he was amazed at the perfection of our Medical Colleges and the completeness of their equipment. Expert professors could of course be specially engaged, but if men of the calibre of our present professors, can be persuaded to come to India, they will have to be paid from Rs. 4,000 to Rs. 5,000 a month, and even then would not have that intimate knowledge of Eastern diseases which our men possess, and which is of such vital importance.

"It must be borne in mind that very few Indian Medical Service officers make from £1,000 to £2,000 a year by private practice, whereas successful men in England make 5 to 15,000£ a year.

"Let it not be forgotten too that Indians are freely admitted into the Indian Medical Service, on the same terms as their British Colleagues, and their number is steadily increasing.

"Now, in peace time, 422 Indian Medical Service men hold Civil posts in India, of which only 200 are Civil Surgeoncies, a mere drop in the ocean compared with the number of medical men that India should possess. Not long ago a distinguished Indian Medical Member of the Bengal Legislative Council stated, before that assembly, that over 30,000 doctors were required in Bengal alone. There are at present only 2,000 on the medical register, and of these some 40 are Indian Medical Service men. Would it benefit Bengal to take away these 40 men, or can this small band be said to be standing in the way of the aspirations of the Bengal practitioners (?) I think not.

"Again, to cut India adrift from intimate medical contact with more progressive Western countries at this time, and this would undoubtedly be the outcome of this Resolution, is, I venture to say, a short-sighted policy. For it must be remembered that before the war, Indian Medical Service officers were constantly availing themselves of study leave, and were to be found in every great centre of medical learning in Europe.

"If I for a moment thought that the suggestions of the Hon'ble Member would make for increased efficiency, I would not for one instant oppose him, nor would I make any effort to prevent the breaking up of the Indian Medical Service.

"The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri pleads that the country is too poor to give the pay necessary to maintain a highly-trained Indian Medical Service, yet a highly efficient body of medical men save the money spent on them 100 times over, provided they are made use of.

"Now I am coming to my main point. Whether the Indian Medical Service is disbanded or not, I am personally strongly in favour of Provincial Civil Medical Services. Such Services we have already; but they might be greatly enlarged, especially in their public health departments, and at the same time, the old fashioned name of Assistant Surgeon should be dispensed with, and that hideous name Sub-Assistant Surgeon forgotten. To form a separate Indian Medical Civil Service seems to me unnecessary. What could such a Service do, that cannot be done, by Provincial Services?

[5TH MARCH, 1918.] [Surgeon-General W. R. Edwards.]

"The Civil side of the Indian Medical Service is quite a different matter.

"This Service is the War Reserve of the Indian Medical Service, and the War Reserve must undoubtedly be made use of by reserving for its members in peace time appointments in the Provincial Medical Services, this is practically what we are now doing.

"I will make myself clearer.

"Every modern army must have a highly trained medical service, whose officers may be regarded as specialists.

"They must be picked men, of good physique, capable of accepting responsibility, and of enforcing discipline; they must have plenty of initiative, and be ready at all times to risk their lives under fire; they must be carefully trained for their special work, and be exceptionally well acquainted with prophylactic medicine and hygiene.

"Their numbers must be sufficient to carry on all administrative appointments, and all technical military medical work, in time of war, and be capable at the same time, of absorbing and utilizing the services of a large number of surgeons and doctors, who have received no regular military training.

"Now the present cadre of the Indian Medical Service is none too large for the Indian army, and it forms a nucleus to which untrained medical men may be added.

"At the present moment 334 of our reserve are back with the army, and 669 untrained practitioners have been absorbed.

"The war has taught us, not that our reserve was unnecessary, but that it was vital; not that it was too large or overtrained, in purely military affairs, but that it was too small, and undertrained in military affairs. Nevertheless it was the existence of this reserve that enabled the Indian Divisions when they proceeded overseas, to go fully mobilized, at the most critical period of the Empire's history.

"I cannot help thinking that the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri has not sufficiently weighed this important aspect of the case. Now it is obvious that in peace time, if military medical officers are to be kept fully employed, less than half their numbers are amply sufficient to carry on routine duties, and the remainder should be employed on civil work. The Hon'ble Member may say if this is so, why is this not done in the Royal Army Medical Corps? My reply is, that it would undoubtedly be done, were the British army, in peace time, stationed in England, and were there a Civil Medical Service into which its surplus medical officers could be drafted.

"As it is the British Army is scattered over the world, and I am quite certain that most of the Royal Army Medical Corps officers would prefer to have more professional work to do in peace time.

"I will not weary the Council by speaking further on this point, but before touching on the second part of this Resolution, I think it my duty to inform this Council that there is every reason to fear that the Indian Medical Service, unless its conditions are greatly improved, will cease to attract medical men of the highest attainments, either British or Indian. It must therefore be mended or ended, and I unhesitatingly maintain that in the interests of India, the former is the wiser course.

"The second part of this Resolution depends on the class of Medical men that it is desired to enlist into the Indian Medical Service.

"If first-class men are required, they must be sought in the open market, and they must be paid their market-value. I sincerely trust that none but the best will be considered good enough for India.

"The third part of the Hon'ble Member's Resolution relates to the Military Assistant Surgeons. In the past these men, who serve only with the Royal Army Medical Corps when in military employ, have not been required to take a qualification, recognised in Great Britain. It is proposed that in future they should do so, and this will entail an entire re-consideration and re-construction of their Service. For the rest much of what I have said, concerning the Indian Medical Service, applies to them.

"I may conclude by saying that the Government of India have under consideration the complete re-organization of both these Services, and is not prepared to make any definite pronouncement of policy at the present moment."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul:—"Sir, I never expected that the Resolution moved by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sastri, and couched in such modest terms would meet with any opposition by my official friend on the opposite side, who has taken pains to recount the services rendered to the cause of medicine in this country, by the Indian Medical Service. The Resolution, Sir, should not be taken to mean that we belittle in any way the valuable services rendered to the country by the Indian Medical Service. All of us gratefully acknowledge those services, but this fact should not preclude us from suggesting a change which seems so essential to be made, in the very efficiency of the administration of the Medical Department in this country, and we expect that our motives will not be misunderstood. It has been stated that the acceptance of the suggestion made by the Hon'ble mover would revolutionize the whole Service. It may be so. But there is nothing new in the suggestion embodied in the Resolution. So far back as in 1908, Lord Morley proposed curtailment in the medical cadre and suggested that a strong effort should be made to reduce the number by gradually expanding the employment of civil medical practitioners recruited in India. But the suggestion was never acted upon and, but till lately the Indian Medical Service has remained a close preserve for Europeans. In fact, it has been a purely European service to the exclusion of Indians but for a few notable exceptions here and there. Sir, as the exigencies of the present war have proved so abundantly, the whole organization of the Medical Department was dislocated, and had it not been due to the substitution of the Indian element, depletion caused would have been most acutely felt.

"Sir, the present war, which has unmasked many pretentions and illusions sacred to the cause of vested interests, has by the wider employment of Indians to the responsible administrative charges, proved their high capacity to discharge the onerous responsibilities pertaining thereto. Thus after conclusive proof having been obtained of the fitness of Indians to hold the charges hitherto held by Indian Medical Service officers, and after the experiment having been given a successful trial for the last three years, it would be absurd to attribute to the paucity of capable Indians possessing the requisite grit and capacity, being the chief cause of the recruitment of Indian Medical Service officers from England. The separation of the civil and military services as advocated by the Hon'ble Mover, and his suggestion to consider requirements of the Medical Department from a civil point of view are quite capable of practical accomplishment, and should not be any longer deferred, especially, in view of the fact that if the recommendation of the Public Services Commission Report is to be accepted and the salaries of Indian Medical Service officers increased, the Indian Medical Service, I contend, will be too dear to be retained in India and will hardly be such as the limited means of this country would be capable of admitting. Besides, immediately after the cessation of the war money will have to be provided for the introduction of the various reforms most calculated to improve the moral and material conditions of the people. Any proposal to create unnecessary expenditure, therefore, deserves to be strongly opposed by this Council.

"If, Sir, the present emoluments allotted to Indian Medical Service officers have ceased to be sufficiently attractive, why not adopt an easier and more expedient and economical course of substituting Indians? The difficulty in securing an adequate supply from England, in itself, is a justification for the recruitment of a very large contingent in the country itself. As the experiences during the war times have shown that Civil Assistant Surgeons are in no way inferior to Indian Medical Service officers in point of fitness, rather that they are more useful, having the distinct advantage of possessing intimate knowledge of the habits, customs and temperaments of Indian patients, the Government, I am sure, will have no difficulty in obtaining the requisite supply of suitable men, even though the present salaries may fail to attract an adequate number of officers from England. Let the Indian Civil Medical Department be constituted on the lines suggested by the Hon'ble Mover, having in view the medical needs of the country, and the adequate supply of qualified candidates, I am sure, will be available to us in this very country. Consider the question from any point of view, Sir, the suggestion in my humble opinion is one of which considerations of prudence and economy would counsel prompt adoption."

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru :—"Sir, there is one preliminary remark which I would like to make before discussing the various points which have been raised in the debate, and it is this, that the recommendations of the Public Services Commission on questions relating to the medical services should by no means be taken to be final. They themselves very clearly indicate in their Report that at the stage at which they were writing their recommendations they intended them to be taken as merely tentative. I will read just a passage to show that. On page 245 of their Report they say :— 4-12 P. M.

'Since, however, our inquiry in India was concluded, it (the Service) has been exposed to the more serious strain of the present war, to meet the needs of which 286 officers of the Indian Medical Service and 113 of the Indian Subordinate Medical Department had been recalled from civil to military duty down to the 8th April 1915. This has obviously produced a new situation, calling for fresh investigation, and we recommend that this be undertaken at the conclusion of the war and in the light of the experience gained during its duration. For the purposes of this annexure we shall assume that the existing system will be maintained in its essentials.'

" Now, Sir, they refer here to the 286 officers of the Indian Medical Service and 113 of the Indian Subordinate Medical Department who had been re-called from civil to military duty up to the 8th of April 1915. I venture to think that between the 8th of April 1915 and now a still larger number of men have been re-called to military duty. Well, if such a large number of men have been re-called to military duty, it will be interesting to inquire as to how their duties in the civil department have been carried on during their absence on military work. Sir, I do not know of other parts of India, but speaking for the Province to which I have the honour to belong, I can say that in a fairly large number of districts where we used to have Indian Medical Service men we now have Assistant Surgeons doing precisely the same class of work, and yet during the last three years, I do not think that there have been any complaints made either in the public press or in any official communication with regard to their capacity. Well, three years is, I should think, a sufficiently long time for passing judgment upon an experiment of this character. If you find that during the last three or four years these Assistant Surgeons who have been placed in the same position merely because of the necesssity of the situation have been doing their work quite as well, and it has not been pronounced to be a failure, I think bare justice requires that their claim to the higher position for which Mr. Sastri has entered such an effective plea this afternoon, should be at once recognised.

" Now, Sir, the honoured head of this distinguished Service has, this afternoon, paid a very handsome tribute to it. I do not grudge that tribute. On the contrary, I am one of those who are only too willing to recognise the great and distinguished services which the Indian Medical Service has rendered to the cause of science, as well as to the cause of suffering humanity in India. I wish, however, that we had in our Council one non-official representative of the medical profession in the country, so that we might have heard what he thought of the profession at large itself. As one, however, who does not belong to that profession, but who has been in intimate touch with many of the leading representatives of that profession and who has known their worth and work, may I be permitted also to say that the medical profession in India can boast of very many eminent representatives who have made their mark in science and whose worth has been recognised by learned societies not only in India but also in Europe. I will not refer to names, but I think a few names will at once come up to the minds of the Members of this Council, names of men who have shed a lustre upon their profession in Bombay, Calcutta and Madras, and also in my own Province. Well, Sir, if these low-paid Assistant Surgeons, kept always in subordinate positions, had also been given the same opportunities and the same facilities for developing themselves, I venture to think that a larger number from among them would have given quite as good an account of themselves as some of the members of the Indian Medical Service have done.

"Now, Sir, there can only be two tests in disposing of this question. The first is the test of efficiency, and I have already submitted that the experience of the last three years has proved the contention that these men, if they are given an opportunity of working in the higher spheres, can prove as efficient as those who have been working above them.

"Then there is another aspect of efficiency, and it is this. In time of war, a large number of these men are apt to be called to military duty as indeed has been the case during the last four years, and we find that, at any rate in some departments, work is seriously dislocated. I find from a memorandum submitted by the Director-General, Indian Medical Service, which is printed in the Report of the Public Services Commission, that, as a consequence of the war, no less than two Professors from the Lahore Medical College, three from the Madras Medical College, one from the Calcutta Medical College and two from the Bombay Medical College had to be re-called from their professorial work. I cannot find in this memorandum who were the men who were sent in their place, but one thing is quite clear, and it is that, if these gentlemen who are specialists in their subjects have had, under the pressure of the war, to give up their professorial work, naturally the efficient discharge of the duties in those colleges must have suffered to some extent at any rate. So far as these professorial appointments are concerned, I do not see any reason why they should be the monopoly or almost all of them should be the monopoly of the members of the Indian Medical Service. Surely, it cannot be contended for a moment that you cannot get great experts either from India or from England, if the necessity for them arises. But why should we assume that the Indian Medical Service alone is capable of giving us experts of this type who can do the teaching work in these Medical Colleges? Then the next important test is this—and I do not speak disparagingly of the Indian Medical Services, when I refer to this aspect. The medical men have to come directly into contact with the people and with their lives, and I venture to think that an Indian doctor, who lives, moves and has his being amongst his own countrymen, knows a great deal more of Indian life than a European doctor, howsoever capable, howsoever efficient, and howsoever able he might be. Again, we know that, so far as the general public are concerned, they find that a European doctor is much more expensive than an Indian doctor is. Well, if that be so, I do not see any reason why we should have such an expensive Service when we find that Indian doctors can be more readily available and are much more acceptable to the people in the mofussil where people are not in a position to pay heavy fees.

"Sir, from whatever point you approach this question, I think it must be admitted that it can no longer be approached from the point of view of vested interests alone. There are larger interests at stake, the interests of the free development of science and the interests of humanity at large. These interests have got to be weighed against the interests of the Service, and, while I should not like that any injustice should be done to the large interests of this great Service, I should also like the interests of the country as well as the interests of the independent medical profession to be borne in mind in coming to a conclusion upon this question.

"Sir, I do not wish to say more with regard to the remaining portion of the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri's Resolution. I will content myself by saying that I entirely endorse his remarks with regard to clauses 2 and 3 of this Resolution."

4-23 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Sir, before I address the Council on the subject of this Resolution, I should like to join very sincerely with the Hon'ble Mover in his expression of regret at the loss which this Council and the Government of India have suffered in the death of Sir Pardey Lukis. I do honestly feel, and I am sure the Members of this Council will feel too, that his great knowledge, his sympathy, his experience and his judgment would have been of the greatest value to us on this occasion.

" On the subject of the Resolution, I do not propose to repeat the remarks of the Director-General, but I should like to place clearly before the Council the issues that are raised by this Resolution as they appear to me. The recommendation that a Civil Medical Service should be constituted wholly independent of the medical organization of the Army seems to suggest—and this argument was developed by the Hon'ble Mover—that the civil medical administration is in normal times subordinated to military considerations. I wish to say that, as far as I know, save for the employment of the medical war reserve on civil duties, the civil medical administration is independent of the military. When Government have to decide civil medical questions, they do so on the merits and are not influenced at all by military considerations.

" It is true that Government take into their employ a number of military officers exceeding the sanctioned War Reserve; but this is done in the interests of the civil administration. For not only have we to provide a leave reserve for officers in civil employ in peace times, but there are many appointments, including administrative appointments, from which it is undesirable to remove incumbents even during the war. It may be fairly said that civil requirements have been subordinated to military during the war, but I would point out that during this exceptional time not only the medical interest but every interest in the country has been sacrificed, and rightly sacrificed, to paramount military necessity, and I urge that no general argument can be based on this fact. I therefore ask the Council to put aside any exaggerated ideas of the subordination of civil to military interests. Well, the Public Services Commission, like the Hon'ble Mover, recommended the creation of a civil medical service, but they recognised, I think, the advantages of continuing to employ a War Reserve in peace times, and only suggested certain conditions designed to prevent the civil administration being swamped by military officers. It is quite true, as was said by the Hon'ble Dr. Sapru, that their proposals were modified by the factor of this great war, and that they did suggest that the whole question should be re-examined at the end of it. But I am citing the actual recommendations which they made; and whether we approve of those recommendations or not, they have at least this merit, that they do not contemplate sweeping changes during the war and were mainly confined to suggesting improvements in existing arrangements. I gather that the Hon'ble Mover would, however, exclude military officers from civil medical employ entirely. Am I correct in that? I should like to know. May I ask the Hon'ble Member if that is so?"

The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri :—" I am afraid that is the drift of my Resolution."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" That then is the Hon'ble Member's intention. At one time I thought that it was his intention to create a sort of co-ordinate civil cadre, but I gather that is not correct."

The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri :—" I said so in my speech. That was a modification I introduced in my speech and I cannot pretend that the terms of my Resolution would justify that."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Well, if it is the Hon'ble Member's intention to create a co-ordinate civil service and to transfer all the higher appointments to this Service, excluding military officers from such higher appointments, I submit that the scheme is impracticable, for the two

[Sir William Vincent.] [5TH MARCH, 1918.]

Services could not work alongside in that way, and one would infallibly absorb the other. There could be no dual control and the result would be a complete subordination of military officers to civil officers; this would necessarily mean in a very short time the exclusion of all military officers from the Civil Medical Department. Here I will pause to explain a point which may conveniently be noticed. Although I could not personally view with equanimity such a proposal as he makes, I want to make it clear that, apart from the requirements of the War Reserve, the Government are in no way even at present bound to any policy of reserving posts for the Indian Medical Service, and I am sure they are prepared sympathetically to consider any system by which Medical officers of the necessary qualifications can be admitted to the present Medical Service. I should like to emphasise this view because I fear that otherwise it may be suspected that the Government are not alive to the very great merits and the excellent work that has been done by Civil Assistant Surgeons. That is not the case. During the present war they have, as has been pointed out by various Hon'ble Members, rendered great and meritorious service to the Government. But I think myself that it would be most unwise—at present at any rate—to accept any system by which military officers were entirely excluded from the Service. I put it to the Council that this is a proposal made neither by the Royal Commission nor by any member of it, and I do feel that if Indian Medical Service officers are excluded entirely from the civil medical administration, it will be difficult, if not impossible, to replace them by officers of the same calibre and efficiency. The Director-General has given a brief resume of some of the more striking achievements of the Service in recent years, and I think that short as it is this resume is a remarkable testimony to the work that has been done by the Indian Medical Service—a Service which has indeed the most distinguished record behind it, for officers of which have saved untold suffering in India and in other countries far and wide, earning for themselves a name second to none. Now, I fear that no ordinary civil medical service, lacking the organisation, the prestige and the extraordinary area of opportunity which the Indian Medical Service possesses, would ever achieve the same results. Further, nearly all the officers of the Indian Medical Service possess English degrees and have been trained in England in specialist and practical work, which officers trained in India are generally unable to obtain—not through any fault of their own, but simply as the result of local conditions. For many years I believe that the Indian Medical Service attracted the cream of the Medical Schools in the United Kingdom. It may be doubted, I think, whether a civil medical service would attract men of the same qualifications.

"Another advantage of the present system is, that it keeps India in immediate contact with medical science in the West. Whatever may be the case as to other Services, in the case of this Service it is pre-eminently necessary that the closest possible touch should be maintained with the traditions and progress of Western Medicine. The Indian Medical Service has done much to maintain this touch, and I feel myself—and I hope that others will feel too—that any action of the Government which would tend to break or weaken this connection might be disastrous to Medical Science. It has been alleged that a civil recruited medical service would be cheaper. I doubt if that is the case. If the Government desires to attract Medical officers to this country from the United Kingdom or from Europe with European qualifications for a purely civil service, then I believe, they will have to pay much higher rates than are paid now. If of course the Government does not desire to obtain the services of such men, then the position is different, but this would involve a complete breaking off with medical progress in the West. My belief is that if it was a question of a purely civil medical service the Government would not be able to recruit officers of the same qualifications and capacity, with English degrees, as cheaply as they obtain them at present.

"Now I gather that the Hon'ble Mover's intention as it always is and rightly from his point of view is—was to employ more Indians in the Civil medical administration. I think this is the aim that he has in view, and I should like to point out that Indians are now coming into the Indian Medical Service in largely increasing numbers. I looked at the figures this morning and I saw that in 1914—that is, the last year for which I could get figures—40 per cent. of the candidates were Indians, which is a remarkable advance on previous years."

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya,—"How many passed?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Forty per cent. passed I am quoting figures of successful candidates."

"Then, Sir, the suggestion has been made that the present system discourages the growth of the Indian medical profession. The Commission, if I may say so, in paragraph 28 of annexure to their report pointed out the essential fallacy underlying this argument. They expressed the clear opinion that the question of encouraging the growth of an unofficial medical profession was entirely separate from the question of limiting or reducing the number of Indian Medical Service officers in civil employ, and with that view I venture to agree. Again, it has been stated that all the professorial chairs, or nearly all, in the important hospitals are reserved for members of the Indian Medical Service. If that is so, or if that were so, I agree that there would be some cause for complaint, grave cause for complaint. But I find on looking to the facts that a number of these professorships are in fact open both to private practitioners and to Civil Assistant Surgeons. For instance, I believe I am right in saying that four professorships in the Grant Medical College, Bombay, are at this present moment held permanently by private practitioners. The question of increasing that number is, in my judgment, a very reasonable suggestion, but it is an entirely different question from permanently excluding the Indian Medical Service from any chance of obtaining them.

"Finally, I should like to turn to the important question of military considerations. Mr. Sarma has told the Council that if the millenium comes, if there is a general disarmament, the whole system of the Indian Medical Service may be changed. Well, I grant that, Sir; but I fancy it is a little premature to anticipate any such result from this war. He then continued by quoting at me a report of which I was one of the authors. I can only assure the Council that when that report was written (and I have General Bingley's authority for what I say), it was never contemplated that it could be made the basis for an allegation that there should be a separate civil medical service for India. What was stated in that report was, that the present system would need re-organisation at the end of the war, and that is a position from which I do not resile and which I understand that my Hon'ble colleague maintains to this moment. In any case, the military considerations require that an adequate and efficient medical reserve should be immediately available at any time for war service, and I put it to the Council that as far as human ingenuity has gone at present in this country, no better or cheaper method of securing this reserve has yet been discovered than the present system. The prospects of civil employment are to many in the Indian Medical Service, I believe, a great attraction, and I fear that if this attraction were removed the military service would have to be paid more than it receives at present. From the expenditure point of view, therefore, the present system has some advantages. Further, I may say that it provides sufficient medical work for our reserves in peace time, and that employment of this reserve on civil duties is probably the best way of utilising their services. Again, even supposing that we can impose obligations for war service on civil medical officers—and I myself have little faith in that expedient—I cannot see that it would offer any advantages over the present system. I say that I have little faith in that expedient because I have some experience of it. The Hon'ble Mover suggested that it might be possible to insist on an undertaking from every civil medical officer that he would proceed on military service when required to do so. Well, the fact is that we have taken such undertakings from Sub-Assistant Surgeons, and in many cases when the officers were called on to fulfil their obligations they have refused to go on active service. We have had a number of men who have resigned their appointments or been dismissed rather than accept this alternative of going on service. Further, however, efficient civil medical officers may be in civil employment, they must be totally inexperienced in military duties and would have to adjust themselves rapidly in war time to an organisation with which they would be entirely unfamiliar, their usefulness being proportionately impaired. Finally, I may say that the removal of purely civil officers in war time from their ordinary employment would cause no greater and no less dislocation than is at present caused by the removal of Indian Medical Service officers.

"I think I have said enough to show the Council that there is much to be said in favour of the present organisation. It is not, however, on these grounds which merely embody my personal views that I oppose the present Resolution. I oppose it on the ground that it is premature and that it is impossible for the Government to accept it at the present time. It would be hopeless to attempt to revolutionise the medical organisation during the war; and if the Hon'ble Mover's intention is merely to settle the lines of future reform my answer is that, in my opinion, it would be unwise to speculate now as to the changes which may be found advisable after the war. That there will be changes I do not doubt; but it is humanly impossible to foresee what they will be. One thing I feel sure of, namely, that one of the great problems after the war will be to provide an adequate medical reserve. For surely, if the experience of the present war has taught us any one thing, it is the lesson that civil efficiency must be combined with and subserve military preparedness. But I maintain that beyond this it is impossible for us to try to settle the lines of the future at present.

"I urge, therefore, that it would be premature at present even to attempt to dictate a policy to govern the settlement of a question complicated by many unknown factors.

"As regards the second part of the Resolution, that part which deals with the pay of Indian Medical Service officers, I may say at once that the Government have reached no decision on the Royal Commission's recommendations, and, until they have come to some conclusion on the point, I am compelled to oppose the Hon'ble Member's Resolution.

"I can assure the Hon'ble Member and his supporters, however, that Government, and in particular the Finance Member, will not lose sight of the arguments that have been put forward. But I think the Council will recognise the fact that great difficulty was experienced even before the war in obtaining recruits in sufficient number and of the proper calibre, and one can foresee that the difficulties will be far greater after the war. These are facts which the Council and the Government will have to consider; and the situation must be faced and met. In these circumstances, I submit that it would be unsound for the Council to recommend a summary rejection of one obvious and possibly effective method of attaining the object in view, especially as no alternative suggestion has been put forward.

"Turning to the question of Military Assistant Surgeons, all I can say is, that it would be most undesirable during the present war to attempt to disturb arrangements by which the War Reserve is employed in civil duties during peace times. I admit there is a very great deal of force in the arguments of the Hon'ble Member, but he must not forget the practical difficulties of the situation. I am not in a position to state if Indians can be employed more generally for attendance on British soldiers; that is a matter for the military administration, but if they cannot be so employed we have to retain some Service similar to the existing one; if the prospects of civil employment for this Service are to be substantially curtailed, the question of increasing their military emoluments will have to be considered. On the other hand, the Director-General has explained what has been done to raise the standard of their qualifications, and if these efforts are successful many of the criticisms made will be met. I will only add that I believe the Service as at present recruited contains many officers of great ability and that by reason of their organisation and training Military Assistant Surgeons are particularly well suited for many appointments in which administrative capacity is required. Further, the fact that the Service consists of Europeans and Anglo-Indians facilitates the provision of medical officers for stations with an European population. So long as present feelings and prejudices continue there are benefits in retaining a service of such a kind. Mr. Sastri speaks of gratuitous services—it is not a question of gratuitous services at all. Civilians certainly pay for medical attendance on their families. Well, Sir, I fear that the Hon'ble Member may think that I have not treated his Resolution very sympathetically, but apart from the fact that sympathy from Government is apt frequently to be misunderstood and seems to be regarded with suspicion by some, I feel that I must be particularly guarded in my reply to the Resolution of which the first and last part touches most important and difficult questions which the Government consider it wholly premature to attempt any settlement of at present, while, as regards the second part, I think that the Government must decline to debar themselves from taking such action as they, after considering all possible alternatives, may think necessary to secure that the most important element in the civil medical administration maintains the high qualifications on which it justly prides itself and which have conferred almost inestimable benefits on this country. With these words I oppose this Resolution."

4-49 P.M.

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya:—"Sir, I feel disappointed in the attitude taken up by the Hon'ble the Home Member. In dealing with the Resolution he started with saying that the matter was a delicate one to deal with at the present time, but he went on to put forward reason after reason why the proposal should not be accepted. This is a rather unsatisfactory position. If the Resolution was one which it was not expedient in the opinion of the Hon'ble Home Member to discuss at this juncture, he would have done well to tell the Hon'ble Mover that it should be postponed. But having admitted the Resolution to discussion, the Hon'ble Member should have dealt with it in a spirit of greater sympathy.

"I fear, Sir, that there is some misunderstanding even in high quarters in regard to this Resolution. I listened with great interest and attention to the remarks of the Hon'ble Surgeon-General Edwards. I was sorry and surprised to hear him say that the Resolution was tantamount to a proposal for the total abolition of the Indian Medical Service. I am sure there is nothing in the Resolution that could support that view. Neither in the wording of the Resolution nor in the speech of my Hon'ble friend who moved it was there anything to justify the view that the abolition of the Indian Medical Service was sought. I join with the Hon'ble the Director-General in paying our grateful tribute to the excellent work that the Indian Medical Service has done. We are grateful for it. We feel proud of it. At the same time I think that the time has come when members of this Service as well as the Government should look at the question from the Indian point of view. Let us approach it from the standpoint of what is right and fair to Indians as well as to the Indian Medical Service; let us put aside for a moment considerations of vested interests—I use the expression without meaning any offence—let us consider what is right and proper from the Indian standpoint. When the Public Services Commission made their report, out of 563 superior appointments 446 were held by officers of the Indian Medical Service; 47 by officers of the Indian Subordinate Medical Department, i.e., Military Assistant Surgeons, and only 70 by civil medical officers; that is to say, 79 per cent. of the superior appointments were held by officers of the Indian Medical Service, 8·5 by members of the Indian Subordinate Medical Department, which is closed to Indians, and only 12·5 by civil officers. In 1913, out of a total of 772 officers in the Indian Medical Service only 54 were Indians! This number has risen to 77 since then. Now I put it to the distinguished Surgeon-General and to the other Members of the Council whether this is fair to Indians or to India, and whether it is not high time that this proportion should be altered? I do not think any one of them will say that it is right that after more than half a century of the existence of this Service only 77 Indian should be found in an Indian service consisting of 772 officers. If it is not, what should be done to remedy it? The Resolution suggests what may be done. There is not, as I have pointed out, any suggestion in the Resolution that the Indian Medical Service should be abolished. We are not blind to the fact that in this country we have not got those medical institutions as you have in England. But I ask you to consider whether the non-existence of these institutions is not the result of the present system of recruiting the Indian Medical Service? So long as you will not look for the recruitment of this Service in India, you will not get institutions where the highest education can be imparted. I consider it a matter of regret and of reproach to India that, while it has had such a large number of medical experts and distinguished medical men in its service there should not be one first-class institution where the higher training could be imparted, and that it should be possible to urge that the absence of these institutions constitutes a difficulty in the way of employing Indians in the higher ranks of the Service. You have had this Service for a long time. By all means continue to have it. The British soldier is going to remain in India and the needs of the British soldier have to be met But the Indian Army consists of both Britishers and Indians. You have hitherto had a preponderating proportion of British officers in the Indian Medical Service, and a small proportion of Indians. I ask you now to consider whether it would not be possible whether it would not be fair and reasonable to largely alter the proportion? Hitherto you have had a War Reserve of the Indian Medical Service men. But you have found in this war that the Indian Assistant Civil Surgeons, as the Hon'ble the Home Member acknowledged in his speech, have rendered great and meritorious services to the Government. You have appreciated their work. Then why not now adopt a system by which the ordinary needs of the army will be met by a smaller number of men of the Indian Medical Service, and the extraordinary needs in times of war, for which a War Reserve is maintained, by a larger number of men from the Civil Medical Service such as is proposed by Mr. Sastri to be recruited? Hitherto you have had in the Indian Medical Service a War Reserve, larger than the body in active service. Is it not time that you should largely reduce this War Reserve, and should look in a larger measure than heretofore to the Civil Medical Service, as it is proposed to be constituted, to supply the need of the War Reserve in the future? You have now tested Indian Assistant Civil Surgeons; you have found them efficient. I heard with great satisfaction the appreciative remarks made about our medical students and our medical colleges. The Hon'ble the Surgeon-General told us that such a high authority as Sir George Makins was amazed at the perfection of our colleges and the completeness of their equipment. Our students had thus the advantage of receiving a high degree of education. You have found in practice that they stand every possible test Why not then cut down the number of Indian Medical Service men and restrict them to service in the military line alone, and look for the War Reserve more largely to the Civil Medical Service, which has been proposed? One advantage of it will be this: One of the complaints of us Indians is that under the present system India loses the benefit of the experience of the distinguished medical men of the Indian Medical Service as soon as they retire from service or return to England. Let us look at it in a serious way. We honour the members of the medical service of whose good work the Hon'ble the Surgeon-General reminded us, but how many of them would stay in India after retirement? Would not India be a great gainer if many of the members of that Service settled down in this country? How is that possible? If you will not give the highest instruction to Indians in medical science, and if you will not give them all the stimulus that is needed to enable them to work for the best results which can only be achieved by throwing open to them the highest appointments in the Civil Medical Service, how can you expect Indians to show the same results? I take it that our friends of the Indian Medical Service who come in touch sufficiently with Indians are convinced that there is nothing in the Indian brain which makes it unfit to absorb and profit by the highest medical knowledge and experience.

[5TH MARCH, 1918.] [Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

"I take it, Sir, that the Civil Surgeons and Assistant Surgeons and private medical practitioners, to whom my friend Dr. Sapru referred, and who are flourishing in numbers in Bombay, Calcutta and other centres have proved beyond doubt that the Indian doctor is capable of doing as high and as good work as any of his fellowmen can do in this department. If that is so, all that is needed is to give greater opportunities to Indians. In the existing state of things the highest services have been reserved to the members of the Indian Medical Service, and this takes away a great deal of stimulus from Indians to work in medical science. And I submit, Sir, that after a century and-a-half of English administration in this country, when India has had up to date provision made in every department of administration, it is high time that the Government of India endeavoured steadily to train Indians to the highest pitch of efficiency as medical men and employed them in the highest offices.

"There is not the least race feeling in our minds regarding the employment of Britishers in the Indian Medical Service. The real feeling is that medical science should become more nationalised, that the results of medical researches and the advantages accruing from a knowledge of medical science should be retained in India; they should be scattered more broadcast in the country, that they should go down among the people in a larger degree than is possible under present conditions. It is towards that end that it is suggested that a separate Civil Medical Service should be constituted. It is in the interests of humanity that it should be so constituted. Where our existing institutions are deficient, let provision be made for improving them up to the highest standard. Let it be open to Indians as much in practice as it is in theory to obtain a fair share of appointments in the Indian Medical Service if they prove their merit and worth. At the same time, so far as the Indian Medical Service is concerned, its wants are multifarious, and the Hon'ble the Surgeon-General referred to the necessity of a much larger number of medical men being required for serving the people. I can assure him that, that need presses very heavily upon the minds of many of us who look into these questions. We do want more medical men. Very well, how will you give us more men? We show you the way. If you think that you will not be able to get as good experts as we do, we are quite willing that higher emoluments should be given to distinguished medical men whom it may be necessary to import for the service of the Army. We are willing that the most distinguished medical men should be invited to help us wherever it may be necessary and to train our young men for future work. Nobody desires that the wants of the Army should not be fully, fairly, and reasonably met. But what is urged is that the wants of the Army should not dominate the question of the existence of a Civil Medical Service which has to meet the wants of many millions of people, whereas the Indian Medical Service is only wanted to meet the requirements of a comparatively small number of men. We submit that the wants of the civil population should be better provided for by the constitution of a separate Civil Medical Service. That is the object of the Resolution. If, as it has been clearly stated here, a Civil Medical Service is to be constituted, it should be wholly an Indian Medical Organization to meet the wants of the Indian Army. I think, Sir, that in respect of health and disease no population can be said to be immune from it at any period. No one can say that at any time when the wants of the Army will be the greatest, the wants of the civil population will not be equally great, and if you have simultaneously the needs of the Army and the needs of the civil population pressed upon you, either the one or the other must suffer in the existing condition of things, when a large number of capable trained officers must be diverted from one to the other. It was said that the taking away of 286 officers of the Indian Medical Service from civil to military duty did not seriously dislocate work. The Commission has not accepted that. The Hon'ble Sir Mahadeo Chaubal pointed out that if you take away such a large number of trained medical men from civil employment the work must be seriously dislocated and the civilian population must suffer. It is, therefore, urged to provide for the needs of the Army to the extent that is reasonable, and make the Civil Medical Service independent of the medical organization for the Army.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya; Sir William Vincent; the Vice-President; Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea.] [5TH MARCH, 1918.]

"Then, Sir, a strong feeling exists against the appointments to professorial chairs being given to members of the Indian Medical Service. This has distinctly prevented the growth of a large number of medical practitioners in this country. It is desirable that you should give all the encouragement that is possible to be given by the Government in order that such a service should grow. At present it is a matter of complaint that all the higher professorial chairs are filled up by members of the Indian Medical Service. In the appendix to the Report of the Public Services Commission, it has been pointed out that out of a total of 87 professorships 33 were held by officers of the Indian Medical Service, and only 4 by Civil Medical officers. I put it to my friends of the Medical Service whether it is a satisfactory state of things that after half-a-century of medical education in this country, after Indians have gone out to other countries to qualify themselves in medical colleges and have distinguished themselves in the profession, there should be only 4 Civil Medical officers holding professorships in a total of 87 professorships? So also is it with regard to Chemical Examinerships. Six members of the Indian Medical Service are holding these, while only one Civil Medical officer is holding an examinership. I respectfully submit, Sir, that the present system works seriously against the nationalization of medical science in India. The Government ought to consider the problem from that point of view and ought to do what is right and proper to be done.

"I will not say anything about the proposal of the Commission to increase the salaries of the Indian Medical Service officers, as the remarks of the Hon'ble the Home Member show that the Government of India are going to consider the proposal, and that no decision has been arrived at on that question. With regard to the third portion of the Resolution about Military Assistant Surgeons that ought to follow as a corollary from the first one that Military Assistant Surgeons should not be employed as Civil Assistant Surgeons. The Hon'ble the Home Member referred to the question of the prejudice that exists among Europeans and Anglo-Indians in the Army about employing non-Europeans ...."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"I beg the Hon'ble Member's pardon. I did not suggest that. I only said that the question whether Indians would be suitable for attending British troops was one for the military authorities. That is all that I suggested."

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya:—"My friend has referred to this and he says it was for the military authorities to say whether Indians would suit the men in the Army. I submit, Sir, that raises a very important question. We find ...."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"I must remind the Hon'ble Pandit that he has already exceeded his time, and that it is late."

5-6 P.M. The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya:—"I thank you, Sir. I will stop here."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea:—"Sir, I desire to associate myself with the expressions of sorrow which have found utterance in this Council Chamber regarding the death of Sir Pardey Lukis. He was for a number of years Principal of the Calcutta Medical College. We honoured and respected him and we are grateful to his memory. For to his unselfish efforts aided by those of the Hon'ble Surgeon-General Edwards we owe the only independent Medical School that we have in Bengal, the Belgatchia School, placed on a sound and satisfactory footing.

"Sir, I join with my Hon'ble friend Pandit Malaviya in paying my tribute of homage and admiration to the splendid services which the Indian Medical Service has rendered, not only to this country, but to the cause of science and humanity at large. We are grateful for those services, but that is no reason why we should not approach this object of our adoration and try to find out whether the time has not come for making a change in its constitution. Sir, the Civil Service has done splendid service in the past, but is the Civil Service of India to remain the same as it is to-day? I hope not, I trust not, even for the sake of the Civil Service. Times are changing. India to-day is not what it was when the Indian Medical Service was created, and the war has thrown a flood of new light upon the situation. Sir, we find in Calcutta a medical profession strong in its capacity, strong in its qualifications, rising to eminence and distinction, and yet not a single member of that profession occupies a professorial chair in the Calcutta Medical College, yes one—I see my friend the Hon'ble the Home Member is looking keenly at his notes—one and only one, but even he does not belong to the front rank of his profession. And this one would not have been there, but for my friend over there, the Hon'ble Surgeon-General Edwards. There was a great deal of opposition and prejudice against that appointment and it was overcome by the present Director-General of the Medical Service. Well, we have Dr. Nil Ratan Sircar, Dr. Suresh Prasad Sarbadhikari, Dr. Suresh Chunder Bhattacharjee and other men of the highest distinction, and yet they do not fill any Chairs in the Medical College. In 1848 (a year in which most of us here were not born I expect, not many of us except my friend over there, Sir Dinshaw Wacha) in 1848 we had Dr. Goodeve Chakravarti, who was succeeded by Dr. Rajender Chunder Chunder.

"Then came a period of reaction, not a single Indian was appointed. Dr. Rasalal Dutt was appointed to officiate for a short time and now, owing to the efforts of Surgeon-General Edwards, an Indian has at last been appointed a Professor. Now, is this fair to the independent medical profession of any country and of a place like Calcutta? Four Chairs held in the Medical College in Bombay by members of the independent profession will not satisfy the aspirations which have been created by the growing medical knowledge of our people all over the country.

"Then, Sir, look at the matter from another point of view. Many of the European Civil Surgeons have gone on military duty and you have filled their places with Indian medical men. Have they been found wanting? I do not know of a single case of failure. They have done their duties admirably. What does that show? It shows that here was material in the country, indigenous material, available for the purposes of the country, capable of performing these high duties, and yet they were not employed and were only employed owing to the accident of war. I think this is not creditable to the Government. The Government is not moving with the spirit of the times. I am making a strong remark, Sir, but I am bound to make it, the Government is not moving with the times I repeat, because if they had, they would have availed themselves long before this war of the medical services, of the medical talent in the country. Therefore, I say the time has come when the Government must face this question broadly and squarely in the face, take into consideration the changed circumstances, the growing aspirations, the growing knowledge of the people, and modify its policy in regard to the medical administration of the country upon those lines. It has to be borne in mind that Lord Morley suggested the separation of the two Services. I do not know why it has not been carried out. Possibly there were difficulties raised here. That was several years ago and it has not been given effect to.

"Then, Sir, reference has been made to the subordinate medical men—the military medical men. In Bengal, they have a training of four years. The graduates of the Calcutta Medical College go through a course of six years and are in point of medical qualifications infinitely their superiors, but they have got 47 appointments out of 98, and our Indian medical graduates have got 48 appointments out of several hundreds. Is that fair? I think not. I think the whole matter has to be looked into carefully in the light of these facts and in the light of the changed environments, and I do hope and trust that if the Hon'ble Home Member is not able to accept the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri's Resolution, at any rate he will accord to that Resolution his sympathetic consideration, take into consideration the views which he has put forward and which represent the opinion of the country. The Mesopotamia Commission itself has recommended a change, a change is inevitable, and if the change is to be made, let the views put forward in the Resolution of my Hon'ble friend be taken into serious consideration."

5-14 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri :—"Sir, amongst the points that have emerged in reply to this Resolution I will take seven and dispose of them as briefly as I can. It was said that Indians were freely admitted into this service. The free admission of Indians into the service means placing them under the necessity of going to England for competition to enter this examination. If that is free admission, we have it. This free admission has hitherto brought in 54 men in a force of 772, or 7 per cent......"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"May I interrupt ? The figures I have are 77. Not, however, a sufficiently large difference to make much alteration in the force of the argument."

The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri :— "77 would improve the figure by one."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"It makes it 10 per cent. a small percentage I admit."

The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri :—"This number is due to the increased number of Indians admitted in the last two or three years, and this, Sir, has created a feeling of alarm throughout the Service, which says there is free admission to the Indians. I think it has actually been proposed now—it came out abundantly in the evidence—that an Indian, before being admitted to this examination, should be compelled to undergo a hospital course in England. Some fix it at one year, some fix it at a year and a half and some fix it at two years. That, it seems to me, is not according us free admission, nor contemplating with equanimity the results of this free admission. Let it be remembered, too, that it is becoming increasingly difficult for us to gain admission into any place of technical training in England. The Secretary of State finds it very hard indeed to get Indians admission even into the Arts Colleges, and if it were made a condition of admission to the examination that our men should have undergone a two years' hospital course in one of the great hospitals of London or Edinburgh, then you may as well say that it is anything but free admission. Now we were told, Sir, that great experts have been produced by the Indian Medical Service. Far be it from me to deny that fact or to underrate in any degree the great services which the Hon'ble Surgeon-General Edwards was enumerating and which I am perfectly free to admit is not even an exhaustive enumeration. But the great price that we pay for these men is not sufficiently appreciated. When we say for example that, when we want a great expert, we might bring him out from England or from any other country, it is said against us frequently 'you will have to pay him three or four times the salary that you pay now to an officer of the Indian Medical Service.' That is perfectly true so far as it goes, but I think all the sides of the equation are not taken into consideration. When we pay for an organised iron-bound service, every member amongst them a very high salary and give him extraordinary inducements one way or another, we are paying the salaries of this lot in order to produce the one great expert or the one great genius. I submit, Sir, that if we got out four experts and paid them four times the salaries paid to officers of the Indian Medical Service, they would still be cheap when compared with the salaries that we pay to that service, in which certainly there is an expert now and then. Why talk of the abolition of this Service ? We never advocated its abolition. All that we said was that it should not be allowed to encroach on the civil medical service. Now the argument at once is that we want a certain number of men for the Army, and, if 300 men are required for the Army, there must be 700 men altogether, and 400 of these should be shoved into the civil medical service, and when they are shoved into it they must be placed in all the positions of power, in all the positions of trust, in all the positions of responsibility with material opportunities of distinction and of research work, in all the positions that carry opportunities of obtaining renown. Now is that fair to us? That this Service has done good work is not denied. At the same time admit that another Service, if given equal opportunities, might also do good work. Give our men an equality of opportunity and see whether they will not prove a credit both to the country and to the Service.

"Then, Sir, the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent said that the Government of India have shown great alacrity in Indianising the medical service; that whenever there was occasion they were very glad indeed, outside the War Reserve, to admit Indians. Now I have to present the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent with a fact which perhaps he forgot. I will quote without any comment what the Government of India themselves said........................"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"I think the Hon'ble Member has misquoted me. Will he repeat exactly what he has stated?"

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"I am afraid I did not catch what the Hon'ble the Home Member said, and I do not think that the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri caught it either."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"I should like to know what I am alleged to have said, Sir."

The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri:—"I think I heard the Hon'ble Member say that the Government of India had hitherto shown a readiness and a willingness to admit Indians to, or to throw open to the profession, such posts as are not absolutely required for the War Reserve."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Far otherwise. What I did say—and I have it here—was that 'Apart from the requirements of the War Reserve the Government are in no way bound to any policy of reserving posts for the Indian Medical Service, and I am sure they are prepared sympathetically to consider any system by which medical officers of the necessary qualifications can be admitted to such posts.'"

The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri:—"The Hon'ble Member has said nearly what I said. However, my answer is still an answer The Government of India reported in 1908 that a good third of the so-called War Reserve was not really a War Reserve and was not required for the purposes of the War Reserve, and they promised in one of their earlier Despatches that this one-third might be thrown open to the independent medical practitioner. But they soon pulled themselves up; that was too much. The Indian Medical Service was up in arms and the Government had to go back on their word. And here is what they wrote:—

'In 1908, we pointed out that about one-third of the civil appointments now held by the Indian Medical Service do not form any part of the War Reserve, and that consequently there would be no objection, from a military point of view, to their transfer to medical men not belonging to that Service. But we feel bound to recede from the position which we previously took up, because on further consideration of the question we are convinced that the mere transfer of a certain number of Government appointments from the Indian Medical Service to private practitioners would do practically nothing to encourage the growth of an independent profession; that most of the civil appointments now held by the Indian Medical Service could not suitably be given to men not in regular Government service with whom their private practice would be the first consideration; and that the retention of a considerable number of superior medical appointments for the Indian Medical Service is essential, not only in the interests of administrative efficiency, but also for the purpose of making the service attractive to able medical men'

That does not show, Sir, that the War Reserve seems to be the limit of the appointments that have been declared open.

"Now the Government of India have further enumerated the various steps that they were willing to take to encourage the independent medical practitioner in this country. Almost all of them are attempts or measures or attempted measures which we cannot view with the slightest satisfaction. One of them is the amazing fact that they have given India a Medical Registration Act in the various Provinces, and that is a great means of strengthening the position of the independent medical practitioner. The Medical Registration Acts, which were opposed tooth and nail in all parts of the country, are put forward by the Government of India as measures for the encouragement of the independent medical practitioner.

"Now, with regard to the position assumed by the Commission. It is perfectly true, Sir, that we have travelled beyond the limits of the stage reached not only by the Commission, but by the dissentient members of that Commission. Here is what the Commission says, a position which contradicts itself. Evidently the Commission were in more than one mind about the matter and did not know what to say. They have said 'Calculations should also be made and reviewed from time to time of the civil needs of the country, and a purely civil machinery should be created to meet all civil requirements.' This is what they say 'A purely civil machinery should be created.' Lest, however, Hon'ble Members on this side should be carried away with too much joy, please listen to what follows. 'The officers forming the medical reserve of the Army should be admitted to the civil cadre so formed.'

"So a purely Civil Medical Service means that!

'But if, after an estimate has been made of the military requirements in time of war, it is found that the number of Indian Medical Service officers available for civil employment, as determined solely by military requirements, is insufficient for the needs of the civil administration, then every civil medical post for which no War Reserve officer is available should be filled by civil recruitment, the method of which we shall proceed to indicate in the chapter of this annexure which deals with recruitment. We recommend further that, if the experience of the present war leads to such an increase in the military reserve as would seriously endanger the maintenance of a civil element in the civil medical administration, it should be considered whether a minimum number of civil officers in civil medical service should not be fixed. We also think it important that military officers who are admitted to the civil cadres should take their places with the civilian officers in the department in the same way that officers of the Army hold Indian Civil Service posts in the non-regulation provinces, or are employed in the public works or railway departments. It should no longer be the case that the civil departments should be the adjuncts of the military services.'

These are pious opinions, platonic homage rendered to the theory of a separate Civil Medical Service. The actuality, however, is different.

"Now, Sir, the whole thing seems to me to be a proof of the way in which what one may call service-patriotism asserts itself throughout the Services. It is wrong to be selfish, but a man belonging to a Service is not guilty of selfishness—in fact, considers himself entitled to consideration if he advocates the merits and claims of that Service even although they may exceed the bounds of justice. Now I am not one of those who think it is wrong on the part of a Service to be proud of itself. No man worth his salt can think differently. But those who stand outside the particular Service—the Government of India, who ought not to be wedded to any particular interest, who are interested in the calling out of all available Indian talent, and who are the trustees for the future of India—they ought to take an entirely detached, independent and impartial view of the matter. Are they satisfied that the continuance of the Indian Medical Service in the enjoyment of all its privileges and its practically exclusive monopoly of all important appointments in the Civil Medical Service—are they satisfied that this is in accordance with the fitness of things? Is this going to be the eternal law of nature? Shall it never be time for somebody to rise up and say 'Let us make some radical alterations?' I confess, Sir, it strikes me as most extraordinary that even the third part of my Resolution should be resisted by the representatives of Government. I thought that I had only to read the sentence in the Public Services Commissions' report, namely, that people with non-registrable qualifications should be held to be superior to, or quite the equals of, the Indian Medical Service, I thought I had only to read that to evoke the indignation of just-minded people. But here I have to listen to statements both from the Director-General of the Indian Medical Service and the Hon'ble the Home Member to the effect that that is only right and proper, that it shall be continued until the right time comes when perhaps a few changes may be made. Now that, Sir, is not the attitude that I expect from the Government. Efficiency is not going to be affected by this proposal. We cannot in this country, we will not, Sir, listen to an argument which is based on the theory that the Indianization of any Service means its continual inefficiency. We are emphatically of opinion, and we dare assert it as often as it may be necessary, that in our opinion the Indianization of the Service will conduce to greater efficiency. It will, at all events, place within the reach of those who want the advancement of this country the services of a body of people who will be patriotic, who after their pensions will remain in India and give the benefit of their matured wisdom to the service of this land. The Military officer comes within two or three years of his coming to India to the Civil Medical Service and, towards the end of his Service, or perhaps earlier still he leaves the Civil Service and is obliged to serve in the Military department for a short time to qualify for his pension. Now his services are lost all too soon. A man is trained for several years in the Civil Medical Service, but he does not remain there to give the full benefit of his ripe experience to that department; and, when he has done everything, too early in life he gets his pension and he goes Home. Does it mean that the maintenance of such a Service in the enjoyment of all the privileges which the Indian Medical Service enjoys is a necessity enforced upon the Indian Administration? I venture to think, Sir, that another view is possible, and I would earnestly beg the Government of India to shake off all the inconvenient traditions that have gathered round themselves, to look at the matter not always from the convenient service point of view, but also, even if it be inconvenient, from the necessary, the just and the supreme point of view of the necessities of the people, and the interests of the future, of this country."

[5TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mr. Srinivasa Sastri; Sir William Vincent.]

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Sir, I should like to make one or two points clear which have not in my opinion quite unintentionally, I am sure, been placed very accurately before the Council. It has been suggested by the Hon'ble Mover that the intention of the Government is that Indians should not be employed freely in this Service and that Assistant Surgeons should be excluded from the appointments which are now filled by members of the Indian Medical Service. Neither of these propositions has any foundation. I have stated that Indians are getting into the Indian Medical Service in larger numbers, and I have also suggested that it may be possible to open an increased number of appointments of Civil Surgeon or other appointments now ordinarily held by the Indian Medical Service to Civil Assistant Surgeons. But what I do say is this, that the Council should consider whether it is advisable by a sudden change in the system of Indian Medical administration in this country during the war to make changes which will involve the civil population being entirely dependent for medical treatment and for the teaching of medical work upon men trained in this country. That, I believe, would be the effect of the institution of any such service as that which the Hon'ble Member contemplates. Similarly, it has been suggested that the Government insist that professorial and other special posts should always be reserved for members of the Indian Medical Service. That is far from the attitude which the Government does take up. As the Hon'ble Member says 'you seek to exclude Indians from those posts.' I might retort by saying to him, that he seeks to exclude Indian Medical officers from posts for which they are peculiarly adapted. Otherwise, it is difficult to see why he should make a special point of excluding Indian Medical Service officers from high administrative posts. If it is unfair to exclude Indians educated in this country from such appointments, surely it is equally unfair to exclude men of equal or higher attainments who are members of the Indian Medical Service.

5-32 P.M.

[Sir William Vincent; Mr. Srinivasa Sastri; The Vice-President.] [5TH MARCH, 1918.]

"The Hon'ble Member then continued by referring to the Medical Registration Act. I understood him to say that the Government of India had alleged that thereby they had conferred a great boon on the independent medical profession in this country. It may have been said on some previous occasion; but I submit that it was unnecessary at any rate to use that argument on this occasion—an argument which as far as I am aware neither the Director-General of the Indian Medical Service nor I nor anyone else has used to-day........"

The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri :—" Am I precluded from using an argument advanced in Government blue-books simply because neither officer has used it to-day?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" I submit that in replying to arguments on the other side, it is usual to confine one's remarks to points that have been raised during the debate."

The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri :—" I submit it as a point of order to the Chair."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—" I think the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri is in order. The argument may not have been a great one, but it was one in order."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" There is only one other point. I understood the Hon'ble Member to suggest that the Government of India had turned a deaf ear to all his representations in regard to Military Assistant Surgeons, and that the Government attitude was that they would not alter the present conditions in any circumstances. Sir, I submit that this is an unfair presentment of what I said. I admitted the great force of the Hon'ble Member's arguments. What I did say was this, that during the continuance of this war it was impossible for us to make the change and that there were various considerations which would have to be examined, but I frankly admitted—at least I attempted to do so—the force of the Hon'ble Member's arguments, and I do submit to this Council that it is not reasonable in those circumstances to say that the Home Member turned a deaf ear or refused to pay any attention to what was said. Far otherwise. The position that I should like to take up is that which was put to me by the Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea and say that the discussion in this Council has served a useful purpose, that the arguments which have been used and the points that have been made will receive careful consideration at the hands of Government, but for the reasons I put before the Council, it would be premature and indeed most unwise to attempt any change in the medical organisation of this Service during the continuance of the present war, the more so because so much will depend on change in the military organisation that can only be effected after the conclusion of peace."

[5TH MARCH, 1918.] [The Vice-President.]

The motion was put and the Council divided as follows :—

Ayes—15.

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea,

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915.
(5 & 6 Geo. V, Ch. 61.)

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Friday, the 8th March, 1918.

PRESENT:

His Excellency BARON CHELMSFORD, P.C., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., G.C.M.G., Viceroy and Governor General, presiding, and 62 Members, of whom 55 were Additional Members.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur, asked :—

The Ma[dras] High Co[urt]

1. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the Resolution regarding the Madras High Court recently moved and lost in the Madras Legislative Council?

(b) Will Government be pleased (i) to publish the full correspondence, if any, between them and the Government of Madras over the question of fixing the permanent strength of the Madras High Court; and (ii) to state whether, in view of the increasing arrears of work, they contemplate raising the permanent strength to twelve Judges?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"(a) The Government of India have seen newspaper reports of the proceedings in the Madras Legislative Council.

(b) (i) It is not customary in such cases to publish correspondence between the Government of India and a Local Government, and it is not proposed to make an exception to the usual practice in the present instance.

[Sir William Vincent; Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur; Sir C. Sankaran Nair; Sir George Barnes.] [8TH MARCH, 1918.]

(ii) The Government of India are not aware that the arrears in the Court's work are increasing, and there is no present intention of raising the permanent strength of Judges up to 12. A total staff of this number has, however, been sanctioned up to the end of the current year."

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur, asked :—

Moslem representation in certain Madras Bills.

2. "Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether sanction has been accorded to (i) the Madras City Municipal Bill, (ii) the Madras District Municipalities Bill, and (iii) the Madras Local Boards Bill;

(b) whether in connection with the Madras City Municipal Bill the question of separate Moslem representation received their due consideration, as in the case of the Calcutta Municipal Bill, and, if so, whether it was one of their suggestions; and

(c) if no provision has been made in each of these Madras Bills for adequate Moslem representation on the local bodies, as has been done in the United Provinces, whether they intend to suggest its inclusion in the Bills before according their sanction to them?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"Sanction has not been accorded by the Government of India to the introduction of any of the Bills mentioned. The District Municipalities and the Local Boards Bills have not been referred to the Government of India. The City Municipal Bill has been so referred, but orders will not issue until the opinion of the Corporation has been received by the Local Government. The Bill does not in its present form provide for separate Moslem representation, but a certain number of Councillors are under it to be nominated by Government with the object, among others, of providing for the representation of communities who are in a permanent minority. No suggestion has been made by the Government of India for the provision of special Moslem representation in the Bill, and it is not intended to make such provision unless this is proposed by the Local Government."

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur, asked :—

Local Option.

3. "Will Government be pleased to state whether they are prepared to recognise the principle of local option in areas or localities where local option is desired by a substantial majority of the inhabitants?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"The Hon'ble Member, I gather, means by his question to ask whether the Government are prepared to close all drinking shops in areas or localities where such closure is desired by a substantial majority of the inhabitants. What he exactly means by the words 'substantial majority' remains undefined. The Government have always felt the desirability of ascertaining and deferring to reasonable public opinion in excise matters as expressed by Advisory Committees. A few days ago I tried to point out in this Council the great difficulties surrounding the question of total prohibition, the certainty that illicit practices would follow prohibition, if that policy were adopted, and the necessity for considering the legitimate rights of the minority. If, after considering all these difficulties, and after ascertaining the wishes of the inhabitants, a Local Government should in the future recommend the closure of all drinking shops in any particular area, I do not think that the Hon'ble Member will be likely to find the Government of India standing in the way of the recommendation."

[8TH MARCH, 1918.] [Sir Dinshaw Wacha; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.]

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Grant of Government aid to Messrs. Eyres and Company.

4. " (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they give any aid to Messrs. Eyres and Company, surgical instrument makers ?—and, if so, whether the aid is in the form of—

(i) free use of buildings and machinery ; or,

(ii) monthly allowance, and, if so, the amount of such allowance ; or,

(iii) exclusive purchase by Government of articles manufactured by Messrs. Eyres and Company ?

(b) What are the present and pre-war arrangements for the payment for articles purchased from Messrs. Eyres and Company ?

(c) Are Government aware of the existence, in India, of privately-owned factories manufacturing the same articles as Messrs. Eyres and Company, and, if so, do Government invite public tenders for these articles ? "

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

" (a) The reply is in the affirmative. The assistance given by Government to Messrs. Eyres and Company takes the form of—

(i) the free use of buildings and the use of three electric motors. (All other machinery in use in the factory is the property of Messrs. Eyres and Company) ;

(ii) the payment of a sum of Rs. 500 per mensem, in return for which the firm undertakes to repair all surgical instruments sent to them for this purpose ;

(iii) an agreement to purchase such manufactured articles, as are required for the Medical Store Depôt, Bombay, exclusively from that firm, provided the articles are made to the satisfaction of the Medical Store-keeper to Government, Bombay.

(b) Messrs. Eyres and Company are now and have been, since the agreement was entered into, paid at the rate of Rs. 13 to £1, based on pre-war catalogue prices of the best known London makers.

(c) Government are not aware of the existence in India of privately-owned factories manufacturing articles similar in pattern and quality to those manufactured by Messrs. Eyres and Company. Tenders are not, therefore, invited by Government."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

The Government Medical Stores Department.

5. " Does the Government Medical Stores Department manufacture drugs and other medical preparations which are ordinarily obtainable in the local market ? And do Government supply them to the public, i.e., private individuals, Municipalities and Native States ? "

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

" The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative.

With regard to the second part, sanction has been accorded to the supply of stovaine and novocaine, used for the production of certain forms of analgesia, to duly qualified medical practitioners on payment. This course has been adopted owing to the difficulty of obtaining these drugs in a fresh state in the open market; no other drugs of any kind are supplied to private individuals, but supplies of drugs are made to Municipalities and Native States for the use of hospitals and dispensaries under their whole or partial control, and also to charitable dispensaries."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Pay of clerks and postmen in the large centres in India.

6. " Will Government be pleased to state to what extent the pay of clerks and postmen in the large centres in India has been improved during the last 15 years ? "

[Sir George Barnes; Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda; Sir Claude Hill; Captain Ajab Khan; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.] [8TH MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"Statements * are laid upon the table which show a consistent rise in each of the three quinquennial periods covered by the Hon'ble Member's question in the pay of every grade of clerk in the Post Office up to Rs. 300 a month, and in the pay of postmen in every part of India. The approximate increase of pay in the large offices during the past 15 years has been 32 per cent. in the case of clerks, and 57 per cent. in the case of postmen."

Moslem representation in certain Madras Bills.

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

Appointments to the Imperial Agricultural Service.

7. "(a) Will Government be pleased to state whether the scientific training, practical ability for research work, and experience in experimental farms of Indian officers in the Agricultural Department are considered and compared and any record kept in the files for facility of selection when making appointments for the Imperial Agricultural Service?

(b) What were the tests applied when making such selections in Bengal during the past two years?"

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

"(a) No such records are maintained by the Government of India, and they have no information as to the practice of Local Governments. All appointments of Indians to the Imperial Agricultural Service are made by the Secretary of State on the recommendations of the Government of India. In making these recommendations the Government of India give careful consideration to the scientific attainments of the candidates, and in regard to the practical ability and experience of officers of the Provincial Service, they are largely guided by the opinions of the Local Governments under whom these officers have served.

(b) No Indian officer has been appointed substantively to the Imperial Agricultural Service in Bengal during the past two years. Acting appointments are made by the Local Government, and questions regarding them should be put in the local Council."

The Hon'ble Captain Ajab Khan asked :—

The Native Indian Land Forces.

8. "(a) Will Government be pleased to state the scope and organization of the Native Indian Land Forces?

Local Optio

(b) Were these forces formed under any order in the Gazette of India or under any specific notification, and, if so, will Government be pleased to lay such order or notification on the table?

(c) Is the Indian Army a part of the Native Indian Land Forces?

(d) Are the vacancies caused by the transfer of the nine Indian officers in August last from the Native Indian Land Forces to the Indian Army filled up?"

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

"As regards (a), (b), and (c) the term 'Native Indian Land Forces' is synonymous with the term Indian Army, as distinguished from that of 'His Majesty's Land Forces' which includes the British Army as well. The 'Native Indian Land Forces' have, therefore, no scope or organisation distinct from those pertaining to the Indian Army, nor were they formed under any special order or notification.

The nine officers concerned were not transferred 'from the Native Indian Land Forces to the Indian Army,' but were granted commissions in His Majesty's Land Forces, similar to those held by British officers, and are employed in the Indian Army in the same manner as other officers holding similar commissions are employed."

* Not included in these Proceedings.

[8TH MARCH, 1918.] [Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay; Sir William Vincent; Maung Bah Too.]

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay asked :—

Employment of Kayasthas in public offices.

9. "Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing all orders, circulars or notifications, if any, which Local Governments have promulgated restricting or regulating in any manner the employment of Kayasthas in public offices?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"The Government of India are not aware of the promulgation of any such orders."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay asked :—

"Has not the attention of Government been drawn to one such circular at least which came up for discussion before the Council of the United Provinces?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"The attention of Government has not been drawn to any such circular, but if the Hon'ble Member will kindly give me some indication as to when it was published, the Government will make further inquiries."

THE FINANCIAL STATEMENT, 1918-19.

FIRST STAGE.

11-9 A.M.

The Hon'ble Maung Bah Too :—"My Lord, I cannot pretend to be in any sense experienced in financial matters, and for me to criticise the details of a Budget prepared by such a great financier as our respected Finance Minister would be an impertinence. But I do desire to say a few words in regard to the financial needs of my own Province, and I hope the Council will listen to me patiently and forgive any deficiencies in my arguments. The matter I have to bring before the Council is one of the greatest importance, and I regret that it may suffer from my feeble exposition.

"My Lord, Burma although it is a part of the Indian Empire, is in many respects entirely different from the remainder of that Empire. It stands economically and financially much in the position of a company that has recently been floated, while the rest of India may be regarded as an old established undertaking. In India, you have roads and railways, while, in Burma, we have some railways, but hardly any roads. The reason is that in India the roads were built before the railways, while, in Burma, some railways were built, but the roads are still to be built. I think it is generally admitted that the condition of my Province in regard to communications of both kinds needs very great improvement if the best is to be got out of it.

"Again, my Lord, our resources in Burma of all kinds are naturally very great. We have great mineral wealth and great agricultural resources. Our country is fertile, and our revenue is increasing even under the present conditions to a considerable extent. But to get much more revenue it is essential that money in large quantities should be spent to develop the wealth which lies there dormant. I recognise that in a time like this of financial stress owing to the terrible war which is now being carried on, it is very difficult to find that money, nor do I press the Hon'ble the Finance Member to do so in his present Budget. What I do ask for, is recognition even in that Budget, however small it may be, that the conditions of Burma being special, a special financial policy in regard to Burma should form part of the general financial policy of the Government. Capital expenditure on Burma is not only necessary in the interests of the country, but will be an excellent investment from the point of view of the Indian exchequer. I know too little of finance to say how this may best be effected, whether it should be by a special loan or by special grants, or what is the most appropriate way of marking and carrying out this policy.

"Sir William Meyer in his speech indicated the possibility of greater powers in financial matters being given to the Provinces after the war. That may help us, but we shall want greater and more definite assistance than other parts of India—assistance which we shall repay in every way.

Moslem representation in certain Madras Bills.

"There are, however, three principal directions in which our development is possible, and which I venture to urge require special treatment from the policy which is adopted as regards the rest of India. They are, in the first place, the development of our means of communication, and in this connection I would commend to the favourable notice of Government the Report of the Roads and Communications Committee which was constituted by the Government of Burma In the second place, the encouragement of industry and agriculture, more particularly by the award of State scholarships in order that Burmans may have a chance of showing that they are not the lazy people they are so wrongly assumed to be. I say give us a chance so that my young countrymen may have an opportunity of taking their part in the development of their own country. Thirdly, we want funds for the scientific examination and exploitation of the very great mineral resources of Burma which may be of the greatest possible assistance to the whole of the Empire in the future.

"My Lord, we in Burma have two minerals which are of the highest importance, I believe, for military purposes. The first is wolfram, which is found in the Tavoy District, and the second is lead, which is found in the Shan States where we have one of the richest mines in the whole world. Again, there is the Pottery industry which is indigenous to the country, and which is to be found in every township of my Province. We have good clay, but we have neither the knowledge nor the plant necessary to make the best use of it.

"Our Forests are an unrivalled store-house of riches, and we might hope to supply even more of the timber of the world than we do, but here again we are handicapped by lack of facilities of communication.

"There are also other resources which need to be tapped. We have oil which can supply the needs of the Empire, and there is no reason to doubt that, with careful examination, other sources of mineral wealth will be discovered.

"I cannot refrain from saying that, after examining the Budgets for the last five years which were so carefully reviewed by the Hon'ble the Finance Member in his speech on the 1st of March, I regret I cannot find any trace of the special financial treatment of Burma which I wish to advocate not merely in the selfish interests of my Province, but because I am convinced that it will result in the development of one of the greatest assets in India and indeed of the British Empire."

11-14 A. M. The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis:—"My Lord, in examining the Financial Statement before us, I must at once say that there will be no disposition among the general public to cavil at financial arrangements, the central object of which has been to render on behalf of India all possible help to His Majesty's Government in the vigorous prosecution of the war without weakening the internal administration and the financial credit of the country. It is only just that we should express our appreciation of the tact and judgment with which the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer has discharged his difficult task in these critical times. The Financial Statement shows how sound our position is. But what should be specially gratifying to the Indian public is that we all have the satisfaction of feeling that India has done her duty by the Empire in this great war. The Government of India and the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer have helped us to hold up our heads before the civilised world with the consciousness of having rendered to the Empire and the Allies no mean assistance in men and money.

[8TH MARCH, 1918.] [Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis.]

"My Lord, the war is responsible for numerous changes all over the world, but not the least striking among them is the sudden elevation of India from the humble position of a debtor country to the proud one of a creditor country. In pre-war days we had to run to the London market for our small annual borrowings for capital expenditure ; but during the past three-and-a-half years we have raised loans on an unprecedented scale within the country—a scale which would have caused a strain even on the London market in normal times—not only for our current needs, but also for the purposes of a special gift of £100 million to His Majesty's Government. We have besides lent out of our Reserves £67 million to the Home Government, and propose to increase our investments by £16 million in the coming year. Thus our current expenditure and our share of the extraordinary expenditure and the heavy expenditure both in India and the different theatres of the war on behalf of His Majesty's Government is fully met. On an adjustment of accounts after the war, a heavy amount will be due to us from the Home Government. A novel experiment has likewise been made to finance the Federal Government of America on however humble a scale. This is a record of which any Indian may feel proud, but we owe it all to the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer whose approaching retirement we all regret. That these results have been attained without further and heavier taxation is to some extent due to the magnificent returns of the Department over which Sir Robert Gillan presides with such ability. But the patriotism of the people has been the dominating factor. It is a matter for satisfaction that peoples' ideas have been given a new direction, so potent for the good of the country. Their savings have been diverted into safe, sound and fructifying channels. The methods adopted for raising the loans have taught them lessons of economy. It is hoped that the constitutional changes will so popularise and strengthen the administration that it will command in a larger and ever-increasing measure the capital within the country for useful and remunerative employment and attract cheap capital for the industrial development of India.

"But while so much is said about the loans already floated, a word of caution appears to be necessary in regard to the proposed War Loan of 1918-19. It is clear Government will depend more largely upon War Bonds for necessary funds than upon long-term notes. These Bonds, suited as they are to the needs of the commercial and professional classes, will of course be taken up largely by them. It is a question, however, if the masses will go in for them year after year. Renewed efforts on the part of Provincial Governors and local committees are unnecessary for popularising War Bonds among the classes that need them, whereas they will not have the desired effect among the agriculturists of moderate means. The people have been approached frequently of late for contributions to these War Loans and special funds connected with the war, and they have cheerfully responded from patriotic motives. A repetition of the call, will neutralise the moral effect of the absence of taxation even in a year of stress and difficulty. The wise restraint in the matter of fresh taxation has created confidence among the people and leaves for Government a reserve of resources to be utilised in case of absolute necessity. Nothing should be done which will even remotely shake this public confidence or trench upon this reserve.

"My Lord, two other points connected with the Financial Statement should arrest our attention. Reference has been made to the transport of rails from India to Mesopotamia and other countries. There is no intention to criticise the policy of dismantling lines with its attendant problems in these war times, but a full statement on the subject with details would help a better appreciation among the public of the issues of compensation and replacement.

"The abnormal rise in prices alluded to in the Financial Statement is a matter of the gravest import to the people. The spirit of sacrifice is therefore, a certainty, but even in this matter, there is a point beyond which humanity cannot go. And it is the duty of the Administration to prevent all avoidable distress. That Government is alive to its responsibilities is proved beyond doubt by its action regulating the supply of salt. I have no doubt that similar action will be taken as regards other commodities as occasion arises. But both patriotic motives than anything else. The hope is justified that the cautious estimate of the Finance Member will be exceeded next year. The public sentiment is one of whole-hearted co-operation with the British Empire in the prosecution of the war; the people are determined to do all in their power to help in the success of the Allied cause. No sacrifice is too great for them. The circumstances are, indeed, favourable and another loan may be floated with some degree of assurance of success. The people of Bombay, numerically fewer though they are, compared to the populations of the larger Provinces, under the wise guidance of our popular Governor, will not, it is hoped, allow the lead in this matter of subscriptions to the loan to be taken by others, and the Presidency Banks will be ever ready to co-operate cordially with Government in all possible ways. Were it not for our patriotism, the legislation announced by the Finance Member, placing restrictions on the issue of capital by companies, would have been severely criticised. We are aware that such restrictions have been already provided for in England and the Colonies. The operation of our Port Trusts and Municipal Corporations have likewise been restricted. But, notwithstanding all this, the facts connected with the formation of the recent joint-stock companies, which must be known to Government, demonstrate the undesirability of the proposed restrictions. The war has helped a number of men to make exceptionally large profits, and, on the Bombay side at least, it has been our object to see a good portion of this money employed for the industrial development of India, the clamant need for which cannot be disputed. The new companies have succeeded in attracting some of this capital which would otherwise have, in all probability, gone to force up the prices of existing stocks and real property. Capital has been subscribed even by the subjects of Feudatory States. This is beneficial to Government also During the war no new factory or business can be started for want of men and materials, and the money called by the companies would find a natural outlet into sound temporary investments such as India Treasury Bills and War Bonds provide Besides the amount of capital, which may be put into joint stock concerns, is inconsiderable, compared to the heavy borrowings of Government, and cannot, therefore, affect them. It is difficult to believe that in such circumstances this Government would proceed to place restrictions upon the issue of capital but for the fact that the other parts of the Empire have them. And we, on our part, submit to the restrictions out of regard for the sentiment of the British public. At the same time it is hoped that provision will be made in the Bill for the floatation of companies for the promotion of industries that are of national importance and also of what are known as small industries.

"My Lord, the present situation has brought into relief the necessity of developing salt manufacture in India, if only for its productiveness as a source of revenue. With a vast seaboard such as it has this country should be self-contained in this matter of salt supply. And it is pertinent to inquire what this Government propose to do to develope its manufacture. It would be wrong to throw the whole work on the Provincial Governments. Not only should the policy be laid down by this Government, but the efforts of the Provincial Governments should be seconded by them.

"My Lord, the Financial Statement exposes the groundlessness of the charge of apathy towards the war so lightly brought against Indians The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer deserves the thanks of the community for such a clear and convincing exposition of the whole situation. The figures speak for themselves, and, however strict the scrutiny, it is undeniable that India has rendered to the Empire solid and substantial help at the present crisis "

11-31 A.M. The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur:—"My Lord, the remarkable Financial Statement for 1918-19 reveals an excellent revenue position, a revenue surplus, and a cautious war budget without the imposition of fresh taxation. I take this opportunity to congratulate most heartily the Hon'ble Finance Member on his presenting an eminently satisfactory budget once again. On the eve of laying down the reins of high office the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer may look back with pride and satisfaction upon his career in the Financial Department, and rejoice to find that his valuable service to

[8TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur.]

India and the Empire at a most critical period of her history is fully recognised and appreciated by his non-official colleagues in the Imperial Legislative Council.

"The Financial Statement assumes for budget purposes that the war is likely to continue for yet another year. The end of the gigantic world-struggle does not yet seem to be within sight. How to win the war is the one mighty resolve of the whole Empire. India, too, my Lord, is determined to continue to render the Empire every loyal assistance in the successful prosecution of the war. At such a time any criticism of the war budget ought to recognise at once the urgent needs of the British Empire. Neither is it possible for me to criticise the budget without a fair knowledge of the present military needs, nor is it advisable to press vigorously, as in normal times, the claims of India in matters of internal progress and reform. Nor is a week's time hardly sufficient to go through and digest a mass of statistics in the able memorandum prepared by the Financial Secretary.

"I should, however, like to place a few facts before the Council, as may suggest thoughts for future guidance. Until the year when war broke out education and sanitation, my Lord, continued to receive sufficient encouragement during your predecessor's régime. Since then war-conditions have naturally prevented your Excellency's Government from making large and substantial grants towards their expenditure. But it is to be regretted that even the grants since made to Local Governments could not fully be utilised. While the accumulation of non-recurring grants, made to education between 1911-12 and 1918-19, represents a fair sum of nearly £2½ millions, the unspent balance on the 1st of April 1919 is expected to be £854,000, or less than a third of the total expenditure of non-recurring grants. Further, the Financial Statement expresses that in view of war conditions they have to ask Local Governments to restrict drawings on their balances. Hence no appreciable progress could be made in education. Moreover, a special recurring grant of thirty lakhs, allotted in the budget, for the development of primary education, is too small to be of practical value over a large area. In view of the growing importance of primary education this grant needs to be doubled, so as to be of real benefit to the cause of primary education. The Financial Member, I daresay, will see his way to make a grant of at least £400,000 instead of £200,000, without materially altering any budget item. Though substantial amounts are not available for improving education efforts. should be made to divert a good portion of the money spent on University or higher education to the more pressing needs of primary and secondary education. The need for trained teachers in Primary Schools is increasingly felt, especially in aided and unaided institutions. In Government Vernacular Primary Schools half the number of teachers are untrained men, and in Board and Municipal Schools far more than half the number are untrained men, while in aided and unaided Vernacular Primary Schools, the trained men form only about a seventh of the total number of teachers. The position is better in the Anglo-Vernacular Primary Schools under Government, Board, or Municipal management, where two-thirds of the teachers are trained men. But in aided and unaided Anglo-Vernacular Schools less than a fourth of the teachers are trained men. These figures clearly show that, if primary education is to make headway, more trained teachers are needed, and, consequently, more training schools in select centres. Whether in normal or abnormal times, adequate provision should be made to meet the growing needs of primary education. Also, I should like to suggest that a portion of the Imperial grants, both recurring and non-recurring, should be earmarked for Moslem education. Fairly satisfactory as the progress of Moslem education has been in recent years I believe there is need for an increased number of scholarships to Moslem youths who desire to pursue scientific or industrial education. For they have a better aptitude for such education than those of the sister community. Special Imperial grants, too, should be earmarked for scientific and commercial education. A sum of about Rs. 34,000 is all that Provincial revenues could find for promoting higher commercial education in 1916-17, and a sum of about Rs. 24,400 only for commercial schools.

[Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur ; Raja of Kanika] [8TH MARCH, 1918.]

"Nor can sanitation be neglected. Steeped as the masses have been for years past in ignorance and poverty, any amount expended on the improvement of rural sanitation so as to minimise the evils of preventible diseases is money well spent. Even there one finds that nearly half the total expenditure of the non-recurring grants is shown as the unspent balance expected to be available on the 1st of April 1919. I wish, my Lord, that Local Governments are permitted to spend more of these non-recurring grants so as to leave little unspent balance, except where it is absolutely necessary.

"Under the revenue heads the rapid growth of the excise revenue cannot be contemplated with equanimity. It has nearly doubled itself within the last fifteen years. Within the last four years, it has increased by about 17 per cent. Nearly half the total revenue is shared between Madras and Bombay, the former alone contributing more than a fourth of the total revenue. While an increased revenue does not necessarily indicate a corresponding growth in the consumption of liquor, it represents, however, a large amount of money of the drinking classes, the vast bulk of whom are the poor masses of India. The money they now waste on liquor may profitably be spent in securing for them increased comfort and better living. The Government, my Lord, I respectfully submit, is not morally entitled to raise revenue from the cursed liquor traffic.

"Under the expenditure items, the military item, as is indispensable and inevitable, tops the list. While I do not feel competent to criticise that item, I feel bound to say that a considerable decrease in expenditure should be looked forward to when normal times return. Within the last five years the expenditure has increased by about 40 per cent. Next in importance to military expenditure comes police expenditure. The expenditure, too, has shown a very rapid rise from £3·81 millions in 1907-08 to over £5½ millions in 1917-18, and the budgeted figure for 1918-19 rises to £5·86 millions. Within the last ten years it has increased by about 74 per cent. A large increase, I daresay, must have occurred in the Criminal Investigation Department, whose expenditure alone has nearly trebled itself during the same period. If increased expenditure leads to efficiency I shall not grudge it. But I have reason to believe there is need for effective retrenchment in police expenditure.

"In view to the impending reforms, public expenditure is likely to grow. The question of retrenchment is even more important than that of reform. I should like to suggest the appointment of a mixed committee of officials and non-officials to scrutinise our public expenditure and suggest ways of economy. Again, the post-war trade problems have to engage our serious attention, as the future financial strength of India will have to depend upon her economic prosperity. Without feeling any necessity for imposing fresh taxation the Government should consider the revenues of the country have to be augmented by a well-thought-out plan of Indian industrial expansion. Let me hope, my Lord, that, as soon as the war is over, greater encouragement will be given to scientific and commercial education, and that your Excellency's régime will mark the beginning of a new industrial era in this country."

11-40 A.M. The Hon'ble the Raja of Kanika:—"My Lord, this is the fourth War Budget which has been presented to this Council, and I must take the earliest opportunity of congratulating the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer on the Financial Statement which he presented on Friday last. The bold and statesman-like manner in which he has managed our finances during a period of extreme difficulty ever since the war broke out must excite the admiration and gratitude of all—not only of those who are inside this Council, but also of the larger public who are outside it. My Lord, it was Sir William Meyer's misfortune that circumstances over which none had any control had so shaped themselves as to compel him to impose a number of additional taxes within the last few years. My Lord, so far as extra burdens were the inevitable result of the present war, there never had been any desire to find fault with Sir William Meyer. Rather, there was a good deal of sympathy for him in the difficult task, with which he was faced, of making the two ends meet. This is the last Financial Statement which Sir William Meyer will deal with in this Council, and I take this opportunity of expressing our wide appreciation of his work here as the Finance Member of the Government of India.

"The current year, my Lord, is expected to close with a surplus of about six million pounds and the budget for the coming year is expected to yield a surplus of about £2½ millions. My Lord, Sir William Meyer has very wisely declined on the one hand to impose any fresh burdens this year by way of new taxation, and on the other he has also very prudently declined to remove any taxation which was imposed during the last few years. My Lord, nobody would like to quarrel with the Finance Minister in the extreme caution with which he frames his financial policies. 'Prudence' one of Sir William's distinguished predecessors remarked, 'is to a Finance Minister what modesty is to a woman.' Sir William Meyer, if I may venture to say so, is both prudent and modest. But, my Lord, while we must agree with Sir William Meyer in the cautious and prudent policy which he now lays down, may I express a fervent hope that the whole scheme of war taxes imposed during the last few years will be liberally reconsidered as soon as the war ends? The extreme necessity of the situation, perhaps, justifies all that Sir William has done by way of imposing fresh taxation; but, though necessity justifies them, they are an onerous and a very heavy burden no doubt, and the one hope with which the country is bearing with them all at the present time, with prices of almost all commodities soaring and the purchasing power of money continually going down, is the hope of their temporary nature and of their ultimate removal after the war. Sir William Meyer's work, I thoroughly agree, has been very difficult. The task of a Finance Minister is the most thankless of all tasks. No Finance Minister ever was a popular hero. No public statue is ever voted to him. It seems that Burke's famous dictum 'It is as difficult to tax and to please as it is to love and be wise' will remain true for all ages to come. But in spite of it all, I again repeat my fervent hope and prayer that the Government will be pleased to reconsider the whole scheme of war taxation as soon as the present war ends, and that, with good surpluses in hand just now, no further increase of taxation—whether directly or indirectly—will be demanded.

"I also hope, my Lord, that the end of the war will see a renewed attempt to re-vitalise our schemes of education and sanitation. The war has necessarily restricted to a great extent any large expenditure on these lines, and as these are the things absolutely essential for a minimum of civilised life, I hope the Government will not fail to make increased allotments for these services as soon as conditions permit.

"The experimental issue of short-term Treasury Bills made necessary by the excessive drain on the resources of the Government of India due to the very heavy military charges which the Government of India are incurring on behalf of the Home Government has proved a very great success, and I beg to offer my congratulations to the Hon'ble the Finance Member for having taken, what practically amounts to a new departure in our Indian Finance system. I am sure this new issue, modelled on the British Treasury Bill system, will be found equally advantageous to both the Government and the public. It has afforded a great relief to the money-markets of India and as a war measure, it does indirectly, though in a very great way, help His Majesty's Government in the vigorous prosecution of the war. The absence of a three months' Treasury Bill at the beginning was felt to be a great handicap, as, to the business man who wanted a temporary short-term investment of his idle money, the long period bills failed to be attractive. Of course, I quite realise that the Government had very good reasons not to offer the three months' term when they issued the Treasury Bills in October last, because even in normal times a heavy financial liability maturing in the middle of the month of January was a thing quite difficult to handle. I am glad, however, to find from the Hon'ble the Finance Member's statement that from January last even the three months' bills are being issued. This, I am sure, is highly welcome in business and commercial circles, and, as this is only another way of helping to win the war, I have no doubt there will be a big response to it.

[Raja of Kanika.] [8TH MARCH, 1918.]

"My Lord, the issue of a big war loan in India on the premium bond principle has long been suggested in some influential quarters. Several Indian Chambers of Commerce also strongly recommended this plan of raising money. The main idea of the premium bond is of course to cater for the millions of small investors to whom a loan on the premium bond principle is bound to be specially attractive. Certain classes of people who are not regular investors are no doubt attracted by this means as they are by no others. Apart from the large number of thriftless people, who will not save even if they can, there are a large number—I should say, a very large number—of other people who do not care to save simply because the amount that they can save at any one time is much too small. They feel that their total savings are too small to be useful for any important necessity, and therefore they give up all ideas of saving as not being worth their while. To these classes, no doubt, a premium bond loan would appeal immensely, the chance of winning a prize would attract all classes and gild the ordinary invitation to subscribe to a war loan with a touch of romance.

"But, my Lord, in spite of all these advantages the premium bond principle has been severely condemned on high moral grounds. It is like running on an inclined plane and once it is adopted there will be no practical limit to the continual application of its principles in other cases; it will supply the artificial excitement of a gamble in place of duty, loyalty and patriotism, and thereby it will greatly undermine them all; it will give the great weight of Government influence to gambling; it will land the Government in the curious position of encouraging gambling on the one hand and repressing it on the other.

"It is a great relief, my Lord, that Sir William Meyer has rejected the principle of premium bonds, though, I am sorry to find, not on ethical but on financial considerations. I do trust and pray, my Lord, that if ever the Government of India reconsider the question of introducing the premium bond principle here, it will think carefully of all the sides of this important question before it takes a final decision.

"My Lord, when the Indian war loan was floated last year, many were the misgivings with which its progress was watched. Sir William Meyer and his expert advisers did not hope to get more than £10 millions or 15 crores of rupees. But the progress of the loan within a few days of its issue proved to the hilt how utterly futile all the misgivings were as to its ultimate success. My Lord, when the people of India undertook to make a total war contribution of £100 millions to His Majesty's Government to be used towards the prosecution of the war they knew what they were about, and they proved their mind and word by the subsequent success of the war loan. To get £36 million where only 10 millions were expected is a very great thing, and it speaks very highly of a poor country like India. The response to the war loan last year was universal—all classes of the community freely took part in its accumulating total. My Lord, the war loan was a part, it was only a part, of our great national effort to mobilise and marshal into line all the forces at our disposal for the supreme task of winning the war. The present war is India's war quite as much as it is England's war. We are in it, heart and soul, and the whole country from end to end is supremely thankful that India has been allowed to pull her weight and to take her legitimate part in this titanic war of civilisation against the forces of a savage and despotic militarism. My Lord, in this matter of the Indian War Loan, India and the Indians were on trial. It is a supreme satisfaction to all concerned to find how very creditably India has come out of it. The people of India, my Lord, realise what this greatest of the world's war is being fought for, and there is nothing, my Lord, that could excite their imagination and ignite their zeal more than the sight of this appalling sacrifice of the most precious human blood and this colossal expenditure of money—all for the sanctity of a 'scrap of paper'! The people of India, my Lord, have entered into this war with a mind incandescent with loyalty and melting with zeal, and they would, I am sure, see to it that so far as men and money are concerned, India will give all—all that she can possibly give. Sir William Meyer hopes to get £20 millions next year as the result of the war loan. I do sincerely hope and trust that the response to this year's war loan will be as gratifying as the response last year. I have not the least doubt, my Lord, that India will nobly respond to this fresh call of duty."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay:—"My Lord, may I be permitted to join in the congratulations which have been offered to the Hon'ble the Finance Member on the budget he has presented to the Council this year. The task of a Finance Minister of India always is difficult, was never perhaps so full of dangerous pit-falls as has been the case in Sir William Meyer's term of office, and it is no ordinary achievement even for a man of his ability to have come triumphant out of it. Every weapon that he designed during the last few years to combat the difficulties in his way have fallen with soft hands on the people—and the fact that there is no provision for fresh taxation in his final budget will be received with unmixed satisfaction throughout India. They all bear the imprint of his remarkable skill, his resourcefulness and a broad-minded sympathy with the people of this country which will ever be remembered by them with a sense of gratitude. He lays down the reins of his great office to the regret of us all. 11-52 A.M.

"The decision of your Excellency's Government to float the war loan again this year is most welcome as it will give us a further opportunity of redeeming in cash as far as possible the debt of honour for which we have made ourselves responsible. We, the people of India, are thankful, my Lord, that we have been permitted to shoulder to some extent the burden of the almost Herculean task of 'making the world safe for democracy' and of saving human liberty and human civilisation from the wounds of a savage and despotic militarism. The war loan last year was our supreme test, and it is a matter of unfeigned satisfaction that by her ready response India has proved her fitness to be a real partner in the Empire. May this comradeship in arms grow into a real Imperial and inter-Imperial partnership, will be the devout prayer of every sincere well-wisher of the Empire!

"I have absolutely no doubt, my Lord, that the estimate of £20 millions which Sir William Meyer expects as the results of the war loan in the ensuing year will be easily reached. The people of India are suffering with all other countries of the world by the long continuance of this present terrible struggle, and they realise only too well that a big and successful war loan will, in the words of Mr. Lloyd George, 'shorten the war, it will help to save life, it will help to save the British Empire, it will save Europe and it will save civilisation.' What a glorious opportunity for us to have a share in the noblest of tasks which man ever set before himself to achieve in this world, what a fine opportunity to have a hand and a share in the making of the world's history! I believe, with all my heart, my Lord, I do believe, that India's response to this fresh call in the name of liberty, humanity and justice, will be as noble and as magnificent in the coming year as it has been in the past.

"But, my Lord, in this connection may I be permitted to utter a word of caution? I pray that the war loan in rural areas this year may be pushed on very cautiously so that poor people—who, it is just possible, have invested their all in the war loan last year—may not find any pressure brought to bear upon them to subscribe again in sums much beyond their means. Cases of such undue pressure have unfortunately actually occurred in some places last year, else I would not have referred to it at all. I fervently hope that the work of pushing on the war loan will be entrusted to careful and judicious persons so that people might voluntarily subscribe the utmost that they want to. The moral value of such free and voluntary contributions is much greater than in any other case. If the Government will fully explain the situation to the people and trust them, the people in their turn will trust the Government freely with their money.

"My Lord, the Railways of India have broken all records and have given the Government of India an unexpected windfall. The net profit on Railways in 1917-18 is expected to be £10·1 millions as against £5·6 millions in the budget estimate. Such a large increase of revenue is always welcome, and no one is more glad to get them than the Finance Member himself. That the Railways will treat the Finance Minister so nobly in spite of the restrictions referred to by Sir William Meyer is indeed a matter of great satisfaction, but it does seem to me that the estimates of revenue for the current year under the Railways had been framed rather too cautiously. Be that as it may, may I draw your Lordship's attention to one serious public inconvenience in connection with our railway services? Railway facilities, my Lord, have been seriously curtailed throughout India recently, on account of the unusual conditions prevailing at the present time. The supreme necessity of moving military supplies and other goods vital to the successful prosecution of the war, the grave difficulty with regard to the supplies of good coal, the continued deterioration of the permanent-way and the rolling stock, including in some cases the actual dismantling of certain railway lines to provide for railway materials for Mesopotamia—all these, my Lord, have combined to create an almost unparalleled situation with regard to our railway facilities and have resulted in a very serious restriction of railway services throughout India. I have no desire, my Lord, to manufacture grievances, but I feel it my duty to represent to your Excellency's Government the very great hardships felt throughout the country by the serious curtailment of railway facilities I know we are living in abnormal times, and therefore we have no choice but to put up with abnormal conditions. But, in spite of it all, I do hope that at the earliest possible opportunity the Government will kindly reconsider the question of provision of increased railway facilities in the country. I do not suggest that the pre-war facilities ought to be immediately re-established, because nobody is foolish enough to imagine even for a moment that that is possible. What I do suggest is, that, considering what a fine asset the Railways have proved themselves to be, the Railway Board might just reconsider the question of providing, at the earliest possible opportunity, improved railway facilities—however slight they might be, because I am convinced that any relief, however slight, would be highly welcome in the present state of railway traffic in the country.

[Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay.] [8TH MARCH, 1918.]

"There is another matter, my Lord, on which I beg to thank your Excellency's Government—I refer to the recently-issued Royal Proclamation which constitutes a branch of the Royal Mint at Bombay for the purpose of the local minting of sovereigns. We have been asking for this privilege, my Lord, for a long time, and we have got it at last. The measure now taken only completes the steps recommended by the Indian Currency Committee of 1898. In paragraph 54 of their Report the Committee reported that they were 'in favour of making the British sovereign a legal tender and a current coin in India. 'We also consider,' they remarked, 'that, at the same time, the Indian Mints should be thrown open to the unrestricted coinage of gold on terms and conditions such as govern the three Australian branches of the Royal Mint. The result will be that under identical conditions the sovereign would be coined and would circulate both in England and in India.'

"My Lord, the first part of the Committee's recommendations, namely, that the British sovereign should be made a legal tender was carried out almost immediately in 1899, but the latter part took a very long time to be accomplished. By 1900, it almost seemed as if matters had progressed favourably when Sir Clinton Dawkins actually announced that it had been decided to constitute a branch of the Mint at Bombay for this purpose; but these proposals were never carried out, a number of technical and other difficulties were raised by the Royal Mint, and the project was dropped in 1902. The whole question was, however, revived in 1911, and since then the Government of India have again fought for this privilege being granted to India. The country, my Lord, is deeply thankful to the Government in having finally succeeded in securing for India this valued privilege.

"With reference to the figures given in Tables XVI and XVII of the Financial Statement I cannot help expressing my regret for the increase of expenditure in my Province of Bihar and Orissa under the heads of 'Police' and 'Law and Justice' due to the unfortunate riots in the district of Shahabad.

"But I hope, my Lord, that it is only a passing phase of the Provincial budget and no undue importance need be attached to the occurrences themselves which have necessitated it. The people of the disturbed area have by this time realised that the arm of law is long enough—and strong enough—to reach any offender even in remote and obscure villages, and it is disastrous to court the advent of military camp, additional police force or special tribunals. I also venture to think that your Excellency's appeal to the leaders of the communities of Hindus and Mussalmans and to the communities themselves has not and will not go in vain, and permit me to assure your Excellency that genuine efforts are being made by both to prevent a recurrence of such deplorable incidents."

12 P. M.

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Bishan Dutt Shukul:—"My Lord, I join hands with my colleagues in congratulating the Hon'ble Member, Sir William Meyer, on the remarkable lucidity which characterizes the Financial Statement which he has placed in our hands this year, and which has already been accorded a warm reception by the whole country.

"My Lord, when we met here in this Council Chamber last year about this time, we prayed that the outlook already so sad and dismal then should soon disappear and an era of universal peace and order dawn upon us, but that was not to be. The war still continues with its unabated fury, and the end is not yet in sight. The war is writ large in every page of the Finance Member's speech. Under these circumstances, we cannot but admire him for the tact and fore-thought with which he has not only been able to make both ends meet, but has maintained the financial stability of the Government intact, without imposing any additional taxation upon the people of the country during the next year. This is indeed a most happy feature of the present budget.

"My Lord, the revised estimate for the current year shows a surplus of £5,825,100. Such a large surplus coming as it does in the train of a series of similar surpluses during the immediately preceding years especially at this juncture, when the whole country is passing through an unprecedented crisis, would lead one to pause and think as to how far such a large surplus is really a matter to be congratulated upon. Our Hon'ble friend the Finance Member refers to caution in the opening part of his speech, as a matter for congratulation. I quite agree with him. Caution is no doubt an element of statesmanship, especially during these war times, but excess of it is not a very wholesome feature, and one need not be disappointed, if, at times, it fails to receive an enthusiastic response. It is with reference to these surpluses that the Finance Commission observed in their report that 'in preparing their estimate of revenue, the Government of India erred on the side of caution'. The principle of maintaining a fair equilibrium between the estimated revenue and expenditure of the State, providing at the same time for a moderate and reasonable surplus, is indeed a sound financial policy, but to evolve large, continuous and progressive surpluses, year after year, is a policy which, I submit, is hardly defensible. For after all, what do these large surpluses indicate? They are apt to indicate nothing else than an attempt, a deliberate attempt on the part of the Government, to squeeze more money out of the pockets of the people than what is fairly needed for the requirements of the State. In normal times this would have been the most objectionable feature of the budget, and an immediate demand for the remission of taxation would have been raised by the whole country, but in view of the present embarrassed position of the Government due to war, I refrain from making any such demand, although the necessity for the reduction of certain taxes, such as the salt tax and the increased Railway rates, is being most strongly felt.

"My Lord, though the remission of taxation is out of question at present, yet the Government, in my humble opinion, are bound to return a substantial portion of the surpluses to the people, by applying it to purposes which will immediately tend to ameliorate their material and moral conditions Since, who are the principal contributors to these large surpluses? They are no other than the cultivators of the soil. The Hon'ble Finance Member has attributed the large surpluses to the excellent agricultural prospects of the present year. Surely, it is upon the agricultural prosperity of the country that the stability of the financial position of the Government of India mainly depends. One year's bad harvest shakes the very foundation of the whole financial edifice, and are not then the cultivators, the teeming millions, toiling at the well and at the plough, the real custodians of the agricultural prosperity of the land, entitled to receive their just share of the surplus to which they have so largely contributed? I wish the rosy figures as indicated in the budget should have really represented a prosperous India. I wish there should have been a real correspondence between the conditions of the finances of the State and the condition of the people, but, my Lord, unfortunately it is not so, while, on the one hand, we have to congratulate the Government on their 'excellent revenue position' and fat surpluses, on the other hand, we feel the painful necessity of drawing the attention of the Government to the actual condition of the people which is far from being satisfactory. My Lord, the question which demands the most serious attention of the Government at this moment, is the gradual deterioration that is taking place in the economic condition of the agriculturists, and I think I shall be lacking in my duty if I do not urge upon the attention of the Government the necessity of providing larger funds for the purpose of agriculture, education, medical relief and sanitation, etc.

"My Lord, agricultural industry is the mainstay of the Indian nation, of 80 per cent. of the population of the whole country, yet no other industry is in a worst plight. While in the countries of the West the farmers have begun to grow wheat yielding 30 to 45 bushels per acre, the poor tenantry of India can never expect a better yield than 10 to 12 bushels per acre and this in spite of the agricultural department having been established here all these 30 years or more. My Hon'ble friend the Finance Member congratulates the Government upon the increase of ·3 per cent. in the cultivated area of the year. My Lord, this increase is insignificant and any felicitations expressed on this account are bound to be coupled with expressions of regret that the alleged expansion of area under cultivation is hardly keeping pace with the corresponding increase in population. The inadequacy of food-supply to meet the growing demand in India, both external and internal, is being seriously reflected in the inflated prices of the necessities of life, which have been pushed up to the high standard of famine rates in several parts of the country and are causing acute hardship and distress to the people. Unless immediate steps are taken to copiously increase the productivity of the soil, the farmers of India will not be able to stand competition in the markets of the world, and the sufferings of the people will know no end. In view of these remarks, it will be observed that the allotment under the head of agriculture is wholly inadequate. More money should be placed at the disposal of the agricultural department to enable it to provide for more agricultural schools, more trained men, more machines and more cattle-breeding and demonstration farms, with a view to accelerate the pace of progress in the matter of agricultural improvements.

"My Lord, I have to make a few more observations on two items of expenditure in which I am particularly interested, and they are no other than those of education and sanitation which are the prime needs of the country. In the matter of education I have to thank the Government for their putting aside a sum of Rs. 30 lakhs for the development of primary education. Although this may not be quite up to the expectations of the people, yet it furnishes a striking testimony to the high regard in which the Government holds the cause of primary education in this country. While congratulating the Government upon this, I cannot help confessing to a feeling of disappointment that overtook me when I did not find any provision in the budget under this head for the establishment of the Nagpur

[8TH MARCH, 1918.] [Rai Bahadur Bishan Dutt Shukul; Mr. Malcolm Hogg.]

University in the Central Provinces. My Lord, the whole Province feels keenly about this, and the Council may take it from me that this omission will be very much resented. I therefore beseech the Government and especially request the Finance and Education Members to see their way to provide some money at least by reducing the surplus, and curtailing expenditure under the head of Civil Works, to enable the Local Government to make at least a beginning towards the establishment of the Nagpur University.

"As for sanitation, I have personal grievance. I notice in page 69 of the memorandum under head Sanitation an allotment of Rs. 6,31,000 only for the Central Provinces. This is less than the sum shown in the revised estimate by Rs. 1 lakh. The reason for this decrease has nowhere been given, and an explanation is due from my Hon'ble friend the Finance Member for the same. The Central Provinces are still far behind the other sister Provinces in the matter of sanitary improvements. The rate of mortality still continues to be high. It was only last year that the infant mortality reached the record figure of 265 per 1,000 births which was the highest in the whole of India, if I am not mistaken. Besides, the condition of rural sanitation 'is most disappointing'. Village houses are still ill-ventilated. The village sites are dirty, crowded with cattle, choked with rank vegetable and poisoned with stagnant pools. It may not be out of place here to give public expression to the general feeling of disappointment prevailing in the rural areas that all that is talked of and all that is done for sanitary reforms, the least attention is paid to village sanitation. While 1-14th only of the population of British India resides in the Municipal areas, yet more money is spent on urban areas than rurals, and this is a matter which I wish the attention of your Lordship especially drawn to, and I hope that a more lively interest will henceforth be taken in the improvement of the village sanitation and so far as the Central Provinces are concerned, the provisions instead of being curtailed would rather be increased.

"My Lord, I quite realize the difficulties of the present situation, and if I have been encouraged to demand more money, it is because of the tantalizing surpluses accruing year after year. Moreover I strongly feel that, as far as possible, the progress of the internal reforms in the country should not be stayed. In my humble opinion the Government should have a definite determined policy with regard to financing education, sanitation and agriculture. It is high time that the Government should lay down a distinct financial policy which would assure, or at any rate convince, the people at large that the desired goal, aimed at by these departments, will be reached within a definite period of time. As the whole question relating to reforms is under consideration of the Government of India and the Secretary of State, as indicated by the Hon'ble Finance Member in paragraph 95 of his speech, it is expected that this aspect of the question will not be overlooked, and we all hope and believe that the time is not distant when your Excellency will earn the further gratitude of the people by ensuring fiscal independence to India, accompanied by provincial autonomy and a substantial measure of responsible government, so essential to her industrial, social, economical and political development and without which she can never expect to secure her proper place in the civilized world.

"Just a parting word to my Hon'ble friend the Finance Member who is on the eve of retirement and I have done. We are all thankful to him for the paternal care and solicitude with which he has managed the financial affairs of the State during these most anxious war times, and we deeply regret that at this juncture we are to lose in him not only an able financier, but a sympathetic heart so loyal to India. He carries with him the good wishes of the whole country, and we hope that in the midst of his new surroundings he will not forget India, but will continue to exert his beneficial influence in the cause of her interests to which he has been so ardently devoted."

12-13 P.M.

The Hon'ble Mr. Malcolm Hogg:—"The Financial Statement which was presented by the Hon'ble the Finance Member last week affords neither provocation nor excuse for a lengthy speech and in saying that I feel that I am paying it a very high compliment. With regard to the Revenue and Expenditure side the position is extremely satisfactory, and it only remains for me to tender my hearty congratulations to the Hon'ble Member on being able to present a statement, which must be very gratifying to the country in general. But as the Hon'ble Member has said it is the ways and means problem which has been and is the cause of most of his anxieties, and I should like to make a few remarks on certain points which arise in connection with that problem. In the course of his speech the Hon'ble Member stated that it had been his consistent policy to promote co-operation between Government and the Presidency Banks and made a warm acknowledgment of the response with which his efforts had met from those institutions. As I have this year the honour to be President of the Bank of Bombay it would, I think, be ungracious if I did not thank Sir William Meyer on behalf of that bank for the terms in which he has referred to the assistance which the Bank has been able to give. In doing so, I do not wish it to be thought that I am appropriating to myself and my colleagues on the board the credit, which was intended, and rightly intended for our Secretary and Treasurer, Mr. Aitken. That is far from my intention. I merely regard myself as the mouth-piece of Mr. Aitken and of my co-directors, and feel that it would be their wish not only that I should acknowledge the Hon'ble Member's remarks, but that I should state definitely that it is our wish at all times to afford the maximum possible assistance to Government and more particularly in the difficult times through which we are at present passing.

"About the desirability of close co-operation between Government and the Presidency Banks, I do not think there can be two opinions, but there may on particular occasions be two opinions as to the best method of co-operation. The Presidency Banks have certain definite and important functions to perform in financing the commerce and industry of India, and when considering how best to assist Government, they have to be careful that the assistance is not given in such a way as will or may subsequently hinder them from adequately performing their primary functions For to ignore this aspect of the question would be a very short sighted policy and would entail consequences as detrimental to the interests of Government as to those of the commercial and financial communities. If then there have at any time been or should be in the future differences of opinion between the Hon'ble Member and the Bank of Bombay, I am sure that he recognises that such differences of opinion are not due to any diversity in the object aimed at, but to an honest difference of opinion as to the best way of achieving that object.

"While I am speaking of co-operation I may perhaps refer briefly to another passage in the Hon'ble Member's speech where in paragraph 53 he referred to the possibility that Government might have to call to a still larger extent for the co-operation of merchants and others who have homeward remittances to make with the view of applying those remittances more largely than in the past to the financing of exports of essential national importance. Now, I feel sure that if the necessity for such a call arises, Government will receive a ready response from those to whom it will be addressed. But I would just like to say this. Government restrictions on and interference with the ordinary channels of trade are not in themselves desirable, and are only acceptable in so far as they are necessitated under war conditions by paramount national interests. I hope, therefore, that before making any such further call Government will thoroughly investigate this rather complicated question and, if possible, take into their confidence those who will be affected by it in order that there may be no doubt of its necessity. For it does seem to me that the present complete control, which is exercised by Government over the utilisation of freight space, already effects the object which Government have in view, or if it does not already effect it can very easily be made to do so. As far as I am aware very little except exports of national importance are being or can be shipped at present, and if that is so it is difficult to see how those who have homeward remittances to make can use them for any other purpose except the financing of such exports.

[8TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mr. Malcolm Hogg.]

"The next subject on which I wish to make a few remarks is the proposed War Loan of 1918-19. Compared with the results of the last War Loan the Hon'ble Member may appear to have taken a rather conservative figure in estimating the minimum proceeds of the forthcoming Loan at £20 millions, but while I cordially join with him in hoping that this minimum figure will be largely surpassed, I think that he has good reasons for his caution. As he as said the very magnitude of last year's effort is in itself a reason, and then there is the fact that the present very high prices of cotton and other raw materials will make it more difficult for industrial concerns, in spite of the large profits which many of them have made, to release their funds for lending to Government. Any steps therefore which Government can take towards reducing these high prices, and I am glad to see that the matter is receiving careful consideration in my own Province, will tend to pave the way for the success of the loan. Government are aware that a good deal of inconvenience has been felt by investors in the last War Loan owing to the delay in the issue of scrip and other cognate matters, and I welcome the Hon'ble Member's assurance that steps have been taken to prevent any such complaint in respect of the coming loan by simplifying and decentralizing arrangements. May I suggest to the Hon'ble Member that the greatest possible emphasis should be laid upon and publicity given to this fact when the new loan is floated? Dissatisfaction with the previous arrangements undoubtedly exists in many quarters, and it is essential that, that feeling should be removed if the new Loan is to have the best possible chance. This can only be done by widespread advertisement couched in the simplest and plainest language of the new arrangements which have been made. One other point I should like to emphasise, although I have no doubt that Government are fully alive to it, is this. The success of last year's loan was very largely due to the vigorous publicity campaign initiated by the heads of Local Governments and carried on by unofficial War Loan Committees. A similar campaign and one no less vigorous is essential this year also if last year's success is to be repeated. The Hon'ble Member has foreshadowed the placing of restrictions upon the withdrawal of capital from the money-market by companies in order to prevent competition with the Government loan, and I see that he is shortly to introduce a Bill for this purpose. With the object of this proposed legislation I certainly have no quarrel, nor do I suppose that it will evoke opposition from any quarter, but I wish to place one or two considerations of a practical nature before Government with regard to the method to be adopted. Mere prohibition of the floating of companies might, I think, fail of its object, for it is certain that much of the money thus prevented from being invested in new companies would not find its ways to Government, but would be diverted to speculation in house property, in shares of existing companies, and in other directions where it would be lost to Government. I would suggest, therefore, that in many cases a form of conditional floatation might be more efficacious than mere prohibition. What I mean is this. Under present conditions there is likely to be considerable delay in the full utilisation of their capital funds by many new companies, and such companies are likely to have large funds at their disposal for temporary investment for varying but considerable periods. I am inclined to think that Government might get more money by allowing companies, which are likely to prove attractive to the investing public, to raise funds on condition of lending a certain proportion of the funds so raised to Government for certain periods than by excluding them altogether from the money-market. The exact conditions as to the proportion of capital to be lent and the period for which it is to be lent would have to be settled to suit the circumstances of each individual case. Of course, it may be objected that a company, which did not expect to be able to utilise its whole capital for some time, would ordinarily call up only a small portion of that capital at the outset. That is true enough, but I think that such a company, rather than be excluded altogether from the money-market, would prefer to call up rather more capital than it immediately needed and lend the surplus for a time to Government, as it would after all be earning a very fair rate of interest on that surplus. I hope, therefore, that the Bill to be introduced will provide for conditional floatation on the lines I have suggested, as well as for prohibition in case of need. I hope that the Hon'ble Member will not suspect me of having any axe to grind in this matter. I assure him I have none, and that my only object in urging this suggestion on the attention of Government is the furtherance of the object which they themselves have in view, namely, the success of the War Loan.

"I cannot refrain from some reference to the question of premium or bonus bonds. I have always been and am still of the opinion that this is an expedient which is well worth a trial. I have never supposed that these bonds would be a suitable form of investment for banks or other large investors, obviously they would not, nor have I thought that they would immediately produce many crores of rupees to Government, and so provide a panacea for all their difficulties. But I do believe that an issue of bonds bearing interest at, say, 2 per cent. less than the ordinary war bonds and having that 2 per cent. distributed in prizes by half-yearly or quarterly drawings, would, if properly advertised, gradually attract a number of investors, who would otherwise not invest in Government securities, and would after a few years and after the distribution of several prize-drawings attain a very wide measure of popularity. In view of the fact that Government for years to come will have to depend for their requirements on the Indian money-market in a far greater degree than before, it has seemed to me that any form of security likely to attract a new class of investors to Government issues was well worth a trial, and to that opinion I still hold. I must, however, admit that there is a considerable body of commercial and financial opinion which is opposed to this experiment, and I recognise that it is an experiment upon which Government can scarcely be expected to embark unless supported by a strong preponderance of such opinion. I can therefore at present only regret the present division of opinion on the subject.

"The future position of the Railways in India is a subject which I do not think anyone can view without a great deal of anxiety. They are being and have been for the last three years worked to their utmost capacity, while repairs to existing rolling stock and provision of new rolling stock are of necessity reduced to a minimum. There will, as the Hon'ble Member has said, be a great deal of leeway to be made up after the war, and I therefore welcome the reserve fund of £20 millions which has been set aside against this and other future liabilities, and I hope that it may be possible to increase this reserve fund. I also welcome the announcement which I recently saw in the Press of the measures which Government are taking to promote the manufacture of railway wagons in this country, and I hope that these measures will meet with a large degree of success.

"There is just one other point I should like to refer to. The rise which has taken place in the rate of exchange involves a considerable potential depreciation in the value of the Government of India's investments of the paper currency reserve in Home securities. It would be interesting to know whether the Hon'ble Member considers it necessary to make provision against this depreciation or regards it as too temporary to require provision.

"Before I sit down, my Lord, I desire, as this is the last Financial State ment which Sir William Meyer will present to this Council, to congratulate him upon the successful manner in which he has steered the craft of India's finances through the troubled waters of the last few years. It may not fall to his lot to complete the voyage into the harbour of peace, but at least he hands over to his successor the rudder of a vessel which has so far successfully weathered all storms and which is in good fettle to meet the further buffets which may be in store for her. With that he may well rest content and for that India undoubtedly owes him a great debt."

12-28 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda :—"My Lord, the budget has come as an agreeable surprise to the over-burdened tax-payer who finds that there is no new taxation, and I hasten to join the Council in offering my sincerest congratulations to the Hon'ble the Finance Member on his being able to bring out a prosperity budget under adverse circumstances.

[8TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mr. K. K. Chanda.]

"Looking at the surplus which he has been able to budget for one cannot help regretting that an over-cautious spirit, if I may say so, should have influenced the judgment of the Finance Member in 1915-16 in adding to the poor man's burden in the shape of an increase to the duty on salt—small as it was. But for this his budgets could, on the whole, be described as the poor man's budgets.

"Judging by an experience of the past two years one cannot say that the fears of those who demurred to the proposal to enhance the salt duties were groundless. There was no need to have enhanced the tax to inflate the surplus, and no justification has up to now been disclosed. It was a fallacy to think that the addition was negligible being about a pie per seer. In theory it is so, but in experience otherwise, and it is a well-known fact that consumption of salt always varies conversely to any alteration in the tax. In this view, and in view of the surpluses, the poor man has certainly a right to demand the removal of this extra tax on salt which, being a necessary of life, should in the words of Professor Fawcett be as 'free as the air we breathe and the water we drink.' Perhaps, taking everything into consideration, it may not be very sound to take off this additional tax at this moment. But there can be no question that sanitation, education and medical relief have a special and even an indefeasible claim to a considerable portion of this surplus at any rate. A reference to paragraph 94 of the Hon'ble Finance Member's speech reveals the fact that the surplus is made up in a large part of the savings from special grants for education, sanitation, medical relief, and agriculture which amount to £883,000. How were these savings effected? It is obvious that you cannot spend too much on these objects—their demands are imperative and unlimited unlike other matters. Why are there these savings? It cannot be claimed that the grants erred on the side of lavishness. It is simply due to the fact that the Government of India restrained the Local Governments from using up these special grants. We regret this decision of the Government, and cannot make out why a project like the Delhi scheme, for instance, was allowed to be worked up to the full, while grants for education, sanitation, and medical relief were practically partially withheld. I submit, therefore, that even if no fresh special grant can be made for these objects beyond what is provided for in the budget, Local Governments should be permitted to spend these artificial surpluses to prevent their surplus. being spent for the objects for which the grants were made will practically be giving with one hand and taking away with the other.

"It is difficult to name one object more urgent than sanitation, education, and medical relief. The ravages of plague, of malaria, and other diseases are frightful and well known indeed, and may almost stand comparison with the decimation caused by the world-war, and one need not apologise for urging their claims even in a war budget when we find that the provision made for sanitation is only about 2 annas of what is allowed for the police charges. We are grateful for small mercies, for the sum of rupees thirty lakhs provided for primary education. Something is better than nothing, but it must be apparent that it is a mere drop in the ocean. If a similar grant were made yearly during the last ten years or so, during which the Indian Members, headed by the late Mr. Gokhale, started the campaign for free elementary education, something substantial by now would have resulted. But the sins in the past of omission—in fact more than omission—of actual refusal to admit the claim of primary education—can hardly be wiped away by a dole of thirty lakhs granted in 1918. Infinitely more will have to be done, and we trust that the relative importance of police and education will be recognized in the framing of future budgets.

"My Lord, the Finance Member estimates the gain we shall have made during the current year at £1 million net by exchange, but he would not take credit for it as it would be gambling, and has no desire to see it maintained: not only this* he says in paragraph 52 'if exchange had been left to find its own level under the normal laws of supply and demand, the rupee would long ago have reached a far higher level than it has actually.'

[Mr. K. K. Chanda.] [8TH MARCH, 1918.]

I confess to a feeling akin almost to bewilderment at this. One can appreciate the anxiety of the Hon'ble Member not to do anything to disturb the money-market by attempting to raise the exchange value of the rupee: but why should we not only not desire that the rupee should attain a higher exchange value but prevent its doing so. Why should we get alarmed at the prospect if, due to natural laws, its value is enhanced? Is it not a consummation to be desired from the standpoint of Indian Finance that the rupee should have a higher value in the gold-using countries? The Hon'ble Member says that if natural laws had full and unrestricted play the rupee would automatically go much higher up resulting in a considerable gain—much greater than £1 million—to India. Where is the magic in 16*d.* which is the statutory exchange value of the rupee? Does not the Government itself ignore it when furlough allowances of English officials are calculated at 18 pence to the rupee? The history of how the rupee came to be fixed at 16*d.* is well known? Is it not due to the merest chance that it came to be so fixed? Supposing the rupee was able to retrace its step up grade from 13*d.* to which it had sunk to something more than 16*d.* by the time the Government issued the notification in 1893 when the mints were closed to coining of rupees offering to give rupees at the Calcutta or Bombay mints or to issue notes at the paper currency offices against gold tendered to them at a rate of exchange of 15 rupees for £1 sterling or supposing the exchange value of the rupee touched a point higher than 1*s.* 4*d.* in 1899 when Act XXII of that year was passed making the sovereign and half-sovereign legal tender at R15 to the £ can it be doubted that the rupee may have had an upward march? So long as the offer of the Government of India to give rupees in exchange for gold at 1*s.* 4*d.* per rupee remained in force, and the Government were prepared to maintain a supply of rupees sufficient for this purpose, there was obviously no possibility of exchange rising above 1*s.* 4*d.* by more than the cost of shipping gold to India. Now that natural causes are tending to push up the rupee upwards towards—let us hope—the two shilling position, it once occupied, why should we get nervous or do anything to obstruct its easy passage? What will not be the gain to India—in meeting the Home charges alone or say the contribution of one hundred million pounds which we have made to the British treasury when the rupee has a higher value? My humble and earnest submission would be to respectfully invite a reconsideration of the matter.

"My Lord, the Hon'ble Finance Member has spoken of railway lines being pulled up to provide railway materials for Mesopotamia. A layman like myself would be grateful for further elucidation of the subject. What is the total length and value of the lines dismantled, the value thereof to India, that is, the cost that will have to be incurred in replacing them; whether any repairs or reconstruction of the permanent-way will be needed, if so, what the cost thereof would be; whether any rolling stock has been taken away or rendered idle by reason of sections of the line being closed; what would be the value of the same; whether any compensation would have to be paid? these are matters which one would have expected to find dealt with in the budget; but, while the Hon'ble Member speaks of his successor having to be faced with 'the consideration of the way to find money for making up the necessary lee-way under railways, more specially in view of the strain to which our present equipment has been exposed by the heavy traffic demands and the impossibilities of regular and thorough renewal of lines and rolling stock,' he says nothing as to how the dismantled lines are to be re-built, as to who has to pay for them, whether the British treasury will restore the status quo both as regards the lines, the permanent-way and rolling stock, if any, carried away—whether we are not equitably entitled to some compensation for loss of revenue by having so many lines closed to traffic—whether the monetary value of all this cannot be set off against the unliquidated portion of our hundred million pounds contribution. I submit, my Lord, this matter deserves some consideration at the hands of the Finance Member.

"In this connection I beg to mention the grievances of railway passengers, specially of third class, which are at this moment pressing very hard. We know that the exigencies caused by the war and requirements connected with the prosecution thereof have compelled the Railway Board and the different Railway administrations to place handicaps upon railway travelling. Not only have train services been reduced to the minimum, but fares have been raised up to the maxima which render them almost prohibitive in the case of the poorer classes. Nobody can surely grudge that concessions which were admissible in the higher classes only, that some of their privileges have been withdrawn, but it is a very great hardship upon the poorer people to pay the present rates charged, and the reduction of trains have made these passengers absolutely helpless and miserable. Where overcrowding was the case on special occasions formerly, it is now the normal condition of things. I would earnestly ask the Hon'ble Sir Robert Gillan to let the matter have his indulgent consideration to see whether some relief could not be given both in the railway fares now charged and in train accommodation.

" My Lord, the Coronation Durbar Despatch estimated that £4 millions sterling would be enough for the cost of the transfer to Delhi, and that would, according to Lord Crewe's Durbar Despatch, be the outside figure of cost. What is the real fact now? The amount spent up to the end of 1916-17 is 2 crores 25 lakhs 44 thousands, and adding the figure Rs. 37,60,000 according to the revised estimate for 1917-18, we get the total amount spent up to now as 2,63,04=two crores sixty-three lakhs and four thousand—that is, very nearly half the amount estimated for the whole thing, and another 40 lakhs is estimated for 1918-19. What is the net result of this, nearly 3 crores expenditure? We are told that a 'moderate rate of progress has been maintained in the cost of Government House, the Secretariat Buildings, the Viceroy's Court, and the Great Place'. The fact is, I believe, about as many feet of the plinth level have been raised as we spent crores. Is it not time to seriously consider whether this could not for the present be suspended? What is the urgency when the work is proceeding so leisurely in spending this large sum annually simply to 'carry on' the work. Why should brick and mortar and dressed or undressed stones be supposed to deteriorate if not immediately utilised? Going on at this rate nobody can tell when the new Dewan-i-am and Dewan-i-khas are likely to be ready for the reception of His Excellency the Viceroy and the reformed Council that is to be. Under these circumstances; I would submit that further proceedings should be stayed till better times return and the money thus set free utilised on more pressing projects.

"My Lord, the Coronation Durbar Despatch of 1911 suggested or rather laid it down that my province Assam was to be under the direct control of the Government of India—to be a sort of Khas-mahal under it. We naturally concluded and everybody thought that we were to have special indulgence shown to us: that at any rate we would have no reason to complain that our ordinary needs even were not supplied. I regret to notice in the budget, my Lord, the treatment that has been accorded to us—the very reverse of what we could reasonably expect. We have not got anything in the shape of any special grant beyond the mere adjusting grant of Rs. 6,48,000. I submit, my Lord, it is not only unfair and unjust but unbusiness-like, regard being had to the immense potentialities of my Province which require development. The Province is rich in minerals, in forest produce. Capital outlay judiciously made for the development of the Province is bound to yield a return in no time many times over. It will, in fact, be a profitable investment that is bound to benefit not only the Province itself, but the whole country. Moreover, it being at present a frontier Province requires special measures. My respectful submission would, therefore, be that there ought to be a substantial special grant for the Province.

"I would like to say a word with regard to the suggestion made to the Local Governments for the success of the war loan next year. There were some complaints in some of the Provinces—my Province, I am glad to say, was free from this—that here and there an over-zealous officer misconceived his duty in the matter and now and again went beyond the line in using pursuasion to people to subscribe. Such injudicious proceedings were extremely unfortunate and did more harm than good, and were likely to detract from the otherwise popularity of the loan. I trust that Local Governments would be on their guard and authorize only selected officers to work for the success of the loan next year.

"The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer wound up his speech introducing the Financial Statement with the following words:

'But I have done my best to serve India in these troublous times and I think I can claim that her interests have not suffered at my hands.'

The people of India will gratefully and unhesitatingly endorse this and fully admit his very modest claim. We feel and shall ever remember that he has manfully guarded our financial interests under trying circumstances against attempted inroads by all powerful parties and resisted the incessant pressure that was brought to bear upon him now and again. We shall always bear in mind that he resolutely set his face against fanciful proposals made to bring more money out of the Indian tax-payer, that he most effectively answered and repelled the mischievous suggestion that India had not done her 'bit'—had not made enough sacrifice in sufficient contribution to the war to the fullest extent it was possible for her to do. We shall remember that he faced the obloquy that was sought to fasten upon him by his countrymen who ought to have known better and that he evolved a sagacious scheme of Indian War Finance that has not only stood the test well but has removed a sore point in the Indian fiscal policy. The enhanced import duties on cotton goods without a corresponding increase in the countervailing excise duty on Indian goods, a graduated income-tax, the popularising of the War, Securities and the Indian Paper Currency are measures which will have an important bearing on our finances."

12-44 P. M.

The Hon'ble Mr. Muhammad Shafi:—"My Lord, it must be a source of real gratification to the Hon'ble the Finance Member to have been able to present to this Council a highly satisfactory Financial Statement in spite of the prolonged continuance of extraordinary conditions brought into existence by an unparalleled world-conflagration. The increase in the estimated Imperial surplus, the conversion of expected Provincial deficit into a Provincial balance, the remarkable success of the Indian War Loan, the excess of our exports and imports resulting in the importation of gold into India, the avoidance of further taxation and the prospect of a surplus at the end of the ensuing year constitute some of the most pleasing features of India's financial stability upon which your Excellency's Government as well as the Indian people have every reason to congratulate themselves. And the significance of the great success of our War Loan, floated in this country in connection with India's spontaneous contribution of £100 million towards the expenses of this terrible war, is considerably enhanced when we remember that, during the same period, His Imperial Majesty's loyal Indian subjects have voluntarily subscribed huge sums to 'Our Day,' 'Imperial Relief,' 'Red Cross,' 'Blue Cross,' 'Prisoners of War Bread,' and scores of other War Funds started for the provision of comforts to our soldiers and alleviation of human suffering resulting from the greatest of all wars known to history.

"My Lord, the Revised Financial Statement for the current year shows an increased Imperial surplus of £5,825,000 instead of £136,000 estimated in the budget presented to us last year, in spite of our having had to spend as much as £66 million in this country on behalf of His Majesty's Government. There is, in this happy result, ample reason for satisfaction. I find myself in complete agreement with the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer in thinking that, in framing our estimates in the abnormal circumstances we have to face, we must proceed with the caution and if, acting on this 'salutary principle, we find the ultimate results more satisfactory than originally anticipated, the matter is one for congratulation and not for criticism. In the extraordinary circumstances whatever may be said of normal condition, international as well as local, produced by the world war, it would, to my mind, be contrary to sound principles to be over-sanguine in our financial forecasts, for the consequences of being over-optimistic may possibly give rise to disappointment leading to dissatisfaction.

"My Lord, our agricultural population constitutes the backbone of the British Indian Empire, and their prosperity is very naturally one of the foremost concerns of your Excellency's Government. It is from them that our Indian armies are drawn, and it is upon them mainly that the heavy burdens as well as grievous sufferings of this catastrophic war have fallen. It is most gratifying, therefore, to note that our satisfactory revenue position, as revealed in the Revised Financial Statement for the current year, is 'largely due to favourable agricultural conditions.' Increased revenues from agricultural sources mean cultivation of larger areas, resulting very naturally in larger harvests and, in consequence, greater prosperity for our sturdy agricultural population, and the record figure of £54 million, representing the excess of our exports over imports, in spite of a considerable reduction of tonnage, constitutes clear indication of improved trade conditions and the consequent prosperity of our commercial classes. The increase of revenue, during the current year, under the heads 'Railways,' 'Custom,' 'Posts and Telegraphs,' and 'Income-tax' must undoubtedly be regarded as highly satisfactory from every point of view. It is, however, difficult to look at the increase of £1,80,000 in our excise revenue with the same feeling of satisfaction. A State monopoly in the manufacture of alcoholic liquor is justifiable mainly on the ground that in this manner alone the State is in a position to exercise restrictive influence over the consumption of liquor and thereby promote the cause of temperance and social reform. An enhanced excise revenue may, of course, mean larger profits in the manufacture and sale of liquor without increase of the quantity sold by reason of enhanced prices intended specifically to make the drinking of liquor somewhat expensive for the poorer sections of our population. Such a result is undoubtedly calculated to promote temperance among the lower strata of Indian society. But it may, on the other hand, represent merely the natural consequence of increased sale of alcoholic liquor with all its concomitant evils The resulting evils of such a deplorable state of things are self-evident. The general excise policy of the Government of India, as enunciated by the Hon'ble Sir George Barnes in the interesting debate on my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma's Resolution the other day, is undoubtedly based on sound principles. What is needed is greater vigilance on the part of those who are charged with the carrying out of that policy May I, in this connection, urge upon your Excellency's Government the extreme desirability of directing resort to local option wherever possible, in the matter, not only of opening new drink shops, but also of renewal of existing licenses. It seems to me that by the adoption of this principle, the work of temperance reform will be made really effective to the incalculable benefit of those of our lower classes who are unfortunately addicted to the drink evil.

"My Lord, of the various items in what may be called our Revised Provincial Statement, relating to the reduction of Provincial expenditure, there is one to which it is necessary to invite attention. In paragraph 19 of his speech the Hon'ble the Finance Member tells us that the decrease of about £1 million under Provincial expenditure is due to anticipated lapses in budget grants in respect, among others, of education. This, to my mind, constitutes a highly, unsatisfactory feature in the Revised Financial Statement for the current year. The appalling ignorance of the rest of Indian masses which makes them easy victims of the unrighteous exactions as well as trickeries of the professional money-lender and of the subordinate ministerial officials of Government and on account of which they succumb so easily to superstition as well as to clap-trap of all kind, can be eradicated only by means of a wide expansion of elementary education throughout the length and breadth of the Indian Continent. A universal diffusion of primary education among the illiterate millions of His Imperial Majesty's Indian subjects ought, therefore, to be the principal aim of our educational policy. Ever since the adoption by Government of the policy laid down by the Education Commission of 1882 and more particularly in recent years, the Government of India have very rightly devoted particular attention to the solution of this vital problem. There is ample scope for expenditure in the faithful discharge of this all-important obligation in the various Indian provinces, and the lapse of educational grants, therefore, is in the highest degree deplorable. The Government of India should, therefore, impress upon the Provincial Goverments the urgent need of greater efforts towards the expansion of elementary education among our masses by utilizing educational grants to their fullest extent. And when that destroyer of all civilized traditions and laws of humanity, i.e., German militarism, is wholly crushed, as we all trust it soon shall be, the Imperial and Provincial Governments should be able to spend larger and still larger sums towards the realization of this greatest of all the needs of our country.

"My Lord, the somewhat heavy increase in the military charges during the current year was obviously unavoidable, and no one who is alive to the deplorable necessities of the existing situation can take any exception to it. There is one aspect of this increase, however, with reference to which I desire to say a few words on this occasion. According to the figures given by the Hon'ble the Finance Member, a sum of £520,000 have been spent in 'grant of increased pay to British Troops.' May I, in this connection, venture to appeal to your Excellency's Government on behalf of our Indian soldiers who have right nobly borne the burdens of the Empire and upheld the honour and glory of England on the battlefield of three Continents to the everlasting fame of India's martial races. In these days of high prices the pay of Indian soldiers is utterly inadequate to meet even ordinary requirements, and I earnestly hope and trust that this urgent problem will receive early attention from His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

"My Lord, the time at my disposal being limited, it is impossible for me to deal with any of the other items in the Financial Statement on which one would otherwise feel tempted to address the Council. I will, therefore, conclude by offering my sincere congratulations to the Hon'ble the Finance Member on the remarkable skill displayed in the preparation of a highly satisfactory statement of our financial affairs under circumstances the most difficult and complicated India has ever had to face, and, in view of this being the last year of the tenure of his high office, I venture to add a few words to the eloquent testimony borne by the Hon'ble Members who have preceded me, to the exceptional sagacity and statesmanship with which Sir William Meyer has presided over the financial administration of our country through a period of storm and stress. During the last four years India has had to face, in common with the rest of the Empire, financial difficulties unparalleled in her past history. Under his wise guidance, and with the benefit of his ripe experience, she has successfully weathered the mighty storm. We, the non-official Members of this Council, have special cause for being deeply grateful to him. He has always been ready and willing to give us the information and advice which, from time to time, we have been in need of: his hospitable doors have been open to us both at Simla and Delhi in an unstinted measure. It is, indeed, with the deepest regret that we shall part from him when, in a few months, he will hand over the reins of his high office to his successor, and our best wishes for a long and happy life will accompany him in his well-earned rest."

12-59 P. M. The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea:—"My Lord, my first words on this occasion would be words of congratulation offered to the Hon'ble the Finance Minister on the Financial Statement which he has submitted to this Council. It is a war budget, but a war budget that does not impose additional burdens upon the people, and as such it is an achievement of which any financier might well be proud. The Hon'ble Finance Minister will soon be leaving us and he has presented to this Council an account of his work. Looking to that work, I will say this, that in the annals of our financial administration the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer will take a place among the most distinguished of his predecessors. We are beholden to him in a special degree and for one particular matter. There have been critics who have been persistent in their efforts to minimise the measure of our co-operation with the Empire in the struggle, and that sort of criticism has even been heard within the walls of this Council Chamber.

"The Hon'ble the Finance Minister has always stood forth as a stout champion in vindication of the efforts of the people of India to aid the Empire in the present crisis, and no more convincing proof of the justice of that vindication could be afforded than by the testimony of the cold and colourless facts which are furnished by the Financial Statement, and which will, I am sure, silence even the venomed tongue of calumny. Look at that Financial Statement for a moment. Apart from our contribution of £100 millions, apart from the contributions of the Indian Princes, apart from our own subscriptions in aid of war charities, we have helped the Empire in various and indirect ways. The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer computes that for the three years and-a-half during which the war has lasted, our expenditure in India in aid of the Home Government comes up to £128 millions. My Lord, speaking on behalf of my countrymen, I will say this, that we do not grudge the expenditure. We are proud of it. The Empire is engaged in one of the noblest wars that ever stirred the heart of humanity, a war of justice and freedom, a war for the protection of minor nationalities and the vindication of the sanctity of treaty obligations. My Lord, we have freely contributed all we could in respect of men and money, and we are prepared to do so as long as the war lasts. And this patriotic resolve on our part has been deepened and strengthened by the gracious message of the 20th of August which promises responsible government, a promise which India hopes will in its fulfilment eventually place her among the free self-governing communities of a great and federated Empire.

"My Lord, the budget is a budget which imposes no taxation. That is its salient feature. This is due to our surpluses. I cannot help thinking that there has been an under-estimate in this matter. But, my Lord, perhaps it will be said that this is, after all, a failing that leans to virtue's side. It has the effect at least of saving us from taxation this year.

"My Lord, the Financial Statement makes a notable announcement. I will read that announcement in the words of the Statement itself. It runs as follows:—

'We have under consideration, for application after the war is over and in connection with the scheme of Constitutional Reforms, a material advance in the direction of separating Provincial and Imperial finance, which will give the Provinces larger and more independent resources, with further power of supplementing these by taxation when such may be found necessary.'

"My Lord, here we have sounded for the first time in this Legislative Council, in clear and distinct notes, the beginnings of a policy which in its fruition will confer upon the Provinces the inestimable boon of fiscal independence. My Lord, when three years ago I ventured from my place in this Council to urge that fiscal independence for the Provinces had been promised by the despatch of the 25th of August 1911—for provincial autonomy necessarily involves fiscal autonomy—my Hon'ble friend the Finance Minister rose up and challenged that statement—he said no such pledge had been given. My Lord, I was overborne by the weight of official testimony. That has always been our lot, that was my lot that day. I said nothing; I could say nothing,

[Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea.] [8TH MARCH, 1918.]

But the hour has at last sounded for the vindication of that part of the despatch, and to me it is a matter of the sincerest personal gratification—it may be the bitter irony of fate—that my Hon'ble friend should himself stand forth as the defender of that despatch and the high priest of this function. We are moving on; the world is changing, Sir William Meyer has also changed. May we hope that the process will continue until he appears before the world as the stalwart champion of the constitutional reforms now pending.

"My Lord, I take it that under the scheme thus outlined there will be no heads of divided revenue; that the Provincial revenues will belong to the Provinces, that the Imperial revenues will belong to the Government of India, and that the Provinces will have sufficient heads of revenue given to them to meet their growing requirements. For, my Lord, the fact cannot be disputed that, as soon as the scheme of constitutional reforms is carried out, the Provincial Governments will assume a measure of importance which they do not possess now, and it will be their duty to develop those sources of revenue upon which the wealth, the prosperity and the happiness, of the people so largely depend in a special measure—I refer to the expenditure under the heads of Local Self-Government, Education, and Sanitation.

"My Lord, I find no mention is made of any power being given to the Provincial Governments for contracting loans. That is an anomaly to which I desire to call the attention of the Hon'ble the Finance Minister. In Bengal, the Corporation and the Port Trust of Calcutta have the power of contracting loans, subject to the sanction of the Government of India. The Government of Bengal, which is a superior body, does not possess this power. I hope and trust that, when our institutions are liberalised, when popular government is installed, the Provincial Governments will have the power of floating loans.

"My Lord, the Financial Statement says that the trade conditions were favourable and observes that this was largely due to the absence of competition. My Lord, I take it that that is an argument in favour of protection, for protection blunts the edge of all competition. My Lord, we educated Indians are all protectionists—I hope no dissentient voice will be raised in this Council with regard to this matter—not wholesale, irrational, extremist protectionists, but protectionists in regard to those articles which can be produced and developed in our own country. The war afforded an automatic protection to our industries, if indeed we had any. But, unfortunately, we had few or none, so that we were not able to take advantage of that golden opportunity which presented itself. My Lord, I hope that the Industries Commission which is now at work will make recommendations, the acceptance of which will help forward the development of our industries; I hope that it will be your Excellency's high privilege to lay, broad and deep, the foundations of our future industrial greatness. Too long—far too long—has the State held aloof from participation in the industrial movement. The time has come when it must change its policy, place itself at the head of the industrial movement, and make India self-contained, self-reliant, the store-house of the Empire, holding her own against the enemies of India and of the Empire.

"My Lord, I pass on to the question of Railways. There has been a steady growth in railway receipts, a steady decline in the comfort of the travelling public. My Hon'ble friend Mr. Chanda has sounded this note. We are all railway travellers and have to do it almost every day of our lives. We are put to serious inconvenience by reason of the discontinuance of so many passenger trains. We are told that it is due to the absence of materials and the impossibility of renewals in consequence. Here again, my Lord, I refer to my old proposition. Let us have waggons, let us have materials, let us have the means of making railway waggons, steel rails, and things of that kind in India. Again I say—make India self-contained and self-reliant—the store-house of the Empire, as Mr. Chamberlain said, and I am sure India will be a source of incalculable strength to the Empire.

"My Lord, I should like to say a word or two with regard to the loan operations of Government. They were a splendid success last year. I hope they will be a great success this year, too. I do not say we shall be able to repeat our last performance this year, but at any rate the conditions are favourable; the people are with you, they will co-operate with you if you go in the right direction. Sometimes you did not do that on the last occasion. Complaints were heard in the newspapers of official pressure being brought to bear on poor investors in order to make them subscribe. There was no need for it. The superior authorities never suggested a thing of that kind. It is over-zealous officers who must have done it. Their zeal must be restrained, because if the feeling were to go forth that official pressure would be used for the purpose of helping forward the loan operations it would re-act upon public confidence and interfere with the success of the loan. My Lord, the Post Office certificates made a marvellous revelation of the wonderful financial credit of the Government and the hold which the Government has over small investors. It is a revelation of which the Government ought to take the fullest advantage and let nothing be done which would in the smallest degree interfere with this feeling of confidence which the small investor has in the Government. At the same time, my Lord, with your Excellency's permission, I desire to sound a warning note: The price of Government papers, of securities, has been steadily going down. Let me recall to mind one or two facts in this connection. In 1894, when the mints were closed, 3½ per cent. Government paper went up to 109. That was due to the operation of the enfaced papers in London. Perhaps it was a matter of speculation, and the price in a short time came down to 104. Before the war it remained at 99; to-day it is 68. The 4 per cent paper when it was issued was at par; the price of it now is 80. Your 5 per cent. paper which was issued at 95 is now valued at 90½. I think my Hon'ble friend the Finance Minister should take note of these facts. We are with the Government. We want to co-operate with the Government. We want that the next loan should be successful—if not in the same measure as the last loan, at any rate that a substantial part of the 20 millions we want should be raised. But, I think, we ought fully to realise the difficulties that lie in our way in order that we should be in a position to overcome them.

"My Lord, I desire for a moment to refer to a matter which my Hon'ble friend Mr. Shafi has discussed. Pay concessions have been made to British soldiers. I have not the slightest objection to that; but no such concessions have been made to Indian soldiers. I think the answer will be that they get their rations free. I say that is not enough. Rupees 11 a month, which is their pay and free rations in these days of high prices are not sufficient to be attractive. I say so without any fear of challenge or contradiction. My Lord, I have had some experience of recruiting. I am not quite a recruiting sergeant, but last year I addressed about 25 recruiting meetings in connection with the Bengali Battalion which was then being formed. We have been able to get together a battalion and more recruits are coming in steadily, but very slowly. There was one difficulty which we could never overcome. The difficulty which confronted us was this,—that the pay was Rs. 11 plus rations, and that pay and those rations were not sufficiently attractive to the ordinary Bengali recruit. The prices of things have gone up, and you must take note of that fact at once. The moments are precious. You want men—thousands, hundreds of thousands, millions. We have an inexhaustible reservoir of men in India. We are prepared to place them at the disposal of the Empire at this supreme crisis of the Empire. Give us the facilities, give us the opportunities, give us the power and the means, and we shall do it with the devotion which belongs to our Oriental nature. But here are considerations, monetary considerations of pounds, shillings and pence, which stand in the way. You must rise above them. The Empire is in danger. Money is no consideration. It ought to be forthcoming, my Lord. I say so with the utmost emphasis, money ought to be forthcoming in order that our soldiers might be placed absolutely above want and the pressure of want. I make a personal appeal to your Excellency in this connection.

"My Lord, I want to say a word or two about Sanitation and Education. Those are hackneyed subjects, it may be said, but they are subjects which may be taken as a test for judging a budget, and if you apply that test to this budget I am afraid the result is disappointing. The expenditure on Education has not made any appreciable advance since 1914-15. For the coming year my Hon'ble friend has added 759 thousand pounds to the expenditure assigned to Education. And further you have given only 30 lakhs to Primary Education. Compulsory primary education will soon be general in Bombay. A Bill has passed the Bombay Legislative Council and a similar Bill is now pending in the Bengal Council. Under these circumstances, I say the grant for primary education ought to be much more than it is. His Majesty announced at the Great Durbar in 1911 50 lakhs for primary education. You have given us only 30. And then your Provincial Governments will not spend the money. They have got unspent balances. My Lord, we are in a difficult position. When we come to you, you say 'go to the Provinces: there are the unspent balances.' When we go to them, they say 'We cannot spend without the orders of the Government of India.' What are we to do? Here are the unspent balances and they want your help in the matter; and when we come to you to ask your help you say 'Go to them.' I think that is hardly fair to those who are interested in this great problem of education and especially of primary education.

"In regard to Sanitation, the position is even worse. It has made no appreciable progress. On the contrary, there has been a decrease of expenditure since 1914-15. You have, indeed, given us 135 thousand pounds next year in excess of the expenditure of this year; but then the whole excess grant comes up to only 714 thousand pounds, which is a paltry advance in the case of such a vast population as that of India. And, my Lord, the sanitary problem in Bengal looms large and is menacing. We have got malarial fever there, and thousands of people are being carried off by it every year. Our Governor, Lord Ronaldshay, with praiseworthy enthusiasm, has addressed himself to the task of grappling with this terrible scourge, but he needs money, and you must give him the money.

"One word more and I have done. It is with reference to reserves. Our reserves are not in India in our hands; they are in England and in a somewhat unsatisfactory condition. The whole of our gold standard reserve practically has been invested; and the metallic portion of our paper currency reserve which stood at 96 per cent. in 1914 to-day stands at 53 per cent. I ask my Hon'ble friend the Finance Member to say whether this is safe. He is compelled to admit that we are going far beyond the recommendations of the Chamberlain Commission. It was the success of the war loan and the Treasury bills which saved the situation. My Lord, we ought not to trust to luck. 'Lakshmi, the goddess of wealth,' says the Hindu proverb, 'is fickle and capricious.' We must rely upon our statesmanship, upon our counsels of prudence and wisdom rather than upon the chapter of accidents, in framing our financial policy.

"My Lord, I do not wish to detain the Council any longer. I will close my observations with the earnest hope that what I have said and what other Hon'ble Members have said or may say will be sympathetically considered by your Excellency's Government, and so far as possible included in the Financial Statement that will be presented on the 22nd of this month. Then, my Lord, and then only will the inane debates of former years have given place to fruitful discussions resulting in budgets that will command the approval and commendation of the people of India."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. V. Rangaswamy Ayyangar:—"My Lord, under head 'Expenditure 8' I have to say that the items in the table at page 21 represent the cost of survey mostly for administrative purposes. It is a matter of great complaint for landholders that the cost of their survey operations are recovered partly from the landholders. I need not point out to the non-landed classes in this Council how strong their feelings would be if such a special tax should be imposed over and above the income-tax for maintaining the establishment and records for the collection of the latter tax. Then under the same head I should request the Government to issue strict injunctions to village officials to keep correct accounts of the collections made over and above the dues to the Government, and after the 'jamabandi' of every year to make a refund to the parties concerned of all over-collections. Beyond the host of cesses and the penalties there seems to be a very large amount of over-collections, the exact amount of which I shall give to the Council later on. These should, in justice, be returned to the parties concerned.

"Then as regards Revenue item III Salt several members of this Council through a number of questions have already drawn attention to the high prices of salt prevailing throughout India. Considering the fact that there is an increase of nearly 219 lakhs between the budget and revised estimates of 1917-18 we have to fear that the action of the Government is greatly responsible for these increases in the price of salt. The system by the Madras Government in selling by auction certain salt factories in which stocks were low is very unsatisfactory, and there seems to be an attempt to repeat in the case of salt what has been done with such lamentable success in the matter of auctioning liquor shops.

"In the matter of Revenue heading VIII between the budget and the revised estimates there seems to be an increase of nearly 142 lakhs, the increase no doubt 'arising from favourable trade conditions and the creation of additional establishments mainly military,' and evidently also—the memorandum supplied to us fails to add—from additional over-zeal of income-tax officers like the Collector of Chakwal whose extraordinary judgments over income-tax petitions were reported by the 'Tribune' in its issue of the 8th ultimo. The three typical judgments run thus:—

(1) 'He the objector has three sons and will not enlist one of these. He has also not subscribed to any War Fund or War Loan, although he could easily do so.'

(2) 'Up to date he has not helped even by a single pice in the War or Red Cross Funds.'

(3) 'He is a miser and has not helped with a single pice in any War Fund or Loan.'

These judgments speak volumes of the mind and methods of certain officers.

"As regards 13 and 14 'expenditure,' I have to say with regret that in spite of my drawing the attention of the Government last year as to how they should have treated the surpluses that have accrued from the lands dedicated to temples and vested with the Government for management as debts due to the various temples, I see in this year's budget that no such inclusion of these items has been made under the head 'debt,' permanent or temporary. What became of these funds could not be ascertained either here or in the local Councils. When I interpellated on that subject here Sir Reginald Craddock was kind enough to refer me to the Local Governments concerned for the information regarding the accumulated amounts due to the various temples; but when a friend of mine sitting in the local Council interpellated the Madras Government on the same subject they very courteously referred the Hon'ble gentleman to the Imperial Government. So again this year I have to point out for the serious consideration of the Government that these are trust funds and should be restored to the temples concerned or treated as debts incurred by the Government. It is highly undesirable that the temple authorities should be driven to have recourse to legal remedies in respect of these funds.

"Under head 'expenditure 15' considering the fact that the increase in revenue under 'Posts and Telegraphs' from 1914-15 accounts to the budget of this year is nearly 1¾ crores it would be proper to spend some more amount for the better pay and prospects of the subordinate staff and for better provision of postal services in the villages. The matter is so important that its consideration should not be deferred on account of the war. Then in the higher services had there been no supersessions by young European officers over veterans in the field the expenditure under head 15 should have been considerably less. Specific instances of undue supersessions could be easily given if required. Then the telegraph rates are not reduced. For an interpellation of mine to reduce the rates if there is no reduction in the number of telegrams, for which alone the increase of rates was contemplated, the Commerce Member replied that that is the very reason why the rates have to be increased still further. But the Government should resort to some other means for providing the staff required, and I may point out that whenever they are in need of other commodities for any purpose they do not increase the rates but increase the staff and output.

"Head 'Expenditure 19-A. (b).'—In this item I should suggest that there will be a great saving if, instead of establishing special tribunals, an increase in the number of temporary judges is made in the High Court. It will also infuse confidence in the minds of the people that all cases are tried in the usual way to mete out justice rather than suggest a desire to punish those that are tried. Besides the opinion on the point whether the Governor General has got the power to constitute special tribunals is divided.

" 'Expenditure 19-B.'—An additional cost for saving in the Punjab jails has been said to be due to the transfer of convicts for the formation of Labour Corps in Mesopotamia. While rejoicing that they are made use of in the best interests of the Empire I have to protest against taking them against their will to countries outside India and exposing them to risks of life.

" 'Expenditure 20.'—I note a punitive police has been established at Bihar. The Hon'ble Mr. Abdur Rahim rightly had put a question if those hordes of ordinary Police and Criminal Intelligence Department did not scent a riot of that serious nature and did not report the matter to the Government. Owing to that gentleman not being at the meeting that day the question was withdrawn, yet a satisfactory reply to that interpellation is due from the Government. If they had failed to report, the expenses incurred upon such a staff may well be utilised in other ways.

"Then as regards Education, Sanitation, and Irrigation the Government gives grants with a miserly hand, and yet even the whole of these grants are not spent and they 'lapse' and the Government issues strict orders to the Local Governments not to lay hands on surpluses. It is with greatest regard for economy that grants are given during each year and what is the meaning of giving injunctions to the Local Governments not to spend the surpluses? When we Members see the grants in budgets against these items we are satisfied and congratulate the Members concerned for providing so much for the pressing needs. But what happens next year? There are lapses and the money is not spent and there is the injunction that these surpluses should not be touched. What they give with one hand they take away with the other. When education received so much as thirty lakhs more last year all were really rejoiced and thought that to be the redeeming feature of the last year's budget, but this year we see that 36 lakhs have not been spent. That is the case with Sanitation and Irrigation. This is really unsatisfactory.

" 'Expenditure 23.'—This is a really heart-burning subject and many have pointed this out time and again to the injustice of this item. Though the expenses are only 20½ lakhs, this item transgresses the solemn pledges and proclamations made every now and then by the Sovereign. To take from the different religionists and even fanatics of other creeds and to pay for the maintenance of the sectarian Church of England is un-British. The argument that it is useful for the military loses ground as another branch under military department is created and 1·09 lakhs are charged to the Military Accounts. When there are soldiers composed of all religionists, it does not look well if only one section should be provided for. Justice requires that this item should be met by a separate taxation levied on only those who subscribe to the creed of the Church of England.

" 'Expenditure 24—B.' Our thanks are due to the Government for providing a lakh of rupees for the Badrinath route. I may say that the broken toes and bleeding knees to which the poor pilgrims were subjected to will be relieved by the good state of repair the road will be kept in with the money provided for. I have also to bring before the Council that other great pilgrim centres in the South like Srirangam deserve their inclusion in the Imperial grants and if the Government do not see the feasibility of allotting to these places from the 3·53 lakhs of the reserve, for the improvement of drainage works, assistance should at least be given as loans to these struggling municipalities for the completion of their drainage projects.

" 'Expenditure 46.'—I do not touch upon any of the huge expenditures incurred. Anyhow, all our resources should be diverted to this one question of the hour. I have only to point out that when we are thankful for substituting the word 'Indians' for 'Natives' and for placing us in due status we see an additional expense of 78 lakhs for increased pay to British soldiers while no proportional increase is granted to the Indian soldiers who are equally subjecting themselves to sacrifices.

" I cannot sit down without saying a few words about paragraph 25 of the Hon'ble Financial Member's speech. He was complaining of Madras—his and my Presidency—for going behind some of the backward provinces of India in the matter of the War Loan. Having a full knowledge of the economic condition of Madras it is surprising that he should not have appreciated what was scored by Madras. With no industries and with few rich houses and these all divided into small estates (due to the non-existence of a law of primogeniture even in the case of big and ancient families) and with the crushing temporary ryotwari settlements Madras could not possibly do more.

" Then in the matter of issuing another loan this year, I should say that it would be more advisable to issue it next year. The rate of interest has already become very high, and the flotation of another loan will jeopardise the interests of land-owners and other industrial people wanting capital or otherwise indebted.

" There is also an ominous indication in paragraph 74 of the Finance Member's speech that Government is going to enact for the curtailment of the issue of private capital. Already the Railway Board has issued a Circular that it does not allow any company to be floated in India during the war. Railway should be considered as one of the developments of national concerns. Any restriction on borrowing or formation of companies would certainly go to endanger the small attempts at industries that are stimulated by the war. If in the heat of the moment they are not allowed to form the companies, there will be no use in stimulating their growth when fervour has subsided and the matter has become cold.

" One word more and that is our expression of sorrow at the parting of friends. Our Finance Minister has combined in himself a straightforward and clear policy—though socialistic and so not quite approved of by some of us—with a large measure of ready wit and piercing criticism and a remarkable ability and India had not compromised her interests in him; and it is only now that India will be a loser as the experiences of such an officer will not go to benefit her hereafter, as he goes Home. This is not his home!"

The Council adjourned for Lunch till 2-30 P.M.

The Hon'ble the Raja of Mahmudabad:—" My Lord, it has fallen to the lot of my Hon'ble friend Sir William Meyer to prepare and present war budgets in succession; that in itself is an achievement out of the ordinary · but to present to the country a surplus during these abnormal times is a feat of which my Hon'ble friend may well be proud. 2-32 P.M.

" The budget that we are discussing contains another remarkable and unlooked-for feature, inasmuch as no fresh taxation has directly been resorted to; I say 'directly' advisedly; because by the provisions of the new Income-tax Amendment Bill agriculture has indirectly been subjected to fresh taxation. Under whatever guise it may be put forward, the fact remains that agriculture, against which a threat was held out last year, has been taxed. This is a serious departure from the established policy of the Government, for admittedly agriculture is already meeting the heaviest demand of the Government compared to other industries, and, as my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Shukul has shown in this Council, heaviest also as compared with other countries. This is not the occasion to enter into a detailed examination of the proposal, but I have made this passing reference only to invite attention to it in connection with the claim of the absence of any fresh taxation in the budget of the coming year.

"But, on the whole, it is a budget which shows that my friend the Finance Member has made a close and a very sympathetic study of the financial problems of this country, and, on the approaching relinquishment of his high office, I join my colleagues in paying the tribute which he is so deservedly getting for his great talents and services.

"My Lord, as I said in this Council on a previous occasion, I prefer that the unprecedentedly abnormal financial requirements of the Government be satisfied by means of a loan rather than by an increase in taxation or fresh impositions. The enthusiastic response of India to the invitation to participate in the War Loan is a fresh proof not only of the realisation of the responsibilities which as a component part of the British Empire devolve on her in this fateful period of the world's history, but also of this system being better suited for India at least. The new method which has been employed of getting short term loans by the issue of Treasury Bills is a happy idea, and I hope that it will be increasingly made use of.

"But, my Lord, I look with misgivings to the expansion of the paper currency, and the coinage of new money at the rate at which it has been done. I agree with Mr. Webb of Karachi, and I wish that the Finance authorities of your Government would constantly keep in mind the danger which large issues of money—whether paper or metallic—possess in them in a latent form through the inter-relation of the inflation of prices and depreciation of the purchasing power of money—a contingency which is by no means a remote possibility, but which has unfortunately manifested itself in a more or less acute form in all parts of the country. I realise that these are not the only factors which have brought about this state of things. Many other causes remote as well as immediate have contributed to it. But the causes to which I have particularly referred are at least those which it should be our aim to keep under constant vigilance. In the beginning of war every reform was held in abeyance; and it was natural that it should be so. All energies and all resources were directed in one channel alone, the channel that is of the prosecution of the war with the greatest vigour. Much as we hoped each year that that year would be the final year of the war the hope has so far turned into bitter disappointment. However, the end of the war is not yet measurably in sight; the need for carrying on the war with the same grim determination is as urgent to-day as it was when we entered the struggle; but at the same time it is evident that the longer the war lasts, our own problems, social, political and economic, to single out a few among many, are accumulating. Can we brush them aside and say that they can wait? But the longer they are deferred they are gathering greater force and momentum in their insistence for solution. We cannot arrest time and make it stand still or so arrange our national affairs that they will step aside and come to us when we want them at our leisure.

"I, therefore, submit, my Lord, that we should make up our mind to begin to grapple with those problems without slackening our efforts to reach a successful issue of the life and death struggle in which we are engaged. My Lord, education is one of those questions, perhaps the most vital question; and it should no longer be treated in a perfunctory or leisurely manner. Free and compulsory education by a consensus of opinion is overdue; obstacles to its adoption there may be, but they are not such as could not be overcome. The grant of 30 lakhs provided for primary education is satisfactory as far as it goes, but it cannot by any stretch of words be called adequate, or even anything like it. And, my Lord, it was not pleasing to read in the Financial Statement of my Hon'ble friend the Finance Member the remark with regard to the special grants on education, sanitation and medical relief that, in view of the war conditions, Local Governments had again been asked to restrict drawings on their balances, which include the unspent remainder of their special grants. I would wish that they would be instructed to ultilise them to the full, for in all conscience neither education nor sanitation nor medical relief are things which can or ought to be garnered and hoarded and then distributed as and when we like. The need for them is with us from day to day, even hour to hour.

"My Hon'ble friend, Sir William Meyer, has foreshadowed a measure of far-reaching consequences; he says that restrictions will be imposed in the coming year on the issue of Capital for enterprises which may not be considered of national importance.

"Now, my Lord, the silver lining in the dark cloud of the war for industrially backward countries like India was the removal of the incubus of foreign competition; now was the time that industrial India should have discarded her swaddling clothes, and tried to stand on her own legs. Who can say that India has made, or been permitted or encouraged to make, full use of her opportunities? It is a crying shame that countries like America and Japan should capture the trade of India, while India, from what cause or combination of causes soever, should still be dependent for articles of every-day use on Japan. The nascent industries required careful and tender nursing at the hands of the Government. Where are the bounties and the subsidies of which we hear so much in other countries, and with which countries which are engaged in the war are even now stimulating and strengthening their trade and their industries?

"My Lord, in the face of these deplorable conditions, I may be pardoned if I do not look with equanimity at the prospect of restrictions on the free expansion of industries in India."

The Hon'ble Nawab Saiyed Nawab Ali Chaudhri:—"My Lord, if the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer has the misfortune to handle our finance at a time of exceptional difficulty and stress, he has the singular good luck of an extremely favourable monsoon and a bumper crop which has resulted in producing a surplus of £5,825,000. I wish to join hands with others in congratulating the Hon'ble Member on his well-balanced Financial Statement. Before proceeding further I beg to remark that it is a matter of great gratification to find that the budget under discussion does not impose any fresh tax. 2-44 P.M.

"My Lord, we find no sufficient provision in the present budget for secondary education, though last year some money was sanctioned which was unfortunately not fully utilised. My Lord, the question of secondary education has not received that amount of consideration which the subject deserves. The condition of secondary education in Bengal, indeed I may be so bold as to include the whole of India, is far from satisfactory.

"We have had several Commissions appointed on different occasions to inquire into the conditions of education, but the Commissioners have addressed themselves mainly to the problem of college education. The question of secondary education did not seize their imagination in the way that the subject so urgently demanded.

"My Lord, the root of all our trouble lies in the system of our secondary education. We can go on appointing Commissions and spending enormous sums of money for the improvement of our higher education without any appreciable advance so long as the conditions of our schools remain stationary. It is not advisable to make the superstructure top-heavy without ensuring the foundation. A vast majority of our young men who seek admission to University courses and other professional, scientific, and technical institutions are ill-equipped and unfit to assimilate advanced teaching required for a course of higher training.

[Nawab Saiyed Nawab Ali Chaudhri.] [8TH MARCH, 1918.]

"Mr. Hornell describes the condition of secondary education in Bengal as bad. The condition of the schools he says 'is undoubtedly prejudicing the development of the Presidency and is by no means a negligible feature in the existing state of general disturbance. It is in the high schools with their underpaid and discontented teachers, their crowded, dark and ill-ventilated class-rooms and their soul-destroying process of unceasing cram that the seeds of fanaticism are sown.'

"Mr. Hornell very correctly regards their remedy as mainly a matter of funds remarking that the secondary education system is being run at a figure at which the genuine article or anything approaching it cannot be delivered. Other Directors are also faced with the same difficulty of securing permanent teachers. The Central Provinces report complains of the dead level of mediocrity and sameness in the methods of teaching, mainly attributable to lack of general knowledge and attainment in the staff. There are two other contributing causes—the dominance of the matriculation examination and the absence of any effective control over the organisation of the system.

"My Lord, I am not an advocate of building palatial houses and elaborate class-rooms for our schools. My claim is that enough money should be spent to improve the lot of teachers. The causes of a high percentage of failures in certain Provinces may be traced to inefficient teaching imparted by untrained and unqualified teachers. The percentage of trained teachers in schools is still very low, and it is no wonder, considering the poor pay and prospects held out by the profession, that men of the right stamp are not available.

"It is a matter of extreme gratification to us to hear the Finance Member's statement on War Loan operations. His estimate of the total amount expected has been more than trebled, and the result has far exceeded the anticipations of the most sanguine expert. This splendid success is a clear proof of the whole-hearted support and loyalty of the people of India in whom a great trust had been reposed and who were not found wanting, and I hope they will rise to the occasion to help the cause for future exigencies.

"My Lord, under the heading 'Police' the increase of expenditure by Rs. 1,68,904—for the budget of 1917-1918 in the Province of Bihar and Orissa might have justified the expectation of a corresponding efficiency on their part in the discharge of their duties, but the recent events in that Province have proved the desirability of a further increase in the strength and efficiency of that Department. The special grant of 2½ lakhs for additional armed police and for a Military Camp will to some extent, I hope, re-establish the confidence of my unfortunate community. I desire to convey to your Excellency and the Government the grateful thanks of my fellow-Muslims for the kind words of sympathy expressed for the unhappy sufferers in the recent outrage in Bihar in your Excellency's opening speech.

"It is needless to impress upon the Council how strongly we feel on the subject, and I trust the Government is alive to the danger to which certain communities are exposed by reason of their numerical inferiority in certain Provinces. I hope in future precautionary measures of such a character will be taken as to render the repetition of such incidents impossible.

"Lastly, I desire to bring to the notice of this Council the insufficient provision made in the budget for the pressing need of works of sanitary improvement. I do not desire to press the Government on this subject at a time when their energies and resources should be otherwise occupied. But I would like to point out the defective results of the present system of distribution of resources and responsibilities between local bodies and Local Government on the one hand and the Central Government on the other. It displays the picture of the Exchequer of the Government of India overflowing with money, while these local bodies have been in a state verging on bankruptcy and Local Governments though they may have considerable balances at their disposal are not allowed to use them.

[8TH MARCH, 1918.] [Nawab Saiyed Nawab Ali Chaudhri; Sardar Bahadur Sundar Singh Majithia.]

"It is high time that the Government should announce a definite policy in the matter.

"In conclusion, my Lord, I desire to join my Hon'ble colleagues to convey our tribute of admiration to Sir William Meyer who is about to leave us, and we shall ever cherish a kind memory of him as one of the most able and sympathetic members who have had charge of the financial portfolio."

2-52 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sardar Bahadur Sundar Singh Majithia:— "My Lord, in going through the Financial Statement the first thing that strikes one is that Land-revenue, apparently, is the backbone of the financial resources of the Government of India. Very nearly 45·5 per cent. of the whole income is derived from that source. This income depends to a greater extent on weather conditions being favourable. No doubt the policy of the extension of canals is helping to make the position securer, but even this security, in its turn, depends upon favourable monsoon conditions. It is, therefore, a matter of congratulation that Irrigation has had its share of the Government resources. In this connection, I would strongly urge the sinking of tube wells in parts where the facilities for canal irrigation are not available. In the Punjab, Messrs. Ashford and Brownlie have rendered valuable services in providing improved tube wells, which not only supply an abundant supply of water, but in places where, for sanitary purposes, the need for lowering the water level is desirable these tube wells have been found to be very useful. In Amritsar, the Canal Department is working their tube wells by means of electric motors. They utilise their canal for the production of necessary electrical energy and pump water from these tube wells, thus releasing canal water for its useful service elsewhere where it is much needed. The hydro-electric scheme is a success in Amritsar, and in India it has, before it, great possibilities. In the United Provinces, there is a very great field for its introduction. I would strongly urge that Government help be extended to owners of estates by way of loans to introduce the scheme in their estates, thereby securing them from fear of drought.

"This brings me, my Lord, to the question of the speedy means of transporting the produce of land to trade centres. Railways have come in very handy to meet this necessity, and, though the gigantic war has curtailed the programme of extension in this direction and naturally it should have been so, as all our energies must be directed to the speedy and successful termination of this gigantic struggle. We must have as feeders to the Railway a system of good pucca roads to link up important towns and villages to railway stations.

"Though this great war is dislocating many things, but the necessity of increased facilities of rolling stock is keenly being felt. A railway journey brings one across railway stations with platforms and goods-sheds overcrowded with goods awaiting to be railed, and in many cases exposing the traders to loss and a good deal of damage. This demonstrates without contradiction that the demand of goods wagons is very great and their supply comparatively far short of the necessity. This state of affairs must naturally affect the railway earnings. The levy of higher rates has brought in better revenue, but a good deal of this must have been contributed by the debit entries from one department to the credit of the Railway. I refer to the expenditure incurred in the transport of military stores and troops, thereby adding to the railway earnings. The service of the railway for transport of troops, etc., was rightly demanded by the unique exigencies of the State, but if the demands of the trade could have also been met with, the railway earnings would have been still higher. On the other hand, the industrial enterprises of the country have suffered for want of fuel. The price of coal has more than quadrupled and, on the top of this, difficulties of the supply of wagons has to be faced. It is therefore gratifying to see in the Financial Statement that provision has been made for the increased supply of the rolling stock. I wish something more had been allotted than what is provided under this head, but perhaps the want of the necessary material for their construction is responsible for this, and during this great war one must put up with these inconveniences.

[Sardar Bahadur Sundar Singh Majithia; Mr. Khaparde.] [8TH MARCH, 1918.]

"The Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State for India has been in our midst for close upon three months, and has received many representations concerning the administrative reforms needed in India, and these must be receiving the necessary attention at the hands of the Government, but before any real step could be taken in this direction, the necessity of educating the would-be future electorates is a very real one. The generality of the masses of India are to a great extent illiterate, and steps to remove this illiteracy of the people have to be taken. We must teach the people the rudiments of the three 'R's' and for this the primary education of the country must demand the urgent attention of the Government. I am glad to find that 30 lakhs have been provided for this purpose, but the provision to my mind does not seem to be adequate and requires to be supplemented. I would strongly urge upon your Excellency's Government the necessity of giving larger grants for education to remove the general illiteracy of the people.

"We Sikhs are tackling this problem amongst our community and are doing what our limited resources would permit, and I would beg your Excellency's Government to give greater help to the community which, in services to the Empire, is not in any way behind its sister communities. The community, owing to its endeavours in this direction, deserves encouragement to a greater extent to ameliorate its backward educational condition. I quite understand, on the other hand, that it is necessary for us to conserve our resources for the needs of the Empire as a whole, but the education of the masses is a matter which demands your Excellency's kind consideration.

"The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer has referred to the approaching close of his career as a Finance Member. One really sympathises with him in the stupendous task that he has had to face during the term of his office. Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown, but I would say that the case of the Finance Minister is still harder. He has to use all his ingenuity to make two ends meet, and touch as lightly as he can the pockets of the people and keep all sides satisfied. It is therefore a matter of very great congratulation for Sir William Meyer that, in the difficult times that have confronted him during his tenure of office, he has steered the financial bark of the Government of India most skilfully and with thorough success. He has not added, to any great extent, to the taxation of the country, and with the means at his disposal has placed on behalf of India not an insignificant amount of £100 millions at the disposal of the Empire. I am glad that with all the pressure on the financial resources of the country he has left the land income free as it has hitherto been. The land, my Lord, is bearing the largest share of the Government demands, and it would be unwise to add to the burdens that the land-owners have to bear.

"We are sensible to the good qualities of head and heart of our Finance Member, and India owes him a debt of gratitude for the most able and sympathetic administration of the department under his control, and I can say, and say it with confidence, that Sir William Meyer will always be remembered by the peoples of India with feelings of deep respect and gratitude for his able management of the most important department of the Government of India. We may have differed from him in some respects, but all the same our regard for him is in no way diminished, for he possesses the qualities of head and heart which are essential for a good administrator. In wishing Sir William Meyer our heartiest good wishes one does not help feeling with regret at the short span of the official tenure of these high offices. On behalf of my Province I offer the retiring Finance Member our heartiest congratulations for the most able discharge of his high responsibilities, and wish him all the happiness in his well-earned rest."

3-1 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde:—"My Lord, the Financial Statement that we have been discussing is, really speaking, a War Statement. We read about the war from almost the first page to the last, and I may without exaggeration say that in almost every paragraph something is said about the war which has influenced us either adversely or for the better. For the 'better.' I use this word with some deliberation. For the better I say in that some principles have been carried out for which we have been fighting for a long time. One of these principles, which has eventually been put in paragraph 68 of the statement of the Finance Minister, is that balances derived from loans, etc., have been allowed to remain in the Banks as long as possible, in fact, until they were actually required or until the Banks themselves requested that they might be withdrawn. This has for a long time been felt to be necessary, and in that view what are called independent treasuries were always condemned. I always thought that maintaining a treasury where money was brought and locked up for a long time and kept from better use was a mistake, and I am glad that the Hon'ble the Finance Minister has availed himself of this balance and let it become useful for the trade of the country until actually required. I trust that these independent treasuries will gradually diminish and finally disappear and eventually, if the Government has balances, they will be lodged in the banks and will be always available both for trade and for the purposes of the administration as they are required.

"This brings me, from my point of view, to another subject which is of great importance also, namely, that the large balances that are maintained in England on account of India, all our savings and whatever we could keep back here, have always travelled to England, and I am very glad in this respect that the necessities of the war have compelled us to keep our money here and arrange, as well as we can, to pay off our obligations in England by Treasury Bills or by drawing cheques or by any other arrangements without actually sending the cash out of the country. Fortunately for us also this year the money at the disposal of the Secretary of State has been so much that he has not had to sell Council Bills, not at least for the purpose of meeting his establishment charges or his necessities. More money has been there with him, and for the first time, I believe, this has prevented him from doing a thing which always used to be looked upon as a sort of standing joke. I am told that at Aden Arab boys come close to the steamers and when you try to throw them a rupee they say 'rupee no good, throw us a shilling.' This bad reputation of the rupee has definitely disappeared, and it is now not only worth 16 annas but a little more. To such an extent is this so, that it has caused the consideration of a problem which has never arisen before and which has arisen now for the first time, especially when silver sells really for more than it did, whether the coin is to be maintained or what is to be done. As a remedy I am glad that the Mint has been established and this Mint, when it comes into full working order, will operate, I think, very strongly in solving all those problems of exchange which have been agitating the public mind for a long time. If our currency here is gold and Government mint gold, then the difficulty of sending for it across the seas entirely disappears, and India will buy in gold and will be paid in gold also, and this troublesome problem of exchange, which has been weighing on the public mind for a long time will, I think, in course of time disappear. Another good that has come out of it is that to which I referred in the beginning of my remarks, namely, that Indian balances and monies raised by us here should be kept in the country and not sent out to another country. That has also been solved by this question of the opening of the Mint. For the purposes of this Mint we will necessarily have to buy gold; silver necessarily will occupy a secondary place, and the charge which has been levelled against us before that India hoardes gold and that we are very fond of getting hold of gold coin and burying it will lose its force. Somebody said that in Australia they are digging gold out of the ground, and that in India we are burying gold in the ground as a sort of counterbalancing measure for the numerous mining operations that are going on elsewhere. Like all countries India absorbs a certain amount of gold and Indians, in common with all other members of humanity, store a little gold as a provision for a rainy day, but they do not possess a particular passion for burying it. That fallacy has been exposed, and I believe will be exploded entirely when this Mint will be working in Bombay for some time.

[Mr. Khaparde; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.] [8TH MARCH, 1918.]

"Whilst I am speaking of these balances in the hands of the Secretary of State, I wish to submit that the reserves on account of the Paper Currency that are now kept in England should be transferred to India. One advantage of that would be that they would be lodged in the Banks here, so that the money will be useful for trade, and the difficulty about the condition of markets and about the shortage of money and so on will disappear. It is true that we require money only during particular seasons and security at other seasons. That is so, I believe, all the world over to a certain extent, though more so in India because we are all agricultural people, and at one particular time of the year we have got to pay our land-revenue, meet the demands of moneylenders, meet all our liabilities and also make provision for the rest of the year. So money is required at one time very urgently, and as a result of this shortage of money, we have to sell cheaper than we otherwise would if all our resources were here. If all our resources were available here then they would give it so much use and this periodical difficulty of our having to sell cheaper than we otherwise would, would disappear, and Government as well as the banks would have more money to give.

"There is a further matter on which my friends have been congratulating, and rightly congratulating, the Hon'ble the Finance Minister, and that is the provision he has made for Education. I congratulate him also, though I submit that the provision is very small. It need not have been small on account of the war, because I look upon Education as really a war measure. The more people are educated, the better soldiers they will make, and in respect of this I would submit that we should spend a little more money in making the military service more attractive. A complaint has been made here that soldiers only get Rs. 11, and that is not sufficient. Of course it is not sufficient, and I think if we want to make it worth while for the best kind of people to go in for military service, we should raise their pay and status. And in order to afford facilities for their higher training in military knowledge, something like an Indian Sandhurst might be established where officers could be trained. In that way this will be not only an educational measure but also a measure of protection against war.

"My Lord, whilst thanking the Hon'ble the Finance Minister for providing for Education, I humbly submit that the provision he has made does not go far enough. I should like to have seen 4, 5, 6, 8 or 10 times the money set apart even in these days of war and stress.

"I have no further observations to offer. In conclusion, I also very heartily desire to be associated in congratulating the Hon'ble the Finance Minister upon the nice budget which he has presented. Usually the budget makes dry reading, but in this year's budget I find something to linger over, something to read and something to understand. Though my acquaintance with the Hon'ble the Finance Minister has been a short one, still I regret quite as much as anybody else in this Council that his connection with India will be severed soon. I trust he will retain his interest in us in his retirement and continue to give us the same advice and the same care that he has given us here."

3-12 P.M. The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—"My Lord, it is with great pleasure that I rise to congratulate the Hon'ble the Finance Member upon his rare good fortune in earning the good-will and the hearty good wishes of the people of India under exceptionally trying circumstances; and it is with peculiar pride that I rise to do so because I recognise that it is a Madras officer who has earned such distinction and his title to be considered one of the ablest financiers of our times. He has truly earned the gratitude of the people of India in that he has withstood all temptation to win a cheap popularity in certain quarters and stood by the country and defended the country's interests against obloquy, slander and malicious statements. We can never therefore forget what he has done for us, and we hope that when he severs his connection with us, he will still continue to take an interest in the affairs of India and try to promote its financial and economic prosperity.

"My Lord, there are so many good features in this budget that it would take a very long time to deal at any length with all of them. For two reasons I shall only allude to the more prominent of them. One is the time-limit and the other is that it is perhaps needless to remind the Government of India of the excellences of their schemes and the critical attitude that is generally forced upon us involves us in a discussion of what may perhaps be said against the schemes that may be proposed by the Government. The features upon which the Government is to be congratulated have been dealt with at some length by the Hon'ble Members who preceded me. One of those features is, that we are not going to be taxed further. Another is that we have made a new departure in undertaking to provide money by treasury bills. A third I would put as the departure to undertake raising loans in India for the purpose of discharging British liabilities and British debts. A fourth feature, which is an even more important one, is the recognition of the need for the differentiation of Provincial from Imperial finance. And last but not least is the recognition and partial introduction, owing to the pressure of war, of democratic methods in financial administration. The higher functions of Government have not been confined solely to the keeping of peace and order in any country. So much being said, I only hope that the departure which has been rightly undertaken this year in bringing on the discussion of the Financial Statement at an earlier stage will result in some fruit. I hope that the united wisdom or unwisdom of the non-official Members—official Members cannot help us because rigid discipline prevents them from taking part in the discussion—I hope, I say, that the united wisdom or unwisdom of all the non-official Members will induce the Finance Member—for after all the Finance Member is the Government of India in this particular matter—to change in some slight degree what I suppose he conceives to be the only possible Financial Statement that can be presented by the Government of India in the present year.

"My Lord, I may characterise the present Financial Statement as the usual orthodox statement modified by the pressure of War—a Service Budget, a War Budget—a tradesman's old East India Company's Budget and not a People's Budget. Travelling back over the history of finance during the past many years one noticeable feature has been that no Government of India, no Finance Minister, has ever come forward with any proposals before the Legislative Council for raising money, either in the shape of taxation or otherwise, for education, sanitation, or what may be called the social reforming side of governmental activities. It is a question always of throwing the crumbs for the above purposes Money may be raised for service needs or for army needs; if it is a surplus budget, some little money may be forthcoming for the needs of education and sanitation and such services are thus satisfied from time to time. But there has been no definite policy of asking the people to associate themselves with the Government saying to them 'We will raise so much money for the definite purpose of improving and organising your resources, intellectual or economic: will you agree to our proposals?' I hope that a departure will be made in this direction. I understand the difficulties of the Government. All foreign Governments are generally afraid to tax the people except to keep peace and order and do only so much as is absolutely necessary for the improvement of the condition of the people consistently with the security of their position. I hope that the new Councils will enable a departure to be made; and apart from that I hope the Government will take the sense of the country. The reformed Councils which will necessarily be larger in numbers will be able to cope with these large questions and to decide whether the people are willing to tax themselves for general purposes of the kind that I have referred to.

"Then, my Lord, I said this was an orthodox Budget. I need hardly refer to the various vicissitudes which the finances of the country have had to undergo owing to the Government embarking on a policy of purchases outside India and in India for the Imperial Government. That was accentuated by the war and nobody complains and nobody has a right to complain about it, except to draw the attention of the Government to its abnormal character, for it may be that that precedent will be pursued unless it is carefully safeguarded.

"Then one other point, I would like to draw the attention of the Council to in this connection is, that the Government does not choose to depart from its customary policy of always budgetting for a surplus by under-estimating the revenue. I appreciate the difficulties during a time of war, but my criticism is a real point, because during the last 20 years, except during three years, from 1898 to 1918-19, we have always budgetted for a surplus. The surplus amounted to as much as 52 millions. There were only three years in which there was a deficit, and one was 1908-09 when there was a worldwide monetary crisis, and the others were 1914-15 and 1915-16 when this war overtook us. That shows, therefore, that it was not merely the vicissitudes of the season that were responsible for these surpluses, but the fear that a deficit might land the Government in very great difficulties. I hope that the new Treasury Bill system which has been introduced and which has to be safeguarded from abuse (I shall allude to this later) will obviate the necessity for budgetting for large surpluses thereby avoiding the need for taxation until it is demonstrably proved that taxation is the only alternative open to the country and to the Government. Another point to which I would invite the attention of Council is one which has already been referred to by speakers on previous budgets, and it is that revenue is being utilised in this poor country towards capital expenditure. Of course in a particular year when the money cannot be otherwise raised or when the surplus revenue cannot be usefully employed, it may be that revenue should be spent over capital expenses, but I hope even then that there will be a separate account, a loan account, with or without interest; because, my Lord, unless that is done we shall not know how much taxation proper has been utilised for capital purposes which should come really under a different heading altogether and not under revenue.

"One thing which makes one somewhat sceptical with regard to the general currency policy of the Government is certain disclosures made during the course of the war. England is a very wealthy country. She has asked her people during these years to produce as much as possible for export, to reserve and conserve the resources of the country by reducing the imports; but our Government found it necessary to discourage exports and regretted that the imports have not been heavy because their financial equilibrium was rudely disturbed in undertaking the continuous solution of the exchange problem on an artificial basis. I quite appreciate the difficulties but still this is to be said, that though money has been intercepted the result of this policy is that currency has been inflated. The net excess of exports of merchandise in 1915-16 and 1916-17 was 40 millions and 54 millions, as against 55 millions and 53 millions in 1911-12 and 1912-13, so that that is not an abnormal feature. A foreign trade of 431 crores of rupees was managed in 1913-14 with a currency of 183 crores metallic and 69 crores paper, whereas a trade of 410 crores, or 21 crores less, found a difficulty in being managed even with a currency of 250 crores metallic, an addition of 67 crores in two years and 35 crores additional paper. The object was to minimise the imports of gold and silver as far as possible, but has the Government succeeded in that policy? In the years 1911-12 and 1912-13, as I have said there was a net excess of exports of merchandise of 55 and 53 millions. The total import of gold and silver did not then exceed 45 million pounds, whereas in the two years 1916-17 and 1917-18 you had to import for currency purposes exactly the same amount, 45 million pounds, or 67 crores of rupees; and besides this there was 14 crores of rupees imported on private account. Therefore, I do not see that the object Government had in view except in respect of gold has been achieved. High prices have been the result; there was an inflation of currency, and I am not quite sure as to whether the disturbance of the normal channels of trade has had the effects desired by the Government, except for a temporary period. It would have been a very good thing if the people of India could entrust their money on a loan account; certainly we are bound to do so and we wish to assist the United Kingdom; and it is unfortunate that the Government of India have had to resort to these expedients. It seems to me, therefore, that the time has come to investigate the need for and the location, first of all, of the Gold Standard Reserve, and the desirability of a revision of the currency policy of the Government; and the latter has been facilitated to a certain extent by the opening of the gold mint in Bombay. With regard to the Gold Standard Reserve, my Lord, I make the suggestion that this might be utilised for reducing the debt for this reason. During the war at any rate it would be next to impossible to expect the United Kingdom to repay the debt. Our exports are bound to be in excess of imports, and so no question of exchange is likely to involve us in difficulties. If the Government should insist upon their old gold standard policy the money might be utilised meanwhile in discharging the British debt thereby reducing the interest charges, on condition that it should be restored, if necessary, when peace returns. The Chamberlain Commission gave the reason for the location of that gold standard reserve in England that if the reserve were kept in India it would have to be removed to London to be used, and that this would involve delay, and they said that there was absolutely no danger of this reserve being looked upon as a London reserve by the Bank of England. But exceptional circumstances have proved that the fears that were entertained were not altogether unjustified, and it has also to a certain extent proved a source of danger to the Government in England. A survey of the trade of India during the past many years also shows that India has always had an excess of exports and with the advancement of agriculture, and manufactures, she is bound to have an excess of exports over imports, and the problem as to whether the gold standard reserve should be kept on those lines deserves investigation at an early date.

"The organization of the banking system and the financial resources of the people are problems which, I hope, the Government will undertake as soon as war conditions permit. The war loan has been such a great success during the last few years shows what immense confidence the people of India have in Government initiative and Government credit and under the guidance of Government officials I am sure sufficient capital will be forthcoming for all industrial expansion, and let me hope, agricultural expansion also. The expansion of the currency policy and the possibility of a two-third safe investment in securities prove also the elasticity of our resources.

"The last suggestion that I would respectfully make is the provision for the discharge of future financial obligations only in India, whether in the shape of interest charges, salaries or pensions, or the purchase of stores or facilities for the payment in the United Kingdom being only optional. The centre must be removed to Delhi from the United Kingdom. The need......"

His Excellency the President :—"The Hon'ble Member has taken two minutes more. I thought he was coming to a close, but he might now conclude his peroration."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur Sarma :—"The need for ship building programme is absolutely necessary. There is the principle of the indigo trade being taxed for a certain purpose and that may be taken as a precedent for undertaking any expansion that may be needed in that direction.

"And lastly, the only point I would ask your Lordship to permit me to state is with regard to the reference that was made here that Madras had not done well in the War Loan,—it is only if your Lordship will permit me to refer to it..........."

His Excellency the President :—"You might let it alone."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur :—"My Lord, before proceeding to say a few words on the Financial Statement, I would crave leave to offer my hearty and respectful congratulations to the Hon'ble the Finance Member on his parting prosperity budget, and the successful way in which he has been able to find out means for the prosecution of the war, without recourse to any additional taxation. 'Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off'. And as he has presented to the Council his last Financial Statement and we are now able to judge him by his actions, we can assure him that he will carry with him, in his retirement, the gratitude of India in having steered the bark of his department clear of those rocks-ahead on which policies and reputation are often wrecked. He has laboured under peculiar difficulties and disadvantages due to the world-wide war, which has dislocated trade and fearfully increased expenditure. War is writ large on every page of four of the five Financial Statements which he has presented to this Council, and the necessity to conserve our resources, as much as possible, has made him minimise expenditure on social reform and capital outlay. But he has always shown his eagerness to avoid the imposition of fresh taxes and has kept before him the ideal of graduated taxation. True to the interests of India which has touched him with her magic wand and faithful to the salt he has eaten, he has served India with a love and devotion which will not be forgotten by a grateful people. He has served India at a most critical period of her history and served her faithfully. In him the Government of India loses an honest and honourable officer, India a true well-wisher and many of us a sincere friend.

3-31 P.M.

"My Lord, under the new rules we are precluded from discussing matters which fall outside the Financial Statement. I can very well realise that at a critical time like the one we are passing through, we should not embarrass the Government of India with requests for increased grants for Provincial purposes. But the practice of allowing Members to unfold their tale of grievances in this Council once in a year was on the whole wholesome and, I may add, useful. For even at the risk of being charged with having developed a dangerous degree of provincial or parochial patriotism, I must say that we are the representatives of provincial interests, and it is our duty to safeguard those interests and draw the attention of your Excellency's Government to the needs and requirements of our respective provinces. The necessity of drawing the Council's attention to provincial matters has been somewhat aggravated by the Government of India's decision to live away from centres of mercantile activities and public life . . . . "

His Excellency the President :—"I think the Hon'ble Member knows that he is off the lines. Will he please get on the lines again?"

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur :—"My Lord, I bow to your decision and proceed to say a word or two on the present crisis.

"My Lord, we are passing through a crisis. The Empire is engaged in a war that civilisation is waging against Prussian militarism and brute force which are a menace to peace and progress, and an onerous burden has thereby been thrown on our shoulders. Ways and means must be found to bring the war to a successful issue, and we, as citizens of the Empire, must strain every nerve to achieve that end. Considering these, and not wishing to embarrass the Government at this juncture, I refrain from criticising in detail the several heads of the Statement, though I must say I feel a little disappointed to find that with the exception of a grant of 30 lakhs of rupees for the development of primary education there is very little provision in it for social reform or the development of any beneficial service. The amount provided for primary education is to be distributed among the Provinces. At a time when the 'torch of knowledge is lit for all' and it is borne in mind that in India the percentage of literacy is so low as about 10 in males and 1 in females, it is somewhat disappointing that the Government should make such a small provision for primary education. The mass of Indian ignorance is appalling. The people are eager to take advantage of primary schools wherever they exist, but their number is few and far between and Bills introduced in the Indian Legislative Council, Reports of Select Committees presented to the Council, and Bills published under Rule 23.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 13th March 1918 :—

No. 7 OF 1918.

A Bill to control the withdrawal of capital from the money-market by Companies.

WHEREAS it is expedient owing to the present war to take power to control the withdrawal of capital from the money-market by Companies; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title and duration.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Companies Restriction Act, 1918.

(2) It shall remain in force during the continuance of the present war, and for a period of six months thereafter.

Definitions.

2. All words and expressions used in this Act and defined in the Indian Companies Act, 1913, shall be deemed to have the meanings respectively attributed to them by that Act.

Prohibition of the registration of, or increase of share capital by, companies except under license.

3. (1) Notwithstanding anything in the Indian Companies Act, 1913, the Registrar shall not register a company, nor shall a company increase its share capital, issue debentures, or call up unpaid capital, unless the company holds a license in this behalf issued by the Governor General in Council:

Provided that nothing in this sub-section shall apply to a private company.

(2) A license issued under sub-section (1) shall be subject to such conditions as the Governor General in Council may think fit, and the holder of such license shall comply with any such conditions.

Contracts made for the purpose of increasing share capital in contravention of section 3, to be void, and calls to be unenforceable.

4. Any contract made by or on behalf of a company, with the object or the effect of increasing its share capital, or for the issue of debentures, which is in contravention of the provisions of section 3, shall be void, and any call made by a company in contravention of the said provisions shall be unenforceable.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

It is necessary at the present time to husband the resources of the Indian money-market for purposes essential to the successful prosecution of the war, and to empower the Government of India to exercise control over fresh issues of capital in order to secure this object This Bill accordingly provides that no company other than a private company shall be registered, or shall increase its share capital, issue debentures, or call up unpaid capital, except in accordance with the terms of a license issued by the Governor General in Council, and authorises him to attach to such license such conditions as he may think fit. It is not necessary to apply a similar restriction to private companies, since these, under the definition in section 2 (13) of the Indian Companies Act, cannot invite the public to subscribe either for shares or debentures. It is intended that this measure shall be in force for the period of the war and for six months thereafter.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 13th March 1918 :—

No. 8 OF 1918.

[ALL NEW MATTER IS PRINTED IN ITALICS.]

[References in antique type in the margin are to sections of Act XII of 1915.]

A Bill to consolidate and amend the law to provide for the special protection in respect of civil and revenue litigation of Indian soldiers serving under war conditions.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law to provide for the special protection in respect of civil and revenue litigation of Indian soldiers serving under war conditions; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title and extent.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Soldiers (Litigation) Act, 1918.

Cf. s. 1(2) of Act XII of 1915.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, including British Baluchistan.

Cf. s. 2, ibid.

Definitions.

2. In this Act,—

"Court" means a Civil or Revenue Court;

[VIII] of 1911.

"Indian soldier" means any person subject to the Indian Army Act, 1911;

"prescribed" means prescribed by rules made under this Act; and

"proceeding" includes suit and appeal.

Cf. s. 3, of Act XII of 1915.

Circumstances in which Indian soldier shall be deemed to be serving under war conditions.

3. An Indian soldier shall be deemed to be serving under war conditions—

(a) during the continuance of the present war and for six months thereafter,

(i) when he is serving out of India,

(ii) when he is under orders to proceed on field service,

(iii) when the unit to which he belongs is mobilised, or

(iv) when in the opinion of the prescribed authority such soldier by reason of the state of war now existing is precluded from obtaining leave of absence to enable him to attend a Court as a party to any proceeding therein, and

(b) after the expiration of that period when he is serving in any place and such service has been declared by notification of the Governor General in Council in the Gazette of India to be service under war conditions.

Particulars to be furnished in plaints, applications or appeals to Court.

4. If any person presenting any plaint, application or appeal to any Court has reason to believe that any adverse party is an Indian soldier who is serving under war conditions, he shall state the fact in his plaint, application or appeal.

Power of Collector to intervene in case of unrepresented Indian soldier.

5. If the Collector has reason to believe that any Indian soldier, who ordinarily resides or who has property in his district and who is a party to any proceeding pending before any Court, is unable to appear thereon, the Collector may certify the facts in the prescribed manner to the Court.

Notice to be given in case of unrepresented Indian soldier.

6. If the Collector has certified under section 5, or if the Court has reason to believe, that an Indian soldier who is a party to any proceeding pending before it is unable to appear thereon, and if such soldier is not represented by any person duly authorised to appear, plead or act on his behalf, such Court shall suspend the proceeding and shall give notice thereof in the prescribed manner to the prescribed authority.

Postponement of proceedings.

7. If on receipt of a notice under section 6, the prescribed authority certifies in the prescribed manner to the Court in which the proceeding is pending that such soldier is serving under war conditions, and that a postponement of the proceeding as against such soldier is necessary in the interests of justice, such Court shall thereupon postpone the proceeding as against such soldier for the prescribed period, or, if no period has been prescribed, for such period as it thinks fit.

Court may proceed when no certificate received within certain period.

8. If, after issue of a notice under section 6, the prescribed authority either certifies that such soldier is not serving, under war conditions, or that such postponement is not necessary or fails to certify, in the case of a soldier resident in the district in which the Court is situate, within two months or, in any other case, within three months from the date of the issue of such notice that such postponement is necessary, the Court may, if it thinks fit, continue the proceeding.

Power to set aside decrees and orders passed against an Indian soldier serving under war conditions.

9. (1) In any proceeding before a Court in which a decree or order has been passed against any Indian soldier whilst such soldier was serving under war conditions, such soldier may apply to the Court which passed the same for an order to set it aside, and, if he satisfies the Court that default after the 5th of May, 1915, has been made in complying with the provisions of section 4 or 6, the Court shall, or in any other case if the interests of justice require such a course, the Court, subject to such conditions (if any) as it thinks fit to impose, may make an order setting aside the decree or order as against such soldier:

Provided that—

(a) any such application shall be made within three months from the date on which such soldier ceased to serve under war conditions;

(b) no decree or order shall be set aside on any such application unless notice thereof has been served on the opposite party; and

(c) when the decree or order is of such a nature that it cannot be set aside as against such soldier only, it may be set aside as against all or any of the parties against whom it has been made.

(2) The provisions of section 5 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, shall apply to applications under this section. IX of 1908.

Modification of law of limitation in the case of Indian soldier serving under war conditions.

10. In computing the period of limitation prescribed by the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, or any other law for the time being in force for any suit, appeal or application to any Court in which the plaintiff, appellant or applicant is an Indian soldier, the time during which such soldier has been serving under war conditions, since the 4th of August, 1914, shall be excluded. Cf. s. 11 of Act XII of 1915. IX of 1908.

Power of Court to refer question as to whether service was under war conditions or not.

11. If any Court is in doubt whether, for the purposes of section 9 or 10, any Indian soldier is or was at any particular time serving under war conditions, it may refer the point for the decision of the prescribed authority, and the certificate of such authority shall be conclusive evidence on the point. Cf. s. 9 of Act XII of 1915.

Rule-making power.

12. The Local Government, after consulting the High Court may, by notification in the local official gazette, make rules— Cf. s. 10, ibid.

(a) prescribing the manner and form in which any notice or certificate under this Act shall be given and the authorities to whom such notices shall be given, and by whom the powers under this Act shall be exercised;

(b) the period for which proceedings or any class of proceeding shall be suspended under this Act; and

(c) generally providing for any matters incidental to the purposes of this Act.

Power to apply the provisions of this Act to other persons in the service of the Crown.

13. The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct that all or any of the provisions of this Act shall apply to any other class of persons in the service of His Majesty specified in such notification in the same manner as they apply to Indian soldiers, and upon such notification such provisions shall apply accordingly. Cf. s. 12, ibid.

Repeal of Act XII of 1915.

14. The Indian Soldiers (Litigation) Act, 1915, is hereby repealed. XII of 1915.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE main object of the Bill is to simplify the procedure which the Indian Soldiers (Litigation) Act, 1915, prescribes for the postponement of proceedings in which Indian soldiers serving under war conditions are concerned. Under Sections 4 and 7 of the Indian Soldiers (Litigation) Act, 1915, the Court or the Collector has to decide that an Indian soldier who is a party to the proceeding is serving under war conditions before steps can be taken to postpone the proceeding. This in practice is found to be inconvenient and it is proposed to amend the Act, so as to provide that Civil and Revenue Courts shall suspend proceedings when they have reason to believe that any party is an Indian soldier who is unavoidably absent and is not represented. Notice of the suspension will be given to the prescribed authority which may certify that the Indian soldier is serving under war conditions and that a postponement is necessary in the interests of justice. In such case the Court will postpone the proceeding. The amendments necessary in Act XII of 1915, though small, are numerous, and it is therefore considered expedient to repeal and re-enact the Act. The opportunity has been taken to embody in the definition of "serving under war conditions" the conditions prescribed by notification under Section 2 (1) of the Act. This definition has stood the test of nearly three years of the war, and it appears no longer necessary to reserve power to the Governor General in Council to alter it.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill further to amend the Indian Army Act, 1911, was presented to the Indian Legislative Council on the 13th March 1918 :—

WE, the undersigned, Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill further to amend the Indian Army Act, 1911, was referred, have considered the Bill and have now the honour to submit this our Report, with the Bill as amended by us, annexed thereto.

2. We have made only two changes of substance in the Bill as it was introduced in Council :—

(1) Colonel Caruana pointed out that, in the event of the creation of new military organizations, the exercise of the powers of officers commanding armies, army corps, divisions and brigades, would not be provided for in India though they are provided for in the case of persons serving out of India by sub-section (1) of section 6 of the Act as it stands. We have, therefore, re-drafted clause 3 of the Bill providing for an amendment of sub-section (1) of section 6, which will obviate a further amendment of the Act in the event of the creation of any new military organization which, in the opinion of the Governor General in Council, is not smaller than a brigade.

(2) Colonel Caruana pointed out that miscarriages of justice had occurred by reason of the absence of a provision enabling Courts to convict of abetment when no specific charge of abetment had been framed. We consider that this is a matter that should be provided for, and we have amended clause 16 of the Bill accordingly.

3. We have made one or two very slight verbal changes in the Bill referred to us.

4. The Bill was published in the Gazette of India, dated the 9th March 1918.

5. We think that the measure has not been so altered as to require re-publication, and we recommend that it be passed as now amended.

BILL No. 6 OF 1918.

[AS AMENDED BY THE SELECT COMMITTEE.]

[Words printed in italics indicate the amendments suggested by the Select Committee.]

A Bill further to amend the Indian Army Act, 1911.

WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend the Indian Army Act, 1911; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Army (Amendment) Act, 191 .

(2) It shall come into force on such date as the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct in this behalf.

Substitution of "Indian" for "native" in Act VIII of 1911.

2. In the Indian Army Act, 1911 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act), for the expressions "native" and "a native" wherever they occur, the expressions "Indian" and "an Indian" shall be substituted respectively.

Amendment of section 6 of Act VIII of 1911.

3. For sub-section (1) of section 6 of the said Act, the following sub-section shall be substituted, namely:—

Officers to exercise powers in certain cases.

"6 (1) Whenever persons subject to this Act are serving,

(a) out of India under an officer not subject to the authority of the Governor General in Council, or

(b) in India under an officer commanding any military organisation not in this section specifically named and being, in the opinion of the Governor General in Council, not less than a brigade, the Governor General in Council may prescribe the officer by whom the powers which, under this Act, may be exercised by officers commanding armies, army corps, divisions and brigades, shall, as regards such persons, be exercised."

Amendment of section 7 of Act VIII of 1911.

4. For clause (8) of section 7 of the said Act, the following clause shall be substituted, namely:—

"(8) 'army,' 'army corps,' 'division' and 'brigade' mean respectively an army, army corps, division or brigade which is under the command of an officer subject to the authority of the Governor General in Council or, when on active service, an army, army corps, division or brigade under the command of an officer holding a commission in His Majesty's land Forces."

Amendments of sections 14, 19, 21, 23, 102 and 108 of Act VIII of 1911.

5. In sections 14, 19, 21, 23 and 108 of the said Act, after the word "army" the words "army corps," and in section 102 of the said Act after the word "army" the words "or army corps" shall be inserted.

Amendment of section 9 of Act VIII of 1911.

6. In section 9 of the said Act, after the words "he shall sign" the words "and shall also cause the person to sign" shall be inserted.

Amendment of section 18 of Act VIII of 1911.

7. To sub-section (2) of section 18 of the said Act, the following proviso shall be added, namely:—

"Provided that, where any such person is sentenced to dismissal combined with any other punishment, such other punishment, or, in the case of a sentence of transportation or imprisonment, a portion of such other punishment, may be inflicted before he is sent to India."

Amendment of section 25 of Act VIII of 1911.

8. After clause (j) of section 25 of the said Act, the following shall be added, namely:—

"or

(k) on active service commits any offence against the property or person of any inhabitant of or resident in the country in which he is serving."

Amendment of section 27 of Act VIII of 1911.

9. In clause (a) of section 27 of the said Act, after the word "causes" the words "or conspires with any other persons to cause" shall be inserted.

Insertion of new section 39A in Act VIII of 1911.

10. After section 39 of the said Act, the following section shall be inserted, namely:—

Attempts.

"39A. Whoever attempts to commit an offence punishable by this Act or to cause such an offence to be committed and in such attempt does any act towards the commission of the offence may, where no express provision is made by this Act for the punishment of such attempt, be punished with the punishment provided in this Act for such offence."

Amendment of section 43 of Act VIII of 1911.

11. In section 43 of the said Act,

(1) in clause (e) for the words and brackets "(with or without solitary confinement)" the words "either rigorous or simple" shall be substituted;

(2) in clause (e) for the words "any stated period," the words "a period not exceeding two months" shall be substituted;

(3) after clause (g) the following clause shall be inserted, namely:—

"(gg) in the case of officers, reprimand or severe reprimand;"

(4) in clause (k) after sub-clause (iv), the following sub-clause shall be added, namely:—

"(v) on active service forfeiture of pay and allowances for a period not exceeding three months."

Amendment of section 47 of Act VIII of 1911.

12. In section 47 of the said Act, after the brackets and letter "(f)," the brackets and letters "(gg)" shall be inserted.

Insertion of new section 49A in Act VIII of 1911.

13. In Chapter VI after section 49 of the said Act, the following section shall be added, namely:—

Retention in the ranks of a person convicted on active service.

"49A. When any person on active service has been sentenced by court-martial to dismissal or to transportation or imprisonment whether combined with dismissal or not, the prescribed officer may direct that such person may be retained to serve in the ranks, and where such person has been sentenced to transportation or imprisonment such service shall be reckoned as part of his term of transportation or imprisonment."

Amendment of section 50 of Act VIII of 1911.

14. In section 50 of the said Act, after clause (c), the following clause shall be inserted, namely :—

"(cc) for every day on which he is in hospital on account of sickness certified by the medical officer attending on him to have been caused by his own misconduct or imprudence, such sum as may be specified by order of the Commander-in-Chief in India;"

Amendment of section 74 of Act VIII of 1911.

15. In the proviso to section 74 of the said Act, after the words "district court-martial," the words "or on active service a summary general court-martial" shall be inserted.

Amendment of section 86 of Act VIII of 1911.

16. After sub-section (5) of section 86 of the said Act, the following sub-section shall be added, namely :—

"(6) A person charged before a court-martial with any offence under this Act may be found guilty of having attempted to commit or of abetment of that offence although the attempt or abetment is not separately charged."

Amendment of section 91 of Act VIII of 1911.

17. In section 91 of the said Act, for the words "and of the enrolment of such person," the following words shall be substituted, namely :—

"The enrolment of such person may be proved by the production of a copy of his enrolment paper purporting to be certified to be a true copy by the officer having the custody of the enrolment paper."

Insertion of new section 91A in Act VIII of 1911.

18. After section 91 of the said Act, the following section shall be inserted, namely :—

Presumption as to certain documents.

"91A. (1) A letter, return or other document respecting the service of any person in, or the dismissal or discharge of any person from, any portion of His Majesty's Forces, or respecting the circumstance of any person not having served in or belonged to any portion of His Majesty's Forces, if purporting to be signed by or on behalf of the Governor General in Council or the Commander-in-Chief in India or by any prescribed officer, shall be evidence of the facts stated in such letter, return or other document.

(2) An army list or gazette purporting to be published by authority shall be evidence of the status and rank of the officers or warrant officers therein mentioned, and of any appointment held by such officers or warrant officers and of the corps, battalion or arm or branch of the service to which such officers or warrant officers belong.

(3) Where a record is made in any regimental book in pursuance of this Act or of any rules made thereunder or otherwise in pursuance of military duty, and purports to be signed by the commanding officer or by the officer whose duty it is to make such record, such record shall be evidence of the facts thereby stated.

(4) A copy of any record in any regimental book purporting to be certified to be a true copy by the officer having the custody of such book shall be evidence of such record.

(5) Where any person subject to this Act is being tried on a charge of desertion or of absence without leave, and such person has surrendered himself into the custody of, or has been apprehended by a provost-marshal, assistant provost-marshal or other officer, or any portion of His Majesty's Forces, a certificate purporting to be signed by such provost-marshal, assistant provost-marshal or other officer, or by the commanding officer of that portion of His Majesty's Forces and stating the fact, date and place of such surrender or apprehension shall be evidence of the matters so stated.

(6) When any person subject to this Act is being tried on a charge of desertion or of absence without leave, and such person has surrendered himself into the custody of, or has been apprehended by, a police-officer not below the rank of an officer in charge of a police-station, a certificate purporting to be signed by such police-officer and stating the fact, date and place of such surrender or apprehension, shall be evidence of the matters so stated."

Amendment of section 98 of Act VIII of 1911.

19. In sub-section (1) of section 98 of the said Act,

(1) after the words "convening officer," the words "or if the convening officer so directs, by an authority superior to the convening officer" shall be inserted ;

(2) in clause (c) for the word "said," the word "convening" shall be substituted

Insertion of new section 99A in Act VIII of 1911

20. After section 99 of the said Act, the following section shall be inserted, namely :—

Confirmation of finding and sentence on board ship.

"99A. When any person subject to this Act is tried and sentenced by court-martial while on board ship, the finding and sentence so far as not confirmed and executed on board ship may be confirmed and executed in like manner as if such person had been tried at the port of disembarkation."

Amendment of section 107 of Act VIII of 1911.

21. After the proviso to section 107 of the said Act, the following proviso shall be added, namely :—

"Provided further that on active service a sentence of rigorous imprisonment may be carried out by confinement in such place as the officer commanding the forces in the field may from time to time appoint."

Insertion of new section 108A in Act VIII of 1911.

22. After section 108 of the said Act, the following section shall be inserted, namely :—

Offenders sentenced to transportation how dealt with until transported.

"108A. In every case in which a sentence of transportation is passed under this Act, the offender, until he is transported, shall be dealt with in the same manner as if sentenced to rigorous imprisonment, and shall be deemed to have been undergoing his sentence of transportation during the term of his imprisonment."

Insertion of new section 111A in Act VIII of 1911.

23. In Chapter IX of the said Act after section 111, the following section shall be added, namely :—

Execution of sentence of fine.

"111A. When a sentence of fine is imposed by a court-martial under section 41 or section 42, whether the trial was held within British India or not, a copy of such sentence signed and certified by the president of the Court or the officer holding the trial, as the case may be, may be sent to any Magistrate in British India, and such Magistrate shall thereupon cause the fine to be recovered in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for the levy of fines as if it was a sentence of fine imposed by such Magistrate." [V of 1898.]

24. For section 112 of the said Act, the following section shall be substituted, namely :—

Substitution of new section for section 112 of Act VIII of 1911.

"112 (1). When any person subject to this Act has been convicted by a court-martial of any offence, the Governor General in Council or the Commander-in-Chief in India or, in the case of a sentence which he could have confirmed or which did not require confirmation, the officer commanding the army, army corps, division or independent brigade in which such person at the time of his conviction was serving, or the prescribed officer may,

Pardons and remissions.

(a) either without conditions or upon any conditions which the person sentenced accepts, pardon the person or remit the whole or any part of the punishment awarded ;

(b) mitigate the punishment awarded, or commute such punishment for any less punishment or punishments mentioned in this Act :

Provided that a sentence of transportation shall not be commuted for a sentence of imprisonment for a term exceeding the term of transportation awarded by the Court.

(2) If any condition on which a person has been pardoned or a punishment has been remitted is, in the opinion of the authority which granted the pardon or remitted the punishment, not fulfilled, such authority may cancel the pardon or remission, and thereupon the sentence of the Court shall be carried into effect as if such pardon had not been granted or such punishment had not been remitted :

Provided that in the case of a person sentenced to transportation or imprisonment, such person shall undergo only the unexpired portion of his sentence.

(3) When under the provisions of section 49 a non-commissioned officer is deemed to be reduced to the ranks, such reduction shall, for the purposes of this section, be treated as a punishment awarded by sentence of a court-martial."

25. After section 126 of the said Act, the following sections shall be inserted, namely :—

Insertion of new sections 126-A and 126-B in Act VIII of 1911.

"Disposal of Property.

126A. When any property regarding which any offence appears to have been committed, or which appears to have been used for the commission of any offence, is produced before a court-martial during a trial, the Court may make such order as it thinks fit for the proper custody of such property pending the conclusion of the trial, and if the property is subject to speedy or natural decay may, after recording such evidence as it thinks necessary, order it to be sold or otherwise disposed of.

Order for custody and disposal of property pending trial in certain cases.

126B. (1) After the conclusion of a trial before any court-martial, the Court or the officer confirming the finding or sentence of such court-martial or any authority superior to such officer, or, in the case of a court-martial whose finding or sentence does not require confirmation, the officer commanding the army, army corps, division or brigade within which the trial was held, may make such order as it or he thinks fit for the disposal by destruction, confiscation, delivery to any person claiming to be entitled to possession thereof, or otherwise, of any property or document produced before the Court or in its custody, or regarding which any offence appears to have been committed or which has been used for the commission of any offence.

Order for disposal of property regarding which offence committed.

(2) Where any order has been made under sub-section (1) in respect of property regarding which an offence appears to have been committed, a copy of such order signed and certified by the authority making the same may, whether the trial was held within British India or not, be sent to a Magistrate in any presidency-town or district in which such property for the time being is, and such Magistrate shall thereupon cause the order to be carried into effect as if it was an order passed by such Magistrate under the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898. [V of 1898.]

Explanation.—In this section the term "property" includes, in the case of property regarding which an offence appears to have been committed, not only such property as has been originally in the possession or under the control of any party, but also any property into or for which the same may have been converted or exchanged, and anything acquired by such conversion or exchange whether immediately or otherwise."

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to give additional powers to Courts to deal in certain cases with usurious loans of money or grain was presented to the Indian Legislative Council on the 13th March 1918 :—

WE, the undersigned, Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to give additional powers to Courts to deal in certain cases with usurious loans of money or grain was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report, with the Bill as amended by us annexed thereto.

Paper No. 1.—From Chief Commissioner, Coorg, No. 3947, dated 11th December, 1917; from Chief Commissioner, Delhi, No 10352-Legislative, dated 13th December, 1917, and enclosure, from Chief Commissioner, Assam, No. 111-L, dated 4th January, 1918, from Agent to the Governor General and Chief Commissioner, Baluchistan, No. 13-J., dated 5th January, 1918; and from Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, No. 104-G.-XIX, dated 9th January, 1918, and enclosures.

Paper No 2.—From Government, Punjab, No. 608 (Home-Judl.), dated 9th January, 1918, and enclosures; from Government, Burma, No 765-L.-4, dated 18th January, 1918, and enclosures; from Chief Commissioner, North-West Frontier Province, No 222-G, dated 22nd January, 1918, and enclosure, from Chief Commissioner, Ajmer-Merwara, No. $\frac{206\text{-C}}{690}$, dated the 26th January, 1918; and from Government, Bihar and Orissa, No $\frac{100}{\text{J.A.-25-17}}$ J. T., dated the 30th January, 1918, and enclosures.

Paper No. 3.—From the Calcutta High Court, No. 538, dated 2nd February, 1918; and from Government, United Provinces, No 27-C., dated 6th February, 1918, and enclosures.

Paper No. 4.—From Government, Bombay, No. 1020, dated 13th February, 1918, and enclosures; and from Government, Punjab, No. 3700 Judl., dated 16th February, 1918, and enclosure.

Paper No. 5.—From Government, Madras, No. 372, dated 16th February, 1918, and enclosures; and from Government, Bombay, No. 1313, dated 22nd February, 1918, and enclosure.

Paper No. 6.—From Government, Bengal, No. 921-J., dated 28th February, 1918, and enclosures.

2. The opinions we have received satisfy us that the Bill should apply to all loans in kind and not merely to grain loans. We have widened its scope to include this, and made the necessary amendment in the preamble and elsewhere.

3. We have amended clause 1 in two respects. In the first place, to meet the wishes of the Local Administration, we have provided that the Bill should extend proprio vigore to British Baluchistan. In the second place, we have left the Bill to come into force throughout British India, but have provided that the Local Government may direct that it shall not apply to any area, class of persons or class of transactions which that Government may specify. This seems to us the most suitable arrangement, in view of the difficulties which have been pointed out to us as likely to arise from the terms of the original clause

4. We have broken up sub-clause (1) of clause 2 of the Bill referred to us. The long sentence of which it consists might, we feel, have made it difficult to grasp, and we prefer the simpler arrangement which we now propose. We have, in the first place, provided a definition clause (clause 2 of the Bill annexed to this Report) in which we have inserted definitions of "interest," "loan," and "suit to which this Act applies". These definitions embody in substance the provisions which appeared in the body of the original clause. By this means we are enabled to shorten very considerably the wording of the main clause (clause 3 of the Bill as amended by us). It has been suggested that the accumulation of arrears of unpaid interest, even if interest was at a fair rate, might be considered as falling within the mischief of the Bill. We do not think there is much ground for supposing that such a danger exists. But as our Colleague Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur has some misapprehensions on this point, we have endeavoured to dispel them by inserting the words "rate of interest" in the definition of "interest." The use of the word "rate" in the definition of interest has rendered it necessary to make certain verbal changes in other parts of the Bill. Instead of the word "proceeding," which appeared in the original Bill, we have substituted the word "suit" in order to obviate all possibility of misconception, and to make it clear that the Bill does not apply to execution proceedings. In the definition of "loan," we include colourable transactions which are, in substance, loans.

5. We think it well to commence clause 3 by a specific reference to the Usury Laws Repeal Act, 1855, as the powers conferred by the Bill override pro tanto the provisions of that Act. We have accepted the view that the Court may act under the provisions of this clause suo motu as we attach considerable weight to the body of opinion which suggests this course and have modified the language of the Bill accordingly.

6. We gave careful consideration to the question whether there should not be some restriction on the powers of the Court to re-open agreements closing previous dealings and creating new obligations. We think that there is something to be said for the view that the Courts should not be required or allowed in such a case to go back beyond a definite period. In the case of a running account such a restriction is not possible, but we have accepted the view that where there is such an agreement which has been entered into by the parties or by their representatives in interest, the Court should not be allowed to re-open the agreement if it was made more than six years prior to the transaction before the Court. We have therefore inserted a proviso limiting in this way the powers under clause 3 (1) of the Bill annexed to this Report. To prevent any misapprehension we have also laid it down that the powers conferred by the clause shall not be used in such a way as to effect the decree of a Court.

7. We have accepted the view expressed in many opinions that the concluding words of clause 2 (2) (a) of the Bill referred to us should be omitted. We recognize that there is some danger of a local combination creating a prevailing rate which would be an excessive rate. We have amended the closing words of sub-clause (2) (b) so as to make it clear that it is for the Court to decide the total advantage which may reasonably be taken to have been expected from any transaction. We have inserted an Explanation to make it clear that interest may of itself be sufficient evidence that a transaction is substantially unfair. By doing so we have deliberately adopted the view set forth in the House of Lords in Samuel v. Newbold (1906), A. C. 461.

8. We have modified the provision in the Bill by which protection is afforded to a transferee for value so as to make it clear that it only extends to a case where a Court is satisfied that the transfer is bonâ fide, and that the transferee had at the time of the transfer no notice of any fact which would have entitled the debtor as against the lender to relief under clause 3.

9. In view of our use of the word "suit" we have inserted a separate clause in the Bill (clause 4), dealing with the question of proceedings in insolvency. We are not aware of any other proceedings to which it is desirable that the Bill should apply.

10. We have made certain other drafting changes which we need not refer to in detail.

Minute of Dissent.

* I sign this report ; but I reserve to myself the right of raising the objection that the Bill being a highly contentious measure should not have been brought before the Council at a time like this, and I object to the substitution of the words " the Court has reason to believe " for the words " the Court is satisfied by evidence " in section 3, clause (1).

BILL No. 15 OF 1917.

[AS AMENDED BY THE SELECT COMMITTEE.]

[Words in italics indicate the amendments suggested by the Select Committee.]

A Bill to give additional powers to Courts to deal in certain cases with usurious loans of money or in kind.

WHEREAS it is expedient to give additional powers to Courts to deal in certain cases with usurious loans of money or in kind; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title and extent.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Usurious Loans Act, 191 ;

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, including British Baluchistan;

(3) The Local Government may, by notification in the local official gazette, direct that it shall not apply to any area, class of persons, or class of transactions which it may specify in its notification.

Definitions.

2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context—

(1) "Interest" means rate of interest and includes the return to be made over and above what was actually lent, whether the same is charged or sought to be recovered specifically by way of interest or otherwise.

(2) "Loan" means a loan whether of money or in kind, and includes any transaction which is, in the opinion of the Court, in substance a loan.

(3) "Suit to which this Act applies" means any suit,

(a) for the recovery of a loan made after the commencement of this Act; or (b) for the enforcement of any security taken or any agreement, whether by way of settlement of account or otherwise, made, after the commencement of this Act in respect of any loan made either before or after the commencement of this Act.

Re-opening of transactions.

3. (1) Notwithstanding anything in the Usury Laws Repeal Act, 1855, where, in any suit to which this Act applies, whether heard ex parte or otherwise, the Court has reason to believe,

(a) that the interest is excessive; and

(b) that the transaction was, as between the parties thereto, substantially unfair, the Court may exercise all or any of the following powers, namely, may

(i) re-open the transaction, take an account between the parties, and relieve the debtor of all liability in respect of any excessive interest,

(ii) notwithstanding any agreement, purporting to close previous dealings and to create a new obligation, re-open any account already taken between them and relieve the debtor of all liability in respect of any excessive interest and if any thing has been paid or allowed in account in respect of such liability, order the creditor to repay any sum which it considers to be repayable in respect thereof;

(iii) set aside either wholly or in part or revise or alter any security given or agreement made in respect of any loan, and if the creditor has parted with the security, order him to indemnify the debtor in such manner and to such extent as it may deem just:

Provided that in the exercise of these powers the Court shall not—

(i) re-open any agreement purporting to close previous dealings and to create a new obligation which has been entered into by the parties or any persons from whom they claim at a date more than six years from the date of the transaction;

(ii) do anything which affects any decree of a Court.

(2) (a) In this section "excessive" means in excess of that which the Court deems to be reasonable having regard to the risk incurred as it appeared, or must be taken to have appeared, to the creditor at the date of the loan.

(b) In considering whether interest is excessive under this section, the Court shall take into account any amounts charged or paid, whether in money or in kind, for expenses, inquiries, fines, bonuses, premia, renewals or any other charges, and if compound interest is charged, the periods at which it is calculated, and the total advantage which may reasonably be taken to have been expected from the transaction.

(c) In considering the question of risk, the Court shall take into account the presence or absence of security and the value thereof, the financial condition of the debtor and the result of any previous transactions of the debtor, by way of loan, so far as the same were known, or must be taken to have been known, to the creditor.

(d) In considering whether a transaction was substantially unfair, the Court shall take into account all circumstances materially affecting the relations of the parties at the time of the loan or tending to show that the transaction was unfair, including the necessities or supposed necessities of the debtor at the time of the loan so far as the same were known, or must be taken to have been known, to the creditor.

Explanation.—Interest may of itself be sufficient evidence that a transaction was substantially unfair.

(3) This section shall apply to any suit whatever its form may be, if such suit is substantially one for the recovery of a loan or for the enforcement of any agreement or security in respect of a loan.

(4) Nothing in this section shall affect the rights of any transferee for value who satisfies the Court that the transfer to him was bonâ fide and that he had at the time of such transfer no notice of any fact which would have entitled the debtor as against the lender to relief under this section.

For the purposes of this sub-section, the word 'notice' shall have the same meaning as is ascribed to it in section 4 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882.

IV of 1882.

(5) Nothing in this section shall be construed as derogating from the existing powers or jurisdiction of any Court.

Insolvency proceedings.

4. On any application relating to the admission or amount of a proof of a loan in any insolvency proceedings, the Court may exercise the like powers as may be exercised under section 3 by a Court in a suit to which this Act applies.

[8TH MARCH, 1918.] [Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur.]

equipment deplorable. In Bengal, in 1916-17, the number of primary schools for boys was 31,617 with 1,124,468 pupils. The expenditure on them was Rs. 37,40,699, of which Rs. 17,95,596 was from fees. The amount which came from the students represents the desire of the poor people for education. It will appear that for 31,617 schools the Local Government and the local bodies between them paid only Rs. 19,45,103 or a little over Rs. 5 per school per month. Is this enough to attract really competent men to diffuse the fertilising waters of intellectual knowledge from their great and copious fountain-heads by a thousand irrigating channels over the whole length and breadth of the land ? I, therefore, respectfully plead for an increase in the grant for primary education and together with it a suitable grant for commercial education, if it is possible to do so at a juncture like this.

"It is a truism that if a country has to solve her poverty problem she must make necessary arrangements for the progressive development of her manufacture and commerce. We are lamentably wanting in all that leads to the establishment of prosperous industries. A carefully-organised system of commercial education is a prelude to successful industries and a necessity in a country which has immense possibilities of industrial and commercial development. In India we have only one commercial college worth the name. It has recently been established in Bombay through the exertions and enterprise of the growing and prosperous commercial community there. I am glad after long deliberation my alma mater has in this matter made a move in the right direction. The Calcutta University is now drafting regulations to provide for examinations in agriculture, technology, and commerce. It is certainly a significant sign of the times. But an institution like the Calcutta University which, in spite of the post-graduate classes, is mainly an examining body with its hands already full, cannot satisfy the growing needs of the country in this matter. And I, therefore, respectfully plead for a capital outlay and a recurring grant from the Government of India to provide commercial education in various parts of the country.

"Sanitation is a head which has received but scanty recognition; but with the plague decimating the population, and malaria no longer the monopoly of Bengal, it deserves more attention.

"My Lord, it is to be regretted that the expenditure on railways is so small As a merchant myself I feel keenly the hardship and loss which continued shortage of waggons has entailed on the country. On account of wagon-shortage and other causes the supply of coal has become so irregular and unreliable that mills and factories are in constant danger of being obliged to stop work, and colliery-proprietors are, in many cases, the worst sufferers. I, therefore, welcome the decision of the Government to encourage the construction of railway waggons in India, and wish the project every success. At the same time I would advocate a more vigorous policy in the matter, so as to relieve the congestion of traffic as early as possible.

"My Lord, I join with my Hon'ble friend, Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy, in raising my voice against the impending legislation to prohibit the raising of capital for joint-stock companies, large or small. The opportunity given to India by the war, which has shut out almost all imports from Europe and America, has raised new hopes in our minds and given us a stimulus for the development of our resources. People have been eagerly looking forward to the promotion of joint-stock enterprises, to capture the trade of enemy-countries with India. Here is our opportunity. And we cannot but regard a prohibition to raise capital for industrial enterprises at this time as undesirable—if not prejudicial—to the interests of India which are the interests of the Empire.

"My Lord, I congratulate the Hon'ble the Finance Member on his wise decision against the issue of premium bonds. A deviation from the ordinary methods of raising money in this country would have created a flutter in the dovecots of speculators and spread all sorts of rumours throughout the whispering galleries of the East.

"With these words, my Lord, I resume my seat."

[Mr. Sastri.] [8TH MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri:—"My Lord, the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer has received many expressions of personal esteem. I will add mine, and beg him to accept it as not less genuine than the rest. Sir William has been a tireless watcher of India's treasury as well as of her public weal. Cruel domestic sorrow, exceptional difficulties in office, and criticism, undeserved and in some cases unduly harsh, have added to his burdens and cares, but through them all he has pursued his duty unflinchingly. This Council will not be in Session when he retires, and it is therefore fitting that some of us should say to him that when he is in retirement he will be attended by the grateful recollections and kind thoughts of a people whom he has served faithfully and loved well. This budget, in spite of the difficulties confronting it, is as satisfactory as it may well be; but when I have said that, I must ask the leave of the Council to grumble a little in exercise of the constitutional right of a citizen of the British Empire. There has been, as is remarked on page 76 of this Financial Statement, a great deal of distress to the poor on account of the rise in prices. Now there are several causes for this rise in prices. There is a world movement, in which India is obliged to share. There is besides the complication produced by the war, but over and above that there is the element of difficulty added by the Government's own action. During the last two years there has been a very great inflation of the currency of this country, amounting on some estimates to about 100 crores, nearly 50 in coinage and about as much, or somewhat less, in the shape of paper. Whatever that is, this great addition to the currency of the country must have contributed its own share to the distress of the people. I do not say that this could have been altogether avoided, but I do say that this ought to be borne in mind by Government in adjusting their future financial arrangements. They have got to remember that the poor man in this country, poorer than in most other countries, has likewise to bear always the whole weight of administration on his back. Other people cry aloud for relief in this matter, relief is afforded to them, but always and inevitably at his expense. I will therefore ask that the present Finance Minister, and the Finance Minister who succeeds him, should glance an eye of pity on his burdens

'Which have of late so huddled on his back;
Enow to press a royal merchant down,
And pluck commisseration of his state,
From brassy bosoms and rough hearts of flint.'

"I will mention to your Excellency two matters in respect of which Government have to adopt a policy of great care and tenderness for the people. I will mention in the first place salt. But before I go to salt, let me say that in the budget of last year that we listened to there has been a tendency to under-estimate the revenue. This has been brought forward to-day as an adverse criticism. I do not mean it exactly in that sense; I recognise the exceptional difficulties of the situation and will not blame, but I wish to draw attention to the circumstance that the under-estimate seems to go throughout If the revenue has been under-estimated, so has the expenditure been. For both last year and this I find that the Finance Minister has had to face two or three millions, this year four millions, of additional expenditure under the head of Military. But this under-estimate seems also to extend to another thing. When he imposed taxation, he meant it to raise a certain amount both last year and this, seven millions, but he has got a good deal more, a little over nine. On striking the whole balance it appears as though it were possible to have managed the whole of this business without imposing any additional taxation at all on the people. For I find that during these two years there has been an increase under revenue only of about 22 millions and on expenditure there has been an increase of about 9 millions odd. It might have been possible—with prescience may I say—not entirely beyond human reach, it might have been possible to adjust the whole thing without additional taxation. I am mentioning this merely to enforce this point—that it might cause Government to pause before they take further measures in the way of taxing people either directly or indirectly.

[8TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mr. Sastri; Sir Dinshaw Wacha.]

"Coming now to the head of salt, the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer has been obliged to impose some slight taxation in addition to the taxation that salt bore already. Now, I do not object to this either, but I do object to another thing in connection with salt. Owing to the shortage of transport facilities and owing also, I fear, to the combination amongst salt traders throughout the country, there has been an increase in the price of salt to the poor far in excess of what might be justified by the advance in the salt duty. And, as Government own the salt in this country and enjoy a practical monopoly of that necessary article, I think the duty rests on Government of making available, by whatever measures may be reasonable, to the poor throughout the country, this necessary commodity at as small a price as may be, considering the duty imposed on it. Both in Madras, within my knowledge, and elsewhere in the country there has been much distress caused both by lack of salt and by its excessive price. The matter requires very close attention, and I hope the Government will give it.

"The only other point to which I wish to draw attention is the difficulty placed in the way of the poor in railway travelling. In this matter, though it is indirect taxation, Government have to remember that their policy during all these years has generally been to make travelling easy to the poor. Their policy, pursued without interruption, has been to make travelling as cheap as possible and to cause a reduction further and further in the fares. But, unfortunately, during the last year, the Railway Board have advanced the fares considerably. They first of all in the year 1916, in the month of December, cancelled a large number of passenger trains, thus restricting the facilities of travel. Not content with that, as another measure for restricting passenger traffic, they made an addition on the fares. In March 1916, again, they went on to raise the maximum fares on all the broad gauge lines on their third class. Then they said, wherever the fares were less than two-thirds or were only two-thirds, 25 per cent. of this two-thirds should be added, so that on all other lines as well the fares were worked up to five-sixths of the maxima. Then the railway lines abolished all the concessions. One need not mind the abolition of the concessions in the case of first and second-class passengers. But there are a number of students in our educational centres who travel in the third class at concession rates. The abolition of those concessions must have added considerably to the difficulties of the poor. But there is another thing that I do not quite understand. They have abolished also the sliding scales, according to which the fares were calculated on all the classes, so that now people pay uniformly at three pies or three and-a-half pies per mile, whereas formerly they would have had to pay at three pies or three and-a-half pies for a certain distance and at a lower rate for the balance of long journeys. This sliding scale has now been abolished, thus adding also greatly to the fares. But besides that, another step has been taken which must spell greater hardship to the poor in the future. They have raised the maxima of fares on all the lines up to about 33 per cent. on all the classes; in the case of the third class and the intermediate class, these additional fares are to be put on only for mail and fast trains. All the same, this is an addition which they have taken power to make, and one fears that perhaps these new maxima will also be soon worked up to, thus adding greatly to the difficulties already placed in the way of the poor in railway travelling. Now it seems to me that that is a method of indirect taxation which adds greatly to the revenue but presses hardly on the poor third-class travelling public. In this respect also I think that, with the surpluses with which we have been working our budgets for the last two years, it is possible—in fact I think it is highly desirable—that Government should look into the matter and, as soon as possible, restore the facilities that the poor have had for railway travelling."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha:—"Your Lordship, I will not travel over the same ground which has been traversed by so many of the speakers who have spoken before me. I think in a way they have actually travelled from China to Peru; if not from China to Peru, at any rate from the Himalayas to Cape Comorin. We have heard all sorts of suggestions and all sorts of grievances which are mostly what are called hardy annuals. There is agriculture, there is education, there is sanitation, and all the rest of the compass. But, my Lord, I do not mind all these suggestions and grievances that have been put forward. Now that we have changed our rules, it is only right to see that every Member of this Council has the privilege of bringing before your Excellency and this Council his own grievances. It is a miniature House of Commons now, I suppose. That is to say, grievances are heard before supplies. I do not know whether my Hon'ble friend, Sir George Lowndes, will say yes to it, but at least I consider we have a mimicry of it.

"But apart from these and other little matters, I may say, my Lord, that I do associate myself, as far as Commerce and Industry are concerned, with most of what has fallen from the Hon'ble Mr. Malcolm Hogg and from the Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy. I agree generally with them in many respects; but I am sorry to say that I cannot agree with what has fallen from the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma. He said that surpluses are induced by simple under-estimates of revenue. The Hon'ble Mr. Sarma forgets that the surpluses are more or less due to railway finance. If he only studies the surpluses that have been yielded by railways since 1904-05, he will see that they are no doubt in an ascending ratio. He should know that from the date of the construction of the railways up till that time, namely, 1904, most of the railways were a losing investment as far as the State was concerned. I remember, your Lordship, when giving my evidence before the Welby Commission that I had brought to their notice this particular fact of the loss of the railways. From 1848 they were losing at the rate of one crore per annum, but it was owing, of course, probably to the guaranteed system of railways that the Government lost a great deal, but there was no help for it. These guaranteed railways were formed at a time when there was an absolute absence of any sort of private enterprise in India. So that these surpluses are not entirely owing to an under-estimate of revenue. I admit that in all great countries and great States, however capable their Finance Minister may be, there is always a little under-estimate of revenue and a little over-estimate of expenditure. I have to discuss these points of under and over-estimates almost every year before my Municipal Corporation, but I believe it is the case everywhere. Whether it is the Provincial Government or whether it is the Local Government, or whether it is the Imperial Government, or whether it is the United States of America, France or Great Britain, it is all the same over and over again. Of course, if the under-estimates are such that when the next year's actual accounts are before us we find there is a great difference and a large percentage of increase in the surplus, surely we can trace the cause. This point also I brought before the Welby Commission in my evidence, and I put down in parallel columns what was the budget, what was the revised estimate, and what was the actual account; and, I think, I convinced Lord Welby and his colleagues at the time that there was a good deal of under-estimating. I, however, do not think that since those days there has been the same under-estimating, as has been attributed to the Government by the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma. But I will not say anything more on this point since I have very little time, and the clock, like the finger of fate, points onward fast to 5 o'clock. I must finish soon my little harangue.

"Then, the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma spoke next about Treasury bills. No doubt Treasury bills are a form of raising loans; but if the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma thinks that these Treasury bills can achieve miracles for the Finance Minister I say he is greatly mistaken. It is true that Treasury bills are another form of raising loans, but if he means to say that taxation is saved by means of Treasury bills he is entirely wrong; for even Treasury bills have to pay interest, and whether you pay interest in the form of loans or Treasury bills it is all the same. If you incur loans you have to pay interest on them. If you do not pay interest, and if the Finance Minister finds himself in this box, that he has to raise taxation, he must impose it. Interest charged to revenue is only another form of taxation. Therefore, that argument will not hold water.

"Thirdly, he spoke of currency. I am sorry to say that here the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma is altogether on ground where it is very dangerous to tread, particularly for gentlemen who have not had the benefit of a commercial or industrial career. The mechanism of exchange is, of course, intimately associated with imports and exports; but the statics and dynamics of imports and exports have to be very well understood, and I should advise the Hon'ble Member to read Sir Robert Giffen's book on Imports and Exports and the balance of trade and exchange in order that he may speak with greater authority next time he rises in this Council to criticise the budget. He also seems to forget that it is not only this sea-borne export trade of India that requires to be financed. He forgets that there is something like 800 crores of inland trade which has also to be financed; and that trade values during the last two years have been greatly enhanced, no doubt, by the prevalence of dearer prices, freight, etc.

"Then lastly, both the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma and the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri have referred to the inflation of currency. No doubt when a currency is inflated, it is a great evil. The purchasing power of money then tends to be less or considerably diminished and prices rise. The question is whether the Finance Minister, in expanding the currency for the last two years to a very large extent, has really inflated currency to such a degree that prices have risen partially on that account? That is a great controversial question on which I will not enter; but I take it that when the Finance Minister rises to give his reply, he will have sufficient to say on this very difficult question.

"Having said so much as to the discussion that has gone forward among different Hon'ble Members I now, my Lord, come to one or two other points If Members of this Council rise one after the other and ask that the grant for education should be increased, that the grant for sanitation should be increased, that the grant for agriculture should be increased, surely it should make the Government pause and think whether they could meet their wishes. It is true that those grants are being annually increased, but they are not being increased in the proportion that we should like to see. But the whole question as to getting additional grants beyond those budgetted is circumscribed by the revenue which the Finance Minister is able to raise by taxation and by other means. Expenditure is limited by income. That is the whole point. I remember, my Lord, that whenever there is a little big surplus in the Municipal Corporation, of which I am a member, member after member rises and says this must be done and that must be done. If you add up all the different grants they want, they will run into lakhs on lakhs, whereas the municipal revenue is only 1½ crore. The same is the case here. Government cannot shake the pagoda-tree, and pick up ad libitum golden coins or shining rupees whenever they want. Government has laboriously to devise ways and means to raise every rupee, India being a poor country. All these considerations have to be taken into account before any valid or sound criticism can be made on the budget. But I say this much, my Lord, that as far as loans are concerned I would put it to the Finance Minister and to other Members of the Council whether the railway surplus which is now being realised can be utilised for revenue purposes after the war. I do not think so. At present there are considerable debits and credits They are crediting railways and debiting military accounts, for all these things that are being passed from one end of the country to the other. The normal coaching and goods receipts will not be swelled after the war. But I do say that, supposing on an average in future, when the war is over you have a surplus under railways to the extent of 5, 6 or 7 crores, the question which will be raised is this: whether that surplus ought to be entirely utilised for ordinary revenue purposes during the following year as has been the present practice, or whether that surplus should not be ear-marked to diminish the amount of the loan you annually require for railway purposes. If you annually require 10 crores and if you have a surplus of 7 crores, why not take 7 crores as your capital? Then, of course, you will only have to raise 3 crores more; besides, you save the interest on 7 crores. I remember having a talk at one time on this subject with my Hon'ble friend the Finance Minister, and he said that after all it is a surplus which reverts to the State after having paid all railway expenses. That is very true; but what do we do in our commercial transactions? When cotton or jute mill or other factories pay dividend, they set apart a certain amount of money for extensions and developments and to that extent pro tanto the loan to be raised is less. Why should not this business principle on which all mercantile firms, all cotton and jute mills and the like systematically set apart a reserve out of their profits be adopted in our budget? I am open to reason, and I hope, my Lord, that when the Finance Member rises to reply he may be able to satisfactorily answer this question. Then, my Lord, as to the railway fares to which Mr. Sastri referred. Perhaps, the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri does not know that before they were increased, railway fares in India were considered to be the cheapest in all the world, cheaper than America Mr. Priestley, who was some years ago asked by the Government of India to go to America and make a report on the different systems of railway administration, stated it to be so. I do not know what the position may be to-day, but seven or eight years ago when Mr. Priestley reported he said the railway fares for passengers in India were the cheapest of all If, therefore, for purposes of War, Government is obliged to tax the rich as well as the poor, I do not see why the poor should not pay their share according to their ability. We admit the cost of living has gone up, house-rent has greatly risen, and so on; but if we are to make sacrifices, the poor man must make sacrifices as well as the rich. The rich will of course pay more, but the poor cannot entirely escape. And this increased railway fare is a kind of indirect taxation. Apart from that, Hon'ble Members. I presume, have been reading the railway report each year. What do they find there? Third-class passengers contribute the bulk of the coaching revenue, and on an average they travel once a year and that to the extent of 37 miles. If 37 miles was, say, a pie before and if two pies are levied now, you can compute what is the amount that the poor man has to pay per mile over and above the former fare? That is to say, if he travels at all. That also has to be taken into consideration.

"Then, my Lord, I come on to another question. Much has been said about education and sanitation. I submit, my Lord, that the Government ought to do more after the war by way of education. I think that goes without saying. Government has declared its policy, and there is not the slightest doubt that education and sanitation will be greatly stimulated when better times dawn. But there is one little question I have to ask the Government. Here you are every year increasing your excise revenue. Excise revenue has gone up now to nearly 13 crores It may go up to 14 crores If you calculate this excise revenue per head of the population of British India, you will find that it comes to 8 annas per head. What are you spending on education per head to-day, even according to the new budget?

"If you divide it again by the population (the population of 1911), you will find that they are only paying two annas. So, while you are making people insober by your excise policy and take a heavy tax of 13 crores from them for your drink traffic, you have not the generosity to repay to them to a larger extent than two annas per unit for education! That is not right. If you take eight annas per year from the pockets of the poor, try to put it back in another form in their pockets, that is to say, as productive expenditure, and whatever you spend on education is a productive expenditure; and whatever may in consequence go to diminish thereby the excise revenue will be a great gain, because the more people are educated I am certain that more sobriety will prevail among them, and the mischievous policy of maximum of revenue and minimum of consumption will be knocked on the head, if not to-day, 25 years hence. Having said so much on some of the points of the budget, I will say one thing more and that is in reference to the civil charges Before, however, I come to the civil charges, I will say one thing more. If the total net revenue and expenditure according to the Parliamentary returns are examined, it will be found that in the last ten years ending 1915-16, revenue on an average has increased at the ratio of 14 per cent., while expenditure has increased at the ratio of 20 per cent. Here is the cloven hoof. If expenditure is increasing and if you do not perceive it, what is the reason? I say you do not perceive it because your railway surpluses are so large that they partially absorb a large portion of the expenditure and still put in the pocket of the Finance Minister a very fat surplus. That is the reason. That is not a sound policy in finance, and I do hope, my Lord, that the successor of Sir William Meyer will certainly bear this point in mind. It is a very important point.

"Civil charges also are increasing to a very large extent, if the ratio of the revenue yielded is compared with the ratio of the civil charges. But unfortunately, the case is this, that in India we have not got the full and efficient machinery to control expenditure and to audit it as it is audited in England. Hon'ble gentlemen who have studied the British budget as I have been doing for years together, will see that there is a memorandum for improving the audit by the Controller of Public Accounts. The audit has gone on for 60 years past or rather 50 years, from 1866. They have a Controller of Public Accounts; there is also a Standing Committee of Parliament, and between them they are taking the greatest care that expenditure is not increased faster than is right and proper, and that the grants are kept well in hand. I do not know how far the machinery here is complete. The Welby Commission did examine this question of machinery, but I do not think they came to any satisfactory conclusion on it. But I do say this, that if in future, even if self-government is conferred and if responsible government is attained, and we are in the place of those who are now sitting on the front benches, then I do say that the first thing that we should do is to have a Controller of Public Accounts and a Standing Committee of Council which would most vigilantly control expenditure Now, my Lord, the Financial Statement that we are discussing to-day has been pronounced in some quarters as neither brilliant nor booming, that it is a humdrum budget Brilliant it might have been, I think, if the author of the budget had only taken care to invest it with a blaze of glory all his own; and possibly it might have been booming, too, if he had heralded it with salvoes of artillery such as those we heard this morning and drums beating and colours flying. In that case I suppose they will be quite satisfied. But because of the modesty of the Finance Minister who has brought forward his budget in a simple and unadorned style without any sensation, that there is this sort of ignorant, or hostile or prejudiced criticism, forgetting the matter of the thing which is so important. I believe, my Lord, that it is the most phenomenal budget that I have ever known, and I have been a student of Indian finance for the last fifty years, from 1868 I have studied every budget from that date up to this, and I can say with a clear conscience, and nobody will say that Wacha was, of course, indulging in rose water and kisses—I am doing nothing of the kind—it is my genuine appreciation of Sir William Meyer's financial statemanship that I do say this I do not know of a single Finance Minister, even Mr. James Wilson, who having regard to our financial needs in his time (1860) had ever such a difficult task as Sir William Meyer has had for the last three years. It is unprecedented. There have been very many able Finance Ministers in the past, Mr James Wilson, Mr. Laing, the great Treasury man who has left to us a classic phrase in regard to budgets—that 'India is the milch cow of England.' That is the way, of course, in which Mr. Laing is remembered in India. There was Sir Charles Trevelyan, a great friend of India, who because of his opposition to the fresh income-tax of 1860, was re-called. Then there have been Civilian Finance Ministers of great ability, like Sir John Strachey, Sir Auckland Colvin, and Sir David Barbour; but, as far as Indian finance is concerned, none of these in their respective times had to overcome the difficulties of ways and means as Sir William Meyer. I would at this stage point out that Indian finance has passed through three phases. If you take the first period between 1860 and 1880 what do you find? The revenue was small and the sources of revenue were almost inelastic; hardly 40 or 50 crores were raised and at that time public works were famished; there was no such thing as irrigation works, and railways were in their infancy. There was the fight among railway engineers for the gauges, one side saying the standard gauge is the best and the other side saying the metre gauge is the best as being so cheap; and between them a battle royal was fought. At that time, what was the condition of the railways? Any Member of the Council, who goes through a Railway Administration Report, will find that you did not then go beyond 8,000 miles. That was the condition. There were deficits after deficits, and Sir John Lawrence often used to be vexed on that account. It was for the very reason why when provincial governors like Sir Bartle Frere tried to outrun the constable he put a very big foot down on their extravagance; there was no decentralisation, and the Government of India had to sit tight on every pie of the whole country's expenditure. Those days rolled away. Lord Ripon came in 1880 and with him came a very brilliant Finance Minister in the person of the late Earl Cromer (then Sir Evelyn Baring) who regenerated Egypt during his 24 years of brilliant administration as High Commissioner. He was a free trader and so was Sir Evelyn Baring and they thought the best thing they could do was to give India free trade, that free trade by which I fully believe India has prospered. My friend on the opposite side, Mr. S. N. Banerjea, says that we are now all protectionists in India. I may say emphatically that I am a convinced free trader, and I do say that free trade alone from 1880 till 1896 had done the greatest good to India; all the larger prosperity of so many of our cotton mills and the larger jute mills and other factories that have been established in India since 1880 are entirely owing to free trade. Without free trade even to-day despite what protectionists might think, I will unhesitatingly say this: India even to-day is not able to make one single engine of 10 horse power. It cannot make a single boiler; for every little wheel and accessory of all kinds of machinery you have to go to England or to Lancashire. When will India do it? To say that India will be able to make these when she has protection is simply a delusion. Even protection will not do it. It will be by India's own industry, steady perseverance, skill, her greater scientific intelligence and enterprise that she would materially prosper, tariff or no tariffs. Therefore, I do say, my Lord, that the greatest good that Lord Ripon's Government did to India was to give it free trade which brought out all the prosperity which is still growing. Then in 1885 came a political factor which brought difficulties of finance. One should know that policy and expenditure go together in every State. There can be no expenditure without policy, and there can be no policy without expenditure. Each acts and re-acts on the other. There was first the Penjdeh incident whereby the funds of the Provincial Governments were, of course, raided by the Government of Lord Dufferin to the extent of 3 crores. Then came the Burma expedition which cost a large sum of money and for some time the revenues were in a very precarious state necessitating new and enhanced taxation in 1886-87. Then at the same time there was the 'precariousness' of the opium revenue. Opium was the deux ex machina of those days, from 1860 until it was abolished by the Anglo-Chinese treaty. At present the deux ex machina is the railway surplus as opium was in former days. That makes deficits and surpluses. If you exclude the railway surplus from your general revenues, what do you find? Instead of having for the last ten years a net surplus of £9 million, you will discover a net deficit of over £6½ million . . . ."

[Sir Dinshaw Wacha; His Excellency the President.] [8TH MARCH, 1918.]

His Excellency the President:—"The Hon'ble Member has been speaking for 24 minutes."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha:—"Yes. Well, my Lord, I thank you for reminding me."

His Excellency the President:—"Now, perhaps, the Hon'ble Member will finish his speech."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha:—"I will conclude my speech. And, therefore, what I do say is this, that as far as the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer is concerned, he has been really the greatest Finance Minister of the day. It may be said, my Lord, that his budget is a solid budget. It is instinct with financial sagacity and statesmanship. The present budget, specially the 'Retrospect,' will be a light and guide to his successor, and in that way Sir William may be called, in the firmament of Indian finance, the Star of Arcady, that star which in olden times used to guide and light the way of the pioneers of maritime navigation. I mean those sturdy Phœnician mariners who ploughed the Mediterranean, crossed the Gates of Hercules and reached the Cassiterides, in the south of Cornwall, for tin. Well, Sir William Meyer in this sense is really the Star of Arcady. He is leaving to his successor his Retrospect which will serve as a guide and a light which will enable him to shape safely his course of the future of Indian finance. Sir William has steered his financial bark through the dangerous Scylla and Charybdis with the greatest skill, and has brought her to a haven of rest. Let him now rest on his oars. This is the last time that we shall perhaps see Sir William Meyer officially as Finance Minister, and I also cordially congratulate him as my other friends have congratulated him already. In conclusion, all I would say is this: 'Sir William Meyer, thou hast deserved well of India.' With these few words I take my seat."

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya:—"My Lord, the general discussion of the Financial Statement has taken place to-day under the new rule which has been introduced for the purpose. I feel thankful with my Hon'ble colleagues for this change. It is an advantage to have an opportunity of saying what one has to say about the Financial Statement at this stage. But I wish, my Lord, also to say that, in view of the very limited opportunities that are available to Members of this Council to ventilate questions of general importance which cannot be embodied in Resolutions, it is desirable that the one day that we used to have for general discussion, I mean the final day, ought to be still open to us for such discussion. I know, my Lord, that it led sometimes to a great deal of weariness, but we also know that there were opportunities given by it to Members to bring to the notice of Government matters of public interest which cannot conveniently be embodied in Resolutions. But, however, that may be, I hope that, as a result of this earlier discussion of the Financial Statement, some at least of the suggestions which have been made will be found acceptable by the Hon'ble the Finance Member. 4-23 P.M.

"The budget is undoubtedly a War Budget; war is writ large upon it from beginning to end. It is a budget which proves more than anything how closely India and the people of India have been identified with England in the mighty struggle in which she has been engaged during the last three years and more. It is a budget which is framed, as far as was possible to do so, from the point of view of helping England so far as India can help her in carrying on this great war. That explains both the insertion of many provisions and the omission of certain provisions, the omission of which has been a matter of complaint. It is accepted, my Lord, as a War Budget. If a budget like the present one were introduced in ordinary times, there would have been a great outcry throughout the country. 29 millions sterling to be spent on the army, with an apprehension that more will have to be provided in the future, and so very little provided for those beneficial services which go to increase the social well-being of the people. But, as I have said, we acquiesce in the budget, because it is a War Budget, because we recognise that we have identified ourselves with the cause for which England is fighting, and we have done so because we felt that it was our duty to do so. I hope, my Lord, that this fact will receive full weight in considering what constitutional reforms should be introduced in the government of the country. I do not mention this as a matter of bargain. Far be it from me to do so, but I hope that it will be remembered that out of the little that she had India sacrificed a great deal in a large hearted way and identified herself with England in the struggle for freedom and the independence of nations in which she has been engaged.

"There are some features of the budget, however, to which attention might be drawn, not in a carping spirit, but because they merit attention. In the first place, I wish to join with my friends who have complained that there has frequently been an under-estimate of income in our budgets. This complaint is not confined to the budgets of the last two years as one of my Hon'ble friends seemed to think. It has been a chronic complaint for the last two decades. The late Mr. Gokhale complained of it in 1906-07, and on other occasions other Members too have complained of it. Sir Vithaldas Thakersey complained of it when silver legislation was introduced. The Hon'ble Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola, whose appointment as a Member of the Executive Council of the Governor of Bombay we have all welcomed, and whom we very much miss in this Council—speaking in 1916 on the question of the increases in the Income-tax and the Salt-tax, said :—

> 'Looking at it, as a whole, it appears to me that the salt-tax has been levied, as I have already contended, to make up the deficiency in the Tariff Bill due to the exemption of cotton piece-goods from the necessary increase of 2½ per cent. I now contend that the increased income-tax which represents a revenue of £900,000 is to provide Government with a surplus which is estimated at a million pounds.'

As I have said, my Lord, in past years Mr. Gokhale complained that the surpluses of the years preceding 1904 were brought about by a systematic under-estimating of revenue and over-estimating of expenditure. This complaint was also noted by the Chamberlain Commission on Indian Finance and Currency. Sir James Meston was questioned about it. The Chairman of the Commission put the following question to him :—'But looking back on those years with the wisdom which comes from experience would you think it unfair to say that the Government did err a little on the side of excessive caution in their financial estimates,' and Sir James Meston said in reply: 'I must admit they did.' In another place he said : 'The under-estimate was simply a matter of, as you have said, probably exaggerated caution.'

"Now, my Lord, these systematic under-estimates have led to certain surpluses, and the evil of it has been that the existence of the surpluses has deluded the people into the wrong notion that India is prosperous. These surpluses have brought upon us greater burdens than perhaps would have fallen upon us if the fact were realised how these surpluses had occurred. As regards this year's surplus, my friend the Hon'ble the Finance Member budgetted for a surplus of £136,000 only. The actual surplus is 5·8 million. This has been brought about by the inclusion of an additional income of £3·5 million from railway revenue. This increase has partly occurred owing to an enhancement of railway rates and fares. I note the Hon'ble the Finance Member has, perhaps, deliberately not said anything about it, though of course he has included the additional revenue in his estimates. But I submit that this is quite objectionable. Provision had been fully made in the budget of last year for the expenditure on war by the taxation which had been imposed and by other means. This increase of railway fares was not brought about, as my friend Sir Dinshaw Wacha seems wrongly to have thought, for purposes of the war. The Railway Board say, at page 24 of their last Administration Report, that at a meeting at which the question of reduction in train service was considered 'it was agreed as a general principle that fares on fast trains should be enhanced up to the existing maximum in order to discourage travelling with a view to avoiding undue overcrowding in passenger trains consequent on the reduction in train services.' The Report goes on to say that as the result of another meeting instead of confining themselves to increasing fares on fast trains, they decided that there should be 'a general enhancement of fares.' They, therefore, decided that on the principal broad gauge lines the third-class fare should be advanced to the existing maximum, and on others, where the ordinary fare had been only 2-3rds of the maximum, that it should be advanced by 25 per cent. Now I submit, my Lord, that these fares having been increased, in order to discourage travelling, the matter should be re-examined by the Government, and if it is found that it was really unnecessary to adopt this method to discourage travelling, then fares should not be charged at the enhanced rates next year. It was sufficient, my Lord, to discourage travelling that there was a curtailment of trains. People could only travel by the trains that were running. Secondly, if there was an apprehension that more men might go to the station platform than could be admitted, instructions could be issued not to sell tickets to them ; but I submit it was not necessary, nor justifiable, that such an enhancement should have been made in the fares.

" The principle, my Lord, of determining fares has long been established, that a profit should not be made on railways. It has been laid down in some countries in the legislation relating to railways. Belgium, for instance, is one of the countries which has managed its railways best. While we have invested nearly 400 millions on our railways, and have only recently begun to earn a small interest on it, as Mr. Carl Vrooman points out in his book, ' every dollar which Belgium has invested in its State railways, whether for purposes of construction, or for making up of the deficits of the lean years, has been paid, together with the market rate of interest, from the profits of the fat years.' There they lay down as a law that all idea of running railways for a profit must be completely eliminated. And our Government, too, have recognised for the last many years from 1869-70, when the Government started State Railways, that it was with a view to keeping down fares; and Major Conway Gordon, a former Director-General of Indian State Railways, in his evidence before the Select Committee of 1884 rightly said that ' every rupee taken out of the country by an English Company in excess of the normal rate of interest on the State debt constitutes practically a direct tax on transit, which must, of course, have its effect on checking the export and import trade and on the general development of the country.'

" According to this principle, whether railways are worked by Companies or by the State, the fares levied from passengers should cover the working expenses, the interest charges on the capital outlay and a provision for the sinking fund. But the earnings from these railways have been increased lately. I do not complain that they have been ; I do not suggest that they should be reduced to the extent that would be suggested by that principle enunciated by Major Conway Gordon, and I submit that there was no justification for the enhancements that were made last year.

" The analyses of working given in the last Railway Administration Report show that it is the third-class passenger who contributes profits to the Railways. So far as profits are concerned, the first-class and second-class passengers need not exist. Let us take the East Indian Railway. The average earning per coaching vehicle per mile on that Railway during the two halves of 1916-17 were :—

1st class	14·92 and 18 62 pies.
2nd class	13·87 and 17·59 „
Inter class	21·75 and 23·49 „
3rd class	50·54 and 53·89 „

While the average cost of hauling a coaching vehicle with its load one mile or all classes during the same half-year was 9·94 and 10·94 pies, respectively, giving an average profit per coach per mile as under :—

	1st half.	2nd half.
1st class	4·98	7·63 pies.
2nd class	3·93	6·65 „
Inter class	11·81	12·55 „
3rd class	40·60	42·95 „

" Let us take another Railway, the Great Indian Peninsula. The average profits on the same basis were :—

	1st half.	2nd half.
1st class	—9·48	—5·35
2nd class	18·32	16·64
Inter class	13·88	16·89
3rd class	22·41	24·57

" There was, therefore, no justification for enhancing the passenger fares, but rather for reducing them The budget will not be upset by the Government accepting the view that these enhancements should be withdrawn during the next year in justice to the great body of people who contribute these profits, because, after making a provision of 29 millions for Military expenditure, there is still a large surplus in the hands of the Government, and the total amount provided for the Army includes £1,677,000 as a reserve to meet unforeseen charges. With that very liberal provision for Military expenses there is no danger of any interest suffering if the proposal is accepted.

"There are, my Lord, some other unsatisfactory features of the budget, which call for a remark. One of these is the increase in revenue from salt. £1½ million has come from increased salt revenue. I endorse all that my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sastri has said on this subject, and I submit, as Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola pointed out two years ago, and, as events have shown, that the increase in the salt tax was not justifiable. It should be still considered whether it would not be right to reduce it.

"Among other unsatisfactory features of the budget are the growth of the excise revenue, to which attention has already been drawn by more than one Member, and the scanty provision for education. Only 30 lakhs has been provided for primary education. For continuing the building up of Delhi 40 lakhs has been provided. I should like to know why this sum of 40 lakhs should not be added to the provision for primary education. I fear that in the matter of education the Government do not show that they realise the importance of education to the extent that they should. I submit that the provision for education ought to be regarded as a provision for war, necessary to prepare the people to do their duty by their King and their country. Among others the Japanese have recognised the value of education in the conflict of nations. I find they are already taking note of the progress in other countries, in belligerent countries of the condition of education. Authorities there are closely following the educational progress of the world and distributing at their own cost in Japanese a description of the state of education in the belligerent nations of the world. It should hardly be necessary to remind the Council, and least of all my friend the Finance Member, of the important truth which Sir Norman Lockyer sought many years ago to emphasise that brain power is the most essential power even in matters of war. We must regretfully recognise that even after this devastating war we shall not be approaching a millenium, and the more the people are educated the better will they be prepared to understand and discharge their duties and responsibilities, the better will they be able to promote the national income, which after all is the source from which they can help Government at a time of crisis. I submit, therefore, that the importance of education should be properly recognised even during war time, and there should be better provision made for it particuarly as there is a large surplus in the hands of Government. The provision of 30 lakhs of rupees seems to be utterly inadequate for the requirements of the situation. I hope that if the Hon'ble the Finance Member will not accept my suggestions with regard to reducing revenue he will, at any rate, accept the suggestion that the provision for education should be increased.

"The growth of civil expenditure, to which my friend Sir Dinshaw Wacha has drawn attention, as well as the growth of Military expenditure, are matters which require attention. I know that this is not the time when the Government can take up this question, but I submit, my Lord, that the importance of the subject demands that when constitutional reforms are introduced there should be Committees appointed to go thoroughly into both Civil as well as Military expenditure.

"As my friend has shown, Civil expenditure has grown enormously, and there is no question that Military expenditure also has grown enormously. I do not for a moment suggest that the Military needs of the country should not be fully met, but there is a very widespread feeling that there is much room for retrenchment. In the report of the Mesopotamia Commission I find it said :—

'We also gather that there is general dissatisfaction with the system of microscopic financial control exercised over details of Military expenditure, pay and allowances.'

[8TH MARCH, 1918.] [Pandit M. M. Malaviya.]

"I submit that this is a matter which it is desirable the Government should look into at the end of the war when the reforms are introduced.

" My Lord, in the matter of investments I must say that I fail to understand the wisdom of the investment that is suggested in Home Treasury Bills. I read at page 70, with regard to the probable expansion of the Railway programme, as follows :—

'Lastly, when peace conditions permit the resumption of the Railway Capital Programme on a scale necessary to provide adequately for requirements – and this will involve making up a lot of lee-way in respect of the compulsory cutting down of that programme during the war—we shall probably find some difficulty in raising, on reasonable terms, the amount of capital which would be required. We propose, therefore, as against our temporary borrowings on Treasury Bills here, and in view of the satisfactory financial position of India as a whole, to invest £20 millions in Home Treasury Bills in order to provide for the liabilities which in one way or another will come upon us shortly after the war is over.'

"I submit, my Lord, that that is looking too far ahead. The Hon'ble the Finance Member says :—' we shall probably find some difficulty in raising, on reasonable terms, the amount of capital which would be required.' If there is no difficulty in raising that capital now there should be less difficulty in raising it after the war is over. Secondly, as one of my Hon'ble friends has already remarked, to raise money at 5 per cent. and to invest it at 3·5 seems to require a little further explanation. The Hon'ble the Finance Member proposes to make this provision for a liability which, he says, will come upon us after the war. We do not know when the war will be over—we all pray that it should soon be over—but as we do not know when that will be, I submit that the justification for this proposal is not quite clear.

" With regard to the question of railway fares, if I may go back to it for a moment, I should have pointed out that, when the Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha said that the railway fares were cheapest in India, he forgot that the people of India are the poorest in the world. When you compare the fares which they pay per mile here with those paid in England and America, you must also compare the incomes of the people of India with the incomes of the people in England and America ; and, comparing them it will be found that the people of India are not having railway facilities afforded to them on the cheapest terms.

" As regards the War Loan, I will simply add one word to what has been said about it. When an effort is made this year to raise a War Loan, I hope instructions will be issued to prevent any overzeal being shown by subordinates. The Government have seen how well the people have responded already, and therefore there is all the more reason why a factor, which has given rise to complaints, should be entirely eliminated from the new year's operations. I hope that the Hon'ble the Finance Member will issue instructions on this point.

" As regards the restrictions on the issue of capital, I may say that I am in entire agreement with my Hon'ble friends over there as to there being no need for it. Up to this time the needs of the Government have been met and the money which the Government wanted has been found. The expenditure has been balanced by revenue, and there is a surplus. Is there, then, any justification for placing any restrictions on the issue of capital at this stage? If, however, this proposal must be carried out, then I submit two points ought to be borne in mind by Government. Foreign companies must not be placed in a position of advantage over Indian companies. It should not be that while Indian companies find difficulties placed in their way foreign companies should be free to start work in this country with capital raised in other countries, and to flood this country with their goods. Secondly, my Lord, I think a Board should be appointed to deal will all applications which may be made for the floating of new companies, and on such a Board the Government should see that half the number of members are Indians and half Europeans. This is essential in order to create confidence in the minds of Indians who are concerned in business and who are anxious to promote the industries of the country......".

[His Excellency the President; Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya; Sir George Lowndes; Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi, of Kasimbazar.] [8TH MARCH, 1918.]

His Excellency the President.—"The Hon'ble Member has exceeded the time allowed to him."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"I will not take up any more time, my Lord."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"My Lord, I am only drawn into this almost interminable discussion by certain remarks that fell from the Hon'ble Pandit at the commencement of his speech. The Hon'ble Member referred to the change which has taken place in the procedure of the Council on this budget discussion, a change which was made, I believe, in consequence of the desires of Hon'ble Members of this Council which were very frankly expressed. The Hon'ble Pandit, however, said that he hoped that your Excellency would be able to allot to the Council another day for what I may call the annual hare hunt which we used to have on matters which, as the Hon'ble Pandit admitted, could not be dealt with in Resolutions and had no reference to the Financial Statement. Now no one in the Council knows better than my Hon'ble friend that we are governed here by the terms of a Parliamentary Statute which allows us to discuss three types of things only. In the first place, we can discuss motions on Bills or having reference to the Rules. In the second place, we can discuss the Financial Statement In the third place, we can have Resolutions on matters of public interest. There is nothing in the Act of Parliament by which we are governed which will allow us, even if your Excellency was willing to permit it, to have what I may call the hare hunt that we have always had in former years, which is neither with reference to a Resolution nor a discussion of the Financial Statement nor a motion on any Bill or Rule."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandy, of Kasimbazar:—"My Lord, I feel no hesitation in congratulating Sir William Meyer on the very good luck and circumstance that have attended the Government in the most eventful years of storm and stress that have followed the outbreak of the present European War. Sir William Meyer has no doubt opened in Indian history a bold era of financial experiments, and, in his efforts to strengthen 'the walls and foundations of our financial structure,' he has received the unstinted support both of Providence and man. With bountiful monsoons and golden harvests on the one side and money pouring in unexpectedly for the War Loan, the treasury bills and post office certificates on the other, Sir William Meyer has had not much anxious time to meet the financial liabilities of the Government, and has even succeeded in laying by something for the rainy day.

"But while I congratulate Sir William Meyer—as one of the best financial Ministers—I must say that the Financial Statement which he presented to this Council just a week ago cannot be pronounced to be a very satisfactory and pleasing State document. It is evident, from the revised accounts, that Sir William Meyer's budget of 1917-18 contained under-estimate of the revenues of India. Almost every important head of our revenue, excepting opium, has yielded larger revenue in the present year than Sir William Meyer budgetted for in last March. Excise, customs, salt, income-tax, post and telegraphs and exchange have all exceeded the budgetted figures of Sir William Meyer, the greatest surprise being the railway earnings which come to nearly six million pounds sterling or close upon nine crores of rupees or nearly double of Sir William Meyer's budgetted estimate. Though I fully appreciate the difficulty of forming accurate estimates of our revenue at such an uncertain period of our finances, I cannot quite exonerate our Finance Member from the evil consequences of an under-estimated budget. I feel in my heart of hearts that this under-estimate of the revenues of India in the budget of 1917-18 necessitated an additional burden on the Indian tax-payer, and if this tendency of an under-estimate had not overtaken the Financial Department of the Government of India, there would have been no new imposts last year, no panic for fresh taxation this year, and perhaps more money would have flowed into the Imperial Exchequer in the shape of contributions to the War Loan.

" My Lord, following the line of argument I have been trying to develop in the above observations, I feel bound to characterise Sir William Meyer's financial disbursements for the coming year as equally disappointing With an unexpectedly large surplus in hand and budgetting for another year of a not inconsiderable surplus, it is neither very generous nor graceful for a Finance Minister to stand where Sir William Meyer does. Sir William Meyer does not think it proper, under the circumstance, to add to our burdens nor does he see his way to reduce the existing level of taxation. Perhaps that is, after all, a very safe and wise policy to adopt. But what strikes me as the most disappointing feature of Sir William Meyer's financial policy is that he stints to use his huge surplus for the betterment of the condition of the people who have so very largely contributed to it. Of course, nobody would like Sir William Meyer, at a time like this, to embark on any ambitious scheme of social or industrial improvement which might involve either heavy financial outlay or large recurring grants: but it is difficult to see why a very large portion of his surplus could not be spared for either the cause of primary education or sanitation—so essential to the amenities of civilised life.

" My Lord, the question of a surplus leads me to offer another criticism. It transpires from the figures which find place in Sir William Meyer's Financial Statement that practically the whole of the present year's surplus has been contributed by the Indian railways. My Lord, I quite remember the time when eminent Indian publicists used to question the wisdom of pushing railways in this country as a State venture and also protested against its expansion at the neglect of irrigation. My Lord, the railway policy of the Government of India has proved most beneficent to us, and there is perhaps no one in this Council who, far from challenging the wisdom of that policy, would not care to justify and bless it now. Most unfortunately, this very important source of our revenue is now being neglected, and the Government is unable to find for the Indian railways even a third of the money which Lord Inchcape's Committee recommended only a few years back as absolutely necessary for their development. It is somewhat consoling to notice, however, that the Government have already been able to invest £20 millions in British treasury bills which, after the war they intend to spend for railway development in India That may make up for the lee-way that has been lost during the last few years. But I do not find any valid reason why the Government should not cultivate the Indian market to obtain greater assistance from indigenous capital towards reproductive outlay on our railways. Sometime in the near future, when the war is over, an attempt ought to be made by the Government to raise a rupee loan for the purpose of expanding our system of railways.

"My Lord, speaking of our railways, I cannot omit to urge on the attention of the Government the great need of nationalising them or bringing them absolutely and invariably under State control. The question of the nationalisation of our railways, my Lord, is more a financial and economic problem than a question of general policy, and I make bold to say that as soon as this policy is adopted, it will popularise our railways in such a fashion that the difficulty of raising capital for them will never arise. Sir William Meyer has taken many bold financial steps in the last few years ; may I appeal to him to recommend to the Government of India the nationalisation of our railways as another step which will carry his name down to posterity ?

" My Lord, the establishment of a ship-building branch of the Admiralty in India and the decision of the Government to get 3,000 railway wagons built annually in this country for a period of ten years from now unmistakably indicate the final abandonment of the policy of laissez faire, against which your

[Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi, of Kasimbazar; Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru.] [8TH MARCH, 1918.]

Excellency made such a notable pronouncement a few months ago in Madras. I have no doubt that, with the full and frank abandonment of this economic doctrine and the adoption of an active and energetic policy of industrial and agricultural development, the revenues of India will exceed at one time the wildest dream of any Finance Minister of to-day. I hope the Government will take time by the forelock and move ahead with a quickened pace towards the realisation of this ideal.

"I am sorry, my Lord, the condition and circumstances of the present titanic struggle have upset the price of silver, which has risen from 37*d.* to 43*d.* per ounce, and disturbed, in spite of the gold currency reserve, our whole system of exchange, and necessitated many legislations to readjust our paper and metallic currency. I hope, however, that the credit of the Government of India is so well established now that an increased paper currency, even without a sufficient metallic backing, has come to stay as a great relief and support of India's financial position. Yet, I think, it would be a wise economic policy for the Government to keep and invest in India the bulk of the gold and paper currency reserves which the Secretary of State for India now holds in England.

"My Lord, I have nearly finished: I have one more word to add. Before the commencement of the titanic world-conflict which is now shaking to its very foundation the civilisation of the West, India paid a bill of a little over £20 millions for her army, marine, military works and special defences. To-day, our total military bill comes to the neighbourhood of £31 millions, thanks to the war. This amount is several times over what all India pays to-day for the education of her children. My Lord, so long as the war lasts, we will do our very best to help England and her Allies with our men and money. England's cause is our own and with England, my Lord, we will sink or swim. Our contributions to the war so far have neither been mean nor hesitating; we have ever been and shall always be ready at the beck and call of the Empire. Indian troops have bled themselves white in the various theatres of the war in East and West; we have paid so far nearly 65 million pounds directly towards the expenses of the war, besides the very large amount voluntarily contributed by us towards special purposes, equipments or comforts for the troops and the heavy military bill of the Government. May we not expect that, when the war is over and the armour is laid down, education will take the place of military expenditure in our budgets and make up for the neglect of the past? My Lord, when the expected constitutional reforms come into operation, Sir William Meyer has announced there will be a decentralisation of finance and very few 'divided heads' of revenue, and the provinces will be allowed the privilege of imposing taxation and, I hope also, to raise loans for special purposes. Whether the provinces are or are not able to provide adequate means for the spread of education to the extent we desire, I hope, my Lord, the Government of India will never consider the internal development of India and the social advance of her people matters of less concern to themselves than the maintenance of a well-equipped and up-to-date army and navy."

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru:—"My Lord, even at this late hour of the day I trust your Lordship will bear with me for a few minutes and permit me to pay my humble tribute of admiration to the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer on this occasion when he is presenting to us his last Financial Statement. My Lord, during the tenure of his office he has had to contend against difficulties of an extraordinary character, and, I think, it must be admitted as, indeed, it has been admitted very frankly by every Indian Member this afternoon that he has given a most excellent account of his stewardship of Indian finances during the last five years. My Lord, as some of the speakers have reminded us this afternoon, Sir William Meyer has been subjected to criticism, mostly hostile in certain quarters. But I venture to think that Indian sentiment is entirely with him, and if the support of Indian sentiment and Indian opinion can bring any solace to him, he can have plenty of it. My Lord the Financial Statement that he has presented to us to-day is, to my mind, a complete refutation of the criticism passed on him or of the criticism levelled against India. No doubt the war dominates our finances, but one pleasing feature of the Financial Statement is that there is no additional taxation to be imposed this year, while, on the other hand, it brings out into prominent relief the magnificent services rendered by this country during the period during which Sir William Meyer has held the high office which he is about to quit. Now, my Lord, I do not wish to traverse the ground which has been covered by so many of my Hon'ble colleagues in the course of the day, and I shall, therefore, confine myself to one or two points only. I must congratulate the Hon'ble the Finance Member upon the remarkable success that has attended the War Loan, and I sincerely hope and trust that the next War Loan will be equally successful. I at the same time join my friends in expressing the hope that specific instructions will be issued to the officers of Government that no ground is given for complaint by subordinate officials with regard to any undue zeal in collecting the money.

"My Lord, the real point in regard to which I would invite your Lordship's attention and the attention of Government is the question of education. It is perfectly true that we are going to get 30 lakhs under the present scheme, but it seems to me that having regard to the size of the country and having regard also to the slow progress which education has so far made the sum allotted is wholly inadequate. When one compares this paltry sum of 30 lakhs with the ambitious programme of Mr. Fisher in England, my Lord, one is astonished that the Government have not seen their way to make the rate of progress a little more quick. Now, whatever may have been the case in regard to primary education in the past, I think, the whole question of primary education has got to be approached now from a different point of view. We cannot forget that the announcement made in the House of Commons with regard to responsible government imposes a still greater obligation on the Government to quicken their pace with regard to education all round if it is considered at all necessary, as I think it is, that we should have educated electorates. I think, my Lord, therefore that the sum of 30 lakhs is wholly inadequate, and I would earnestly urge upon the Finance Member to consider whether it is not possible for him to increase the allotment with regard to education this year.

"My Lord, I have one provincial grievance. In speaking last year on this subject I complained that Bengal, Madras and Bombay which had already got more had been allotted a larger share, while my province had got less. I find the same story is repeated this year, and I would therefore earnestly ask the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer, as also the Hon'ble Sir Sankaran Nair, to consider whether it is not possible to give us something more out of the balance. My Lord, I do not wish to take up your Lordship's time unnecessarily any further, but I would like to associate myself with my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri, with everything which has fallen from him with regard to the increase of railway fares and also with regard to the question relating to salt. With these few words I resume my seat."

5-6 P.M.

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—"I cannot say, my Lord, that I am an expert in finance, and I do not think that I can throw any light on the Financial Statement that has been submitted by the Hon'ble Member in charge of Finance. As an ordinary layman what strikes me is this, that the proof of the pudding is in the eating, and I find that the Financial Statement that is presented to us to-day has a surplus and no fresh taxation, and that is a most satisfactory state to be in. That is all that I can say with regard strictly to the Financial Statement.

"My Lord, last year I was responsible for saying that the budget was presented to us in this Council, when we could not change a single word or figure; and it was like flogging a dead horse. Since then the procedure has been changed, and we are given an opportunity to discuss the Financial Statement when it is not flogging a dead horse, but, as I may say, moving a live horse. I hope that the change in the procedure, which has brought this discussion to-day, will enable the Finance Member to consider some of the points which have been brought out, and I hope it will bear some fruit. I hope that on the 22nd when we get the budget presented some at least of the suggestions that have been made might be accepted. I would only say this, my Lord, that I support entirely what Mr. Sastri said about salt and primary education. There is one more word which I would point out to my Hon'ble friend, Sir George Lowndes, who happened to say that we have done away with 'the hare-hunting debate.' Nobody appreciates that more than I do, my Lord, but it was a very great privilege which was enjoyed by this Council for many years; and with very great deference to the Hon'ble Member I see nothing in law which prevented that practice from being followed. That advantage has been taken away, and I believe some Members keenly feel that that advantage has been taken away. Though it is perfectly true that we can bring forward Resolutions in this Council, and probably the Hon'ble Member will find more Resolutions in future because he has taken away this privilege. But it will take more of the time of the Council, whereas what he described as the hare-hunting debate had the advantage of preventing people from going so far as to bring forward Resolutions but gave them opportunities of drawing the attention of Government to certain matters of public importance. However, that privilege has been taken away, and I hope that it will be compensated by the Finance Member in showing us on the 22nd that what has happened to-day has borne some fruit. Now, my Lord, before I sit down I would join in what has been said about Sir William Meyer. I have listened to the debate from the morning till past five, and I was wondering what would be the height of my ambition just now if I had to make a choice. I honestly say, my Lord, that I have come to the conclusion that I should like to be in the place of Sir William Meyer to-day. But I do not think I should like to continue for more than to-day, because I think on the 14th instant, perhaps, he may have some trouble about the Income-tax Bill.

"All the same, my Lord, I join in the sincere congratulations and the good wishes which have been offered to him, that when he retires he may have the happiness and rest that he fully deserves, and I am sure that India, not only in this Council as represented by the various communities, but India as a whole outside fully recognises the services that he has rendered to our Finance at the critical moment. He deserves well of India and rightly so."

The Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray:—"My Lord, I have no speech to make, but I should not like the Hon'ble Member to think that I alone did not join in the congratulations offered to him. I desire, therefore, to associate myself very sincerely with the shower of congratulations that have fallen and are falling on the Hon'ble Member's head in connection with his most successful farewell budget. I should also like to associate myself with a good deal of what the Hon'ble Mr. Hogg from Bombay said but not with all because I do not agree with him in regard to Premium Bonds. I suppose that many Finance Members if not most have to wait for a post mortem for a proper appreciation. In this case vivisection self-performed has had most satisfactory results. I think, my Lord, I should be perhaps less or more than human if I refrained from reminding the Hon'ble Member that 12 months ago I said certain words here which he construed to mean or to imply that he ran some danger of going to jail for the way in which he had dealt with the railway earnings. It is, therefore, my Lord, with unbounded satisfaction that I find that he has had such a good year that he has been able to make restitution, if as I hope I do interpret correctly what he said on the 1st of March and I trust that the reserve he then referred to may be so ear-marked, so tied up, that it must be spent on Railways only and that next year it may be possible to provide even a further reserve."

The Hon'ble Raja Rampal Singh:—"My Lord, being under the impression that to-day's speeches will be strictly confined to the Financial Statement I had no mind to speak, but, it was only this morning that it came to my mind that I may also take advantage of the privilege that we enjoy I determined to prepare a speech. The time was short at my disposal but to my great relief the old saying 'short and sweet' came to my help. To make my speech short was in my power, but to impart sweetness to it was beyond my capacity. However, I brought satisfaction to myself with the idea that if my speech will not be suggestive of any improvement in the finances or financial system of the country or any reform in its administration, I will at least have the satisfaction of not having wearied the Council by a monotonous speech though I fully associate myself with the views expressed by my Hon'ble Colleagues.

[8TH MARCH, 1918.] [Raja Rampal Singh; His Excellency the President; Sir William Meyer.]

"Now, my Lord, I beg leave to give expression to feelings of cordial gratitude on my own behalf and on behalf of the landholders of the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh to your Excellency's Government and to Sir William Meyer, the Finance Member in particular, for the most praiseworthy manner in which the levying of any fresh taxation has been avoided. The shadow of that titanic war, which Germany started three years ago to gain her own selfish ends, is still over us and at a time when there was not a little apprehension in the country that new methods of fresh taxation may be devised by the Financial Department to meet the exigencies of the most extraordinary situation, it is no less a matter of self-congratulation to us as it is to your Excellency's Government that the finances of the country have been managed in such a masterly manner as not to necessitate the imposition of any further burden on the shoulders of the people.

"There is one matter, my Lord, which is exercising the minds of the landholders of the country with considerable amount of anxiety and uneasiness. It is the innovation that is intended to be adopted in the method of calculating their assessable incomes.........

His Excellency the President:—"I think the Hon'ble Member is travelling outside the limits which are permitted to him."

The Hon'ble Raja Rampal Singh:—"I thought that some income has been estimated and added to the assets, and so I wish to point out to the Hon'ble the Finance Member that if any assessable income has been added in the Financial Statement for the levy of a higher rate of income-tax, any such estimated income should be left out of account."

His Excellency the President:—"He has already told you that nothing has been added to the estimated income."

The Hon'ble Raja Rampal Singh:—"I did not know that."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—"I can assure the Hon'ble Member that nothing has been added in the Financial Statement on this score."

The Hon'ble Raja Rampal Singh:—"Thank you, Sir,

"My Lord, this is not the time to press for allotments towards objects calculated to advance the moral and material progress of this country though it cannot be too incessantly impressed towards what direction that advancement lies. I am fully confident that your Excellency's Government will by exercising every economy compatible with efficiency in the administrative expenditure of the State will take early steps to bring about that educational, agriculural and commercial development in the country for which we cannot be too impatient.

[Raja Rampal Singh ; Sir William Meyer.] [8TH MARCH, 1918.]

"My Lord, I cannot resume my seat without offering my tribute of well-deserved praise to my Hon'ble friend Sir William Meyer for the admirable qualities of his head and heart which he has brought to bear to steer the finances of this country during his tenure of office as Finance Minister. The times were hard, the difficulties severe, but he managed them in such an admirable manner that we cannot in fitting words give expression to our sense of appreciation. It is a matter of great regret to us that a few months hence he is to quit the office which he so worthily filled in the last few years. In him India will lose the services of a most capable and sympathetic officer."

5-18 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"My Lord, I find it difficult to express adequately my deep appreciation of the most cordial and kindly way in which all my non-official friends have spoken of my Financial Statement for the year 1918-19, including the Revised Estimate for the current year, and of my work as a whole as Finance Member. As one of the speakers has rather aptly put it, it is rather difficult as a rule for a Finance Member to get liked. He has always to be treading on somebody's toes; he has to refuse grants which people think they have made a very good case for. He has, as has happened to me twice in my career, had to raid hen-roosts—to come down on the people with extra taxes; and so he is generally regarded and tends to regard himself, as a sort of Ishmael. Perhaps he may get a welcome when he first comes on the stage; but he does not expect many bouquets when he goes. It has been, therefore, a very great source of pride and pleasure to me to find that, although I have been on the stage so long, my budget and my policy have elicited such warm, I might almost say affectionate, approval from my friends here. It justifies the claim I ventured to make in my speech on the 1st of March that, though my non-official colleagues have on occasions differed from me on particular points, they have given me most warm support as a whole, realising that I love India and have given my best to her. They have assured me of that in terms which I shall never forget. Their approval is a source of great satisfaction to me, and it will be one of the most cherished reminiscences of my Indian career, which will be closed ere long.

"I hope, however, as one of the speakers has said, that I shall, when in England in what I may call a disembodied capacity, meet at any rate some of my friends when they come over on business or pleasure.

"Turning now to the various criticisms that have been made, I note the warm congratulations on the avoidance of taxation At the same time various speakers exhibited a yearning for greater expenditure. I am asked why more money could not be given for Education and Sanitation. My friend the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea yearned to spend more money on the Army and so on. Well, I shall touch presently on the question of extra grants for Education and Sanitation. But I would remind my friends who have taken this line that you cannot have things both ways. The Hon'ble Pandit and another speaker or two said 'You have got this big surplus, which may probably be bigger still at the close of the year. Surely, you need not be so miserly; you can give out more money.' Well, if my friends follow carefully the exposition I have given of our Ways and Means position for the year that is coming on us, they will find that, as I have said, we shall want all the money we have got to meet the Ways and Means difficulties. I would remind the Council once more that, even as it is, we have not been able to make specific provision for the Secretary of State's Council Bills, so necessary for the support of India's trade; and, therefore, I say that the fact that there is a surplus does not show that we can dissipate it so freely on expenditure as one might in ordinary years. This is a war year and the next year is a war year, and we must conserve our resources to the utmost.

"Then, some reference was made to a charge that I had underestimated our income in the current year, and that this underestimating of revenue, and — it was implied — overestimating of expenditure, was an ingrained vice of Indian Governments. Well, I have no doubt that the

[8TH MARCH, 1918.] [Sir William Meyer.]

Government of India must always be cautious folk. They have felt that you cannot turn the taxation tap on and off so readily and easily as you do at Home. They felt that it is better to be on the safe side because their calculations may at any time be upset, as Sir Edward Baker's were on one occasion, by bad seasons. Therefore, as I say, you must be prudent and cautious, and this is doubly necessary in the case of the present war with its kaleidoscopic surprises. My friend the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri noticed that if I have underestimated the revenue I have also underestimated the expenditure. Military demands came which I could not possibly resist. I maintain what I said on previous occasions that really, so long as this war lasts, we are groping in the dark, and that if our estimates turn out to be better than we expected, it is a matter to thank Providence for and not be too critical about. And lest this should be thought to be some special vice of bureaucracy, I would remind my Hon'ble friends that in the British Parliament the estimates that the Chancellor of the Exchequer has put forward during the war have been set aside by actual events to a far greater extent than our estimates here.

"Then reference has been made to the lapses in Provincial expenditure under Education and other heads, lapses in the current year. Well, I want to state emphatically that we put no pressure whatever on Local Governments to cut down the budget estimates we had agreed to. The lapses that occur are, I think, absolutely due to the feeling that it is better to defer expenditure and incur it to better advantage later than to rush into outlay simply to show that the budget estimates have been worked up to. Anybody who has experience of these matters will know that it often happens that, towards the close of a year, you are faced with the question, can you lay this money out to the best advantage? You can throw it away and make it appear that your actuals square with your budget. But wise and honest people will say that it is much better to let it lapse and spend it to advantage and with greater deliberation next year.

"Then, we have had a wail that beneficent expenditure is at a standstill owing to the war. Well, the war is on us, and we cannot expect to get on with other outlay as if there were no war at all. My friend the Hon'ble Dr. Sapru referred, I think, to the fact that Great Britain was nevertheless spending much money on education. He referred to Mr. Fisher's programme. I would remind my friend that Mr. Fisher's programme has not come in yet; it has had to be postponed.

"As regards the current year's Provincial budgets, in spite of the necessity for economy which the war requires, we are, as I said in my speech on the 1st of March, giving the Provinces an opportunity of spending three million pounds more next year than is actually being spent in the current year. If you compare the budget estimates of the coming year with the figures of the last peace year, 1913-14, you will find that there is an increase of expenditure of about one million pounds, from £3,177,000 to £4,121,000, under Education; and if you compare the budget allotment for education in 1918-19 with the Revised for 1917-18 you get a rise, in round figures from £3,360,000 to £4,120,000. Some of the Members have spoken as if the special grant of £200,000 which we are making from Imperial funds was the only contribution to educational progress in the coming year. Well, education is a Provincial matter, and the expenditure comes from Provincial revenues. What we have done in past years, when our finances allowed of it, and what we do this year as an earnest of what we should like to do if the war was not on us, is, every now and again, to make additional grants to the Provinces from the Imperial Exchequer. But the expenditure remains, in the main, Provincial expenditure; and the fact that there is an increase budgetted for in 1918-19 shows that, in spite of the war, the Provinces are going ahead.

"Similarly, for Sanitation the current year's budget figure was about £610,000 and the Revised £580,000. In 1918-19, there is a provision of £715,000 for Sanitation as against £423,000 in the last peace year, 1913-14. That is a very large proportional increase. The Sanitation expenditure in Bengal, to which the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea referred, has risen from about six lakhs in the current year's budget to nearly 12 lakhs in 1918-19, and that includes a considerable amount of provision for measures against malaria.

"As to expenditure on Agriculture, to which one speaker has referred, if he looks at the budget allotment for the coming year, he will see that it is nearly 50 per cent. above that for 1913-14. So I maintain that, in spite of war conditions and the necessity for conserving our resources as much as possible, we are still making very fair progress in beneficent expenditure. Well, I have been asked if we cannot give more special grants. I have already answered the question : we have not the necessary funds, having regard to the demands on our resources for Ways and Means purposes. There is also, as I indicated in my speech of the 1st March, another reason. We have got under consideration, in connection with the scheme of constitutional reforms, the future relations—financial as well as other relations—of local bodies, Provincial Governments and the Government of India, and till we have determined what those relations will be obviously we cannot go in for large commitments based on the existing system. My friend the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea regarded this announcement as a great triumph for his views on Provincial autonomy, and chaffed me genially for having taken a different view now to what I took in a debate in 1914 when he raised the subject in connection with the famous Delhi Despatch. Well, if my Hon'ble friend wishes to claim me as a captive to his bow and spear, he is welcome to do so, but I would like to remind him that what I said then—that is, in that debate of 1914—was that the Delhi Despatch only spoke of Provincial autonomy as a distant ideal; it did not give any pledge for immediate action. We have progressed more rapidly now, and perhaps we can act sooner than we thought possible in 1914. My Hon'ble friend is an impatient idealist in this matter. An impatient idealist has been described by somebody as 'a beautiful and ineffectual creature ;' but I do not commit myself to that description at all. An impatient idealist, I think, is a very useful person. Without the impatient idealist we should all get far too much into the ordinary ruts........."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea :—"Whatever has been done has been done by impatient idealists in this world."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"As I have just been saying, without the impatient idealist we should stagnate; but at the same time the impatient idealist, when he begins, is just as much before the right time as the obscurantist conservative is behind it. A Government has to take a prudent course. It listens to the impatient idealist, but it cannot prudently move till it has made sure that the route is the right route, and that the ground will bear the progress which it is proposed to make."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea :—"The impatient idealist has triumphed in this matter."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"He generally does in the end. Well, my friend, the impatient idealist, if he will allow me to call him so, and some other speakers have criticised us on the ground that the additional pay to British soldiers provided in the Financial Statement has not been accompanied by a corresponding increase to the Indian troops. It is not, for the very good reason that we made the increase to the Indian troops first. We did that with effect from the 1st of January 1917, and it was mentioned in the budget of the current year as materially adding to the military estimates. We increased the pay of all ranks from Subadar-Major downwards; and we gave the sepoy, instead of an increase of cash pay, free rations which were estimated at that time to be worth an additional pay of Rs. 3-8 per month, and which, as prices have continued to increase, is worth still more now......"

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea :—"May I make a submission? My point was that Rs. 11 which is the increased pay plus the rations which you give are not sufficient. That is my whole point."

[8TH MARCH, 1918.] [Sir William Meyer; Mr. S. N. Bannerjea; His Excellency the President.]

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"I will meet that directly; but what I say is that we did make very material additions last year."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Banerjea :—"It is not enough."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"We also raised pensions. We gave men a bonus of Rs. 50 on recruitment. We have given improved clothing and housing conditions. But my Hon'ble friend says 'it is not enough. I want you to spend millions more.' Well, if you spend millions more, you will have to increase taxation very considerably. I am less of an idealist in these matters than my Hon'ble friend, and I will wait for the military authorities to put up proposals to me. It is the military authorities who have to deal with a great deal of possible military expenditure to judge which military expenditure is most essential; and I may say that His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief and Army Member has always shown an extreme amount of—may I say?—Scotch caution in deciding how far to progress; but when he comes to me he generally does so with such a complete case that I throw my hands up and surrender to his discretion......"

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea :—"You will get much more recruiting."

His Excellency the President :—"The Hon'ble Member has had his say already."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"Then, the Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy asked me for an announcement of our position in regard to expenditure in Persia and Mesopotamia. As regards Mesopotamia our expenditure is limited to the Expeditionary Forces there—I mean expenditure which we have eventually to defray from Indian revenues, not what we pay in the first instance on behalf of His Majesty's Government and get back from them. The Resolution of 1914 puts on us the normal charges in respect of those forces, namely, what we should pay for them if they remained in India.

"As regards Persia I cannot say more than what I said in paragraph 16 of my speech of the 1st March. There I spoke of the South Persia Rifles as 'a corps raised to assist the Persian Government in maintaining order in tracts in which British interests are specially concerned with reference to present war conditions,' and indicated that the cost of the corps is divided like other Political expenditure in Persia between His Majesty's Government and ourselves. Well, my Hon'ble friend, I think, knows that Persia is in a rather delicate situation; that there are Turkish troops in the country; that there are German agents in the country, that there are large tracts in the country which have been the scene of local disorders. I am sure he will not press me to make any further statement as to the precise functions and use of the South Persia Rifles. I must ask the Council to take it from me that they are doing useful work.

"Then, my Hon'ble friend Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy, and I think the Hon'ble Pandit also, criticised our investment in Home Treasury Bills—our special investment of 20 millions—on the ground that it is out of the proceeds of borrowing here and that we are paying more here than we get in interest in England. Well, that may be; but surely my Hon'ble friend realises that it is necessary to borrow here for the purposes of our war finance, which includes among other things large expenditure on account of His Majesty's Government and the meeting of Council Bills to promote those trade interests in which the Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy is so interested. We have to lay out this money; we cannot get adequate specie payments in return, for the reasons I have explained, and so we have to be content with Treasury Bills at Home. That is a war sacrifice if people like to call it so; but it is justified in the circumstances of India's trade among other things. The Hon'ble Pandit objected to any investment at all. He would like the money to lie idle in the

[Sir William Meyer; Pandit M. M. Malaviya.] [8TH MARCH, 1918.]

Secretary of State's coffers. Well, I have explained that it has accumulated in the Secretary of State's coffers for reasons which are beyond our control, and that being so, we thought we were doing a good stroke of business for India in persuading the Secretary of State to invest it......"

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya:—"Why raise it?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—"If the Hon'ble Pandit has followed my exposition of the Ways and Means situation, he will have seen how necessary it is for the money to go Home and that we cannot get specie back again. That is one of the difficulties of the situation.

"Then the Hon'ble Mr. Hogg raised a kindred point as to the rise in the rate of exchange affecting our Home investments when we want to get them out here, meaning, I presume, that we should get less in the way of rupees than the amount of our original remittances. Well, most of our investments are in short term Treasury Bills. We may lose by exchange in bringing the money out when we can bring it out; but it must be remembered that we gain in our remittances Home, so that the one balances the other.

"Also so far as this money is applied to help in the Railway Programme it would come out not in actual cash but in railway material.

"I note the remark which Mr. Hogg and Sir Fazulbhoy and some other speakers made in regard to our contemplated measure for restriction of flotations of private issues. Well, I shall bring forward that Bill in a few days' time and it will be published for information I only want to say now that there is no intention of absolute prohibition, as my friend, Mr. Sita Nath Ray seems to imagine. We only propose to follow the system that has been adopted by the Home Treasury since the beginning of the war, which is in force in India now in respect of so many other matters connected with the war, by requiring a special license before private flotations are made of registered companies. If it can be shown that new flotations will not compete with our loans, or if they would compete are nevertheless in the national interest, as for instance in the production of material required for the war, certainly I will never be chary in giving the licenses. I also note as a very useful remark Mr. Hogg's suggestion that we might in some cases make it a condition that till a company can get to actual useful work of its own it should temporarily invest in Government funds what it gets from the public.

"Some of the speakers have referred to the undesirability of undue pressure in respect of our current war loan. I entirely agree with them that there should be no undue pressure. Put on the lowest ground, it defeats its own object, because for one man you get money out of by compulsion you may prevent ten others from subscribing. But we do want a great deal of persuasion, and though persuasion should not develop into compulsion, no doubt occasionally there has been too much zeal on the part of some subordinate local officials. I daresay there have been individual regrettable instances of this sort, but speaking as a whole, I do not think that it can be said that in respect of our current year's loan there was undue pressure exercised, though there was remarkably successful persuasion by Heads of Provinces and their committees. But I am quite ready if it is thought desirable to let it be known that Government are absolutely opposed to any coercion. I note also, as a very useful one, Mr. Hogg's suggestion that when we make a definite announcement as to next year's loan we should indicate how the difficulties that arose this year in respect of the issue of scrip are going to be avoided next year.

"Every Member who spoke showed warm appreciation of the loan and of its objects. There was one marked exception in a speech, which, perhaps fortunately, has been taken as read. The Hon'ble Mr. Rangaswami Ayyangar's taken-as-read speech contains this gem—'In the matter of issuing another loan this year I should say that it would be more advisable to issue it next year. The rate of interest has already become very high and the flotation of another loan will jeopardise the interests of landowners and other industrial people wanting capital or otherwise indebted.' Well, that is a very sordid way of looking at things, looking at them from the point of view of the interests of the speaker's own class, and regarding the interests of India and of the Empire as nil. I am very happy to feel that this is a mere isolated criticism which has found no echo at all in this debate, where, as I say, the loan has evoked warm appreciation.

"There were a few remarks from Mr. Sarma and Mr. Sastri as to the inflation of currency and its effect on prices. Well, I do not see how the currency can be said to be inflated by our coinage and note issues. We only coin when it is shown to us to be absolutely necessary to add to stock of rupees and similarly with regard to note issues; and the result as regards our coinage, and the fact that it has not been redundant, has been shown in the way in which it is absorbed. Almost as soon as it is issued from the mint, it gets absorbed by the public, and we get once more into a state of embarrassment as to how to replenish it. The rise in prices is of course the result far more of the world demand for essential products rather than of any question of local inflation of the currency. An addition to the coinage would in any case be required with reference to the more active circulation of commodities that is taking place in these war circumstances. Of course, there is one method which certain economists like Mr. Hartley Withers constantly preach, to meet the demands for currency—that is that you get the old currency out by drastic additional taxation; but I do not think those speakers who have criticised our alleged inflation of currency would wish to adopt that counter-remedy in India.

"My friend Sir Dinshaw Wacha has spoken of the railway surplus as one which should be ear-marked for capital expenditure on the railway programme. Well, that is a matter which I have discussed more than once. I had some remarks on it in my first budget speech, and there are arguments both ways. There is a great deal primâ facie to be said for putting the profits made on railways into the development of the railway estate. On the other hand, if you take Sir Dinshaw Wacha's metaphor and treat the people of India as shareholders in railways, you have got the fact that the shareholders went without any dividends for a long time, because, as Sir Dinshaw has aptly reminded the Council, it was not until after many years that the railways began to pay, and the shareholders may quite reasonably claim that they should have some reward for their past abstinence. Also, as shareholders might claim in an ordinary business, they might say 'It is all very well for you to put part of the profit into improving the business, but you must apply part of it in giving us dividends'. So that one has to hold the scale between those two rival claims, and it really becomes a mere matter of expediency in any particular year as to how far you should use capital and how far revenue for the railway programme ...."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha:—"It is not a question of cumulative dividends."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—"But as I told the Chamber of Commerce in Calcutta a year or two ago, I had gone into the matter in respect of the years before the war; and I found that as a matter of fact, taking a cycle of years, I think it was 15 or so, we had put all, and more than all, the profits that the railways had been giving us into the development of our railway property. Some speakers said they could not trace that expenditure. My answer is that when we meet capital expenditure out of revenue we meet it by a corresponding transfer from our unproductive to our productive debt.

"The Hon'ble Pandit says that I said nothing about the railway revenue. I thought I had said something very material about it in paragraphs 9 and 57 of my speech on the 1st of March, explaining for instance how it had grown in spite of great disadvantages, but perhaps what he really meant was that I had not said anything about increase of railway fares......"

[Pandit M. M. Malaviya; Sir William Meyer; Sir Dinshaw Wacha.] [8TH MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya :—" That was what I meant."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—" Of course, I had to deal with big figures and with the railway budget as a whole, and I could not, as the Hon'ble Pandit will, I am sure, understand, go into all the details in a budget speech. But I understand that either Sir George Barnes or Sir Robert Gillan will deal with this matter at a later stage of our discussions on the Financial Statement.

" Sir Dinshaw Wacha wants improved Audit machinery and reports like those of the Auditor-General at Home. I think we have got that. We get very illuminating audit reports from the Comptroller-General and Auditor-General, which are published every year and which form the subject of comment in the Press ; and I think we have a great advantage here over the people at Home, in that our audit system is a continuous system. The Audit Officer can always put the brake at once as soon as he regards any expenditure objectionable, whereas at Home they apparently wait ; and then there is a retrospective review and much weeping and wailing by the Auditor-General over the wickedness of the spending departments. There was a House of Commons Committee on the matter not long ago which was moved to tears at the reckless way in which the various spending departments were spending, and, I think, one of the things they said was that it would hardly be believed that the Munitions Ministry had never taken the trouble to have a Financial Officer attached to them.........."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha :—" Is it effectual—the system here ? "

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—" I do not say it is perfect here, but I think it has been much improved during the last few years—since the accounts and audit functions of the Comptroller and Auditor-General were separated from his functions in connection with currency loans and so forth, now discharged by the Controller of Currency ; and it is improving constantly.

" It is getting late, my Lord, and I do not think I need keep the Council further with answers to what were very friendly criticisms. I must once more express my great appreciation of the way in which Hon'ble Members have spoken about my work and my hearty thanks for it. And I should like to say, as I did in my speech on the Financial Statement, that such credit as is attributed to me must be very largely shared by my able and most zealous lieutenants in the Finance Department ; and that I also owe very much to your Excellency and to Lord Hardinge, and to my past and present colleagues in the Executive Council."

The Council then adjourned to Saturday, the 9th March, 1918.

DELHI :
The 15th March, 1918.

A. P. MUDDIMAN,
Secretary to the Government of India,
Legislative Department.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Rainfall summary for the seven days ending at 8 hrs. on Thursday, the 14th March 1918, based on the Indian Daily Weather Reports of the period.

In the beginning of the week nearly general rainfall occurred in Baluchistan, the North-West Frontier Province and the western half of the Punjab, and rain and snow fell in Kashmir; but during the rest of the week weather was dry in northwest India. Conditions favouring thunderstorms developed in the northwest of the Peninsula, the central parts of the country, Assam and south Burma, and occasioned some isolated falls of rain.

2. Burma.—Rain fell at Mergui and Victoria Point.

Northeast India, including Orissa.—Local falls of rain were reported from Assam and light rain fell at Darjiling.

The United Provinces, Central India and the Central Provinces.—Mussooree, Pachmarhi and Indore had light falls of rain.

Northwest India.—Precipitation was nearly general in Baluchistan and the North-West Frontier Province on the 7th, in Kashmir on the 7th and 8th, and in the western half of the Punjab on the 8th.

The Peninsula.—Rain fell at Bombay, Malegaon, Cochin and Tinnevelly.

3. The chief amounts of precipitation were as follows :—

March 7th. Harnai 0·80″, Quetta 0·93″, Kalat 1·32″, Dalbandin 0·71″, Parachinar 1·20″, Sonamarg 4·36″, Dras 1·10″ and Murree 1·03″.

„ 8th. Multan 0·25″, Srinagar 0·60″, and Sonamarg 1·24″.

„ 12th. Bombay 1·35″.

4. The week's rainfall was 20 per cent or more in excess in Kashmir, Baluchistan and the Konkan, and 20 per cent or more in defect in the Bay Islands, Upper Burma, Assam, Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, the United Provinces, the Punjab East and North, the North-West Frontier Province, Rajputana, Central India East, Berar, the Central Provinces, the Bombay Deccan, Hyderabad, Mysore and the whole of the Madras Presidency. It was normal in Lower Burma, the Punjab Southwest, Sind and Central India West. No rain usually falls at this time of year in Gujarat.

The rainfall from the 30th November to date is 20 per cent or more in excess in the Bay Islands, the Konkan, the Bombay Deccan, Mysore, Malabar, and the Madras Coast North. It is 20 per cent or more in defect in Upper Burma, Assam, Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, the United Provinces, the Punjab, Kashmir, the North-West Frontier Province, Baluchistan, Sind, Rajputana, Gujarat, Central India, Berar, the Central Provinces, and Hyderabad. In the remaining divisions rainfall differs from the normal by less than 20 per cent.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for week ending Saturday, 9th March 1918.

Burma.—The week was practically rainless. Threshing and winnowing of winter rice have been completed in Upper Burma. Plucking of tobacco and harvesting of miscellaneous dry crops is proceeding. Cultivation of spring rice and clearing of hill sides for cultivation continues. Standing crops are good. Cattle are generally healthy. The price of unhusked rice in Rangoon remains stationary and is below normal. The market for white rice is dull at Rs. 230 for specials.

Assam.—The weather was generally seasonable. Rain is wanted in two districts. Harvesting of mustard and transplantation of spring rice are almost finished. Pressing of sugarcane, pruning of tea and ploughing for autumn and winter rice and jute continue. Outturn and prospects of crops are generally fair. Cattle disease is reported from five districts. The price of common rice has risen slightly.

Bengal.—The week was practically rainless. Rain is urgently needed for ploughing and sowing operations, for autumn crops and for the growth of vegetables. Planting of sugarcane and harvesting of spring crops are in progress. Dry weather has greatly reduced the outturn of spring crops. The average price of common rice for the province has fallen by about 0·5 per cent. as compared with that of the preceding week.

Bihar and Orissa.—There was practically no rain during the week. Pressing of sugarcane continues. Harvesting of spring crops, planting of sugarcane and preparation of lands for the next season's crops are in progress. Standing crops are generally doing well, but rain is needed in several districts. The price of common rice has risen in seven districts and remained stationary in the remaining districts as compared with that of the preceding week. Cattle disease is reported from ten districts. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa is good.

United Provinces.—The week was practically rainless except slight showers in the Himalayan tract. Standing crops are doing fairly well. Agricultural stock is in good condition but slight cattle disease still exists. Irrigation of spring crops, pressing of sugarcane and preparation of land for it continue. Sowing of extra crops and sugarcane, extraction of opium and harvesting of barley and peas are in progress in places. Fodder is still dear in parts. Prices are almost stationary but have a tendency to fall in some districts.

Punjab.—Light rain was received in parts of almost all the reporting districts and was useful. More rain is badly wanted everywhere for unirrigated crops which are suffering from drought in many districts. Condition of irrigated wheat and other crops is average to good and that of unirrigated crops generally below average. Sowings of extra spring crops and sugarcane continue in some districts but are below normal. Stocks of food grains are generally sufficient. Cattle are generally healthy but fodder is getting scarce. Prices are stationary and range generally between warning and scarcity rates except in some south-eastern districts where they are between normal and warning rates. Prices of wheat:—Rawalpindi $6\frac{3}{4}$, Ambala and Lahore $7\frac{3}{4}$, Lyallpur $8\frac{1}{2}$ seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—Rain fell throughout the province. Prospects of spring crops are generally average. Sowings of tobacco and sugarcane have commenced in some places. Wheat—Peshawar $7\frac{1}{16}$ and Dera Ismail Khan $9\frac{8}{16}$ seers per rupee.

Jammu.—Prices are stationary. There is nothing else noteworthy.

Kashmir.—The week was generally wet and cool. Standing crops are fair in Mozaffarabad and Baramula. Autumn sowings are in progress in Anantnag. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices are normal in the valley but those of rice and wheat are rising in Mozaffarabad.

A 2

Rajputana.—The weather was warm and slightly cloudy. Spring crops are being irrigated and their prospects are good. Harvesting is commencing. Cattle are in good condition. Prices are steady.

Central India.—The rainfall was partial in Gwalior and Malwa. Winter rains are needed in Gwalior. Spring crops are being irrigated and harvested. Land is being prepared for autumn crops in Southern States. Standing crops and probable outturn are fair to good. Agricultural stock is generally good. Prices are high.

Central Provinces.—The weather has been warm and occasionally cloudy. Betul and Chanda received 28 and 15 cents of rain respectively. Outturn of spring crops is reported to be poor in Seoni, Hoshangabad and Harsud Tahsil of Nimar, unsatisfactory in Betul, fair to good in Nagpur, Berar and the remaining districts of Jubbulpore and Nerbudda divisions and good in Chhattisgarh. Reaping of spring crops is in full swing. Fluctuations in prices show a slight downward tendency.

Feudatory States :—Standing spring crops are being cut.

Bombay.—Slight rain fell during the week in parts of Larkana, Upper Sind Frontier, Colaba, East Khandesh, Nasik and Satara. Standing crops are good except in parts of Larkana, Hyderabad, Thar and Parkar and Upper Sind Frontier where they have been slightly damaged by frost, rats and insects. Spring harvesting continues. Cotton picking continues in Hyderabad, Panchmahals, Rewa Kantha, Ahmedabad, Broach, Surat, West Khandesh, Carnatic, Kathiawar, Baroda, Cutch and Kolhapur. Agricultural stock is sufficient. Prices of food grains are generally steady.

Hyderabad.—Report not received.

Mysore.—The week was rainless. Standing crops are good. Harvesting of dry and wet crops is proceeding. Outturn is fair. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices are stationary.

Coorg.—The weather was dry. Picking of coffee and threshing of rice are nearing completion. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices of food grains are high.

Madras.—The week was rainless. Standing crops are fair to good generally. Harvesting of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops is proceeding with outturn fair to normal generally. Sowings of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops are proceeding normally. Condition of cattle is generally good. Prices are steady.

KASHMIR	...	Jammu Province	88	43
		TOTAL	88	43
		GRAND TOTAL	39,211	31,953

The 31,953 deaths reported above represent an increase of 2,244 over the previous week's total. Increases of 2,109 and 879 were reported from the United Provinces and Bombay; decreases of 408 and 553 from the Central Provinces and Hyderabad; elsewhere the totals approximate those of the previous week.

During February, 1,24,000 deaths from plague were recorded in India as compared with 1,14,000 in January. Only once before have more plague deaths been recorded in the month of February, viz., in 1905 when a total of 1,43,000 was reached. In the three other exceptionally severe plague years February's plague mortality was 1,20,000 in 1904, 1,15,000 in 1907 and 1,04,000 in 1911.

In the present year February's plague mortality represents an 8·7 per cent increase on the January total. In 1905 there was a decrease of 1·4 per cent. In the three other years the increases amounted to 77 per cent in 1907, 27 per cent in 1904, and 12 per cent in 1911.

In the four disastrous plague years which we are considering, the epidemic in each case reached its height in the month of April. Should this be the case once more the situation will be most serious, but there are reasons to hope that the present year will not conform to past experience in this regard. The two most important facts that warrant such optimism are (1) the present relatively mild nature of the outbreak in the Punjab and (2) the large proportion of deaths at present being reported from the Bombay Presidency. Ordinarily one expects the Punjab and the United Provinces to figure most largely in the March and April plague statements; and in all previous severe plague years since 1904 the Punjab has been very appreciably the most severely infected administration. Last month 9,000 deaths were reported in the Punjab as compared with 13,000 in February 1911, 25,000 in February 1904, 34,000 in February 1905 and 42,000 in February 1907.

In the United Provinces 38,000 deaths were reported last month as against 65,000 in February 1905 and 52,000 in February 1911.

On the other hand, Bombay contributed no less than 29,000 deaths to February's total plague mortality as against 7,000 in 1911, 12,000 in 1905, 12,000 in 1907 and 31,000 in 1904. Bombay's plague mortality is most unlikely to increase during the next two months.

These are some of the reasons for hoping that the very steep rise in the plague mortality curve in March and April, that has been so constant a phenomenon in past years, will be less steep and less prolonged in 1918 than usual.

NOTICES.

THE PATENT OFFICE, 1, COUNCIL HOUSE STREET, CALCUTTA.

Public room, open 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

1. All communications relating to applications for patents and for registration of designs under the Indian Patents and Designs Act (II of 1911), or in continuation of applications under the Inventions and Designs Act (V of 1888) should be addressed to the Controller of Patents and Designs, 1, Council House Street, Calcutta. Documents sent by post should be carefully packed.

2. Directions for the guidance of inventors and others are given in the Patent Office Handbook (price one rupee) which contains the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, the Indian Patents and Designs Rules, 1912, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary Rules) Act, 1915, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1915, together with current regulations and instructions. These should be consulted before an application is made to the Controller.

3. Advice. The Patent Office cannot undertake (1) to give opinions on the interpretation of Patent Law, or on the advisability of protecting inventions and designs or on their infringement; (2) to make searches in respect of information available in the public room; (3) to recommend any particular agent; or (4) to assist in the disposal of inventions. Applicants are warned that the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, is in force in British India only, and patents granted under it do not extend to the United Kingdom or any of the British possessions. The International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property does not include India. For information regarding patents in countries other than India applications should be made to the patent offices in the countries concerned.

4. Fees are payable in cash and must be received in the Patent Office within the time allowed by the Acts. When cheques are offered in payment of fees, it must be clearly understood that the office cannot hold itself responsible for any delay that may occur in the collection of cash on the cheques; any cheque not payable in Calcutta is subject to commission. In cases where it is not possible to have the fees handed in at the Patent Office, it is preferable to send them by money-order or postal order payable at Calcutta to the Controller of Patents and Designs, and to advise him that they have been so sent. Stamps will not be received in payment of fees.

5. Trade and property marks and names are not registered and medicines are not patented under the Indian Patents and Designs Act. There is no provision of Law in British India for their registration. Neither does this Act deal with pictures, photographs, etc., for which copyright is obtainable under the Indian Copyright Act, 1914.

6. Printed Specifications of applications, which have been accepted, are published within about three weeks after acceptance has been notified in the Gazette of India. These specifications can be purchased at the Patent Office at a uniform price of 8 annas per copy; and may be seen free of charge, together with other publications of the Patent Office, at the following places:—

Geometry. (Euclid Books I and II) (a)	50	25
Essay writing (b)	100	50
TOTAL	750	...
Total required for passing	..	500

(a) Candidates will be expected to be familiar with all the propositions in the above books, and will also be expected to solve simple riders.

(b) Two or three simple subjects will as a rule be given, from which a candidate may choose one only. He should endeavour to excel in good sense, not in quantity. The standard is roughly equivalent to Matriculation or School Final.

1. The examination is held annually at the Civil Engineering College, Sibpur, on the first Monday in June. The examination will be conducted, either at the College, or by an Accountant-General (including the Government Engineer of Railway Accounts) in Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, Assam and Burma only. The examination will be ipso facto vitiated, if it be not held (begun and completed) on the dates fixed; but the officer who will conduct the examination may make his own arrangements with the candidates in regard to the place and hour of examination.

Candidates will not be examined in any of the Calcutta offices.

A candidate already in permanent Government employ * may be allowed to compete in the examination, even if he is more than 25 years of age, and may be appointed to an accountantship, if he passes it; but if he is not already in pensionable service, he will be eligible only for appointment to the non-pensionable establishment on State Railways.

* This term includes employment under Local Boards and foreign bodies, if such is pensionable by the British Government.

2. The candidate should apply to an Accountant-General not later than 30 days previous to the date fixed for the examination and obtain his consent to conduct the examination if examination at the College is not convenient. The application must bear the address of the candidate, must be accompanied by a fee of Rs. 10 and the following certificates and registration form duly filled in, and must be forwarded by him not direct to the Principal, but through the Accountant-General.

Certificates may be submitted in original, or true copies attested by an officer of the Engineer or Accounts Branch, but they will not be returned—

(1) A certificate of good character signed by applicant's immediate official superior, or by the instructor under whom he has been educated or by some other superior under whom he may have been brought up or employed or to whom he may be well known. (This certificate must have special reference to the two years immediately preceding the application.)

(2) A certificate of age, baptismal or of birth (not required, if the candidate is already in permanent Government employ).

(3) A certificate that the application is in the candidate's hand-writing.

NOTE A.—A candidate already in Government service should, in like manner, submit his application through his immediate official superior to an Accountant-General (including Government Examiner of Railway Accounts, qualified to hold the particular examination and should state whether he desires to be examined, at the office of the Accountant-General concerned or at the College.

NOTE B.—The usual examination centres are (1) the Civil Engineering College, Sibpur, (2) Chittagong, (3) Ranchi, (4) The Bihar School of Engineering, Patna, (5) Rangoon, (6) Shillong, and (7) Simla for candidates in the Government of India offices, no others will be admitted at Simla.

(4) Registration statement containing the following information :—

(a) Name in full.

(b) Father's name.

(c) Nationality or class, i. e., European, Anglo-Indian or Indian, of candidate ; and, if Indian, caste or tribe.

(d) Date of birth.

(e) Place of birth.

(f) Present address.

(g) Examinations passed.

(h) Thumb mark of candidate, left hand, to be made in the presence of a responsible person who knows candidate.

(k) Signature and address of above-mentioned witness.

It will rest with the Accountant-General (including Government Examiner of Railway Accounts) to whom the candidate submits his application, to decide on a consideration of the certificates submitted, whether the candidate should be allowed to appear for the examination, or whether his application should be rejected. The Accountant-General or the other officers referred to, will then forward to the Principal, for registration, the names of the accepted candidates, together with their registration statements, which should be signed by the Accountant-General. The registration statement should be carefully preserved by the Principal. The names of these candidates should be entered in a statement showing their ages and their addresses, and also showing where each candidate is to be examined, whether at the College or at the office of the Accountant-General. This statement, together with the fees, should be transmitted to the Principal not later than 15 days after the dates fixed in paragraph 2 for the submission of applications of candidates.

3. Examination papers that are issued for examination need not be returned.

4. Each examination is complete in itself. A candidate who has failed in an examination and presents himself for examination on a subsequent occasion, must undergo the full examination and furnish fresh a fee and certificates.

5. If from any cause a candidate fails to appear for the Examination, the fee paid will not be refunded.

6. It must be distinctly understood that the passing of this examination does not give any claim to an appointment, and that, in making appointments, preference will be given to qualified persons who are already employed in the department.

7. Passed candidates should apply, not to the Principal of the College nor to the Comptroller-General, but direct to the Accountant-General or Government Examiner of Railway Accounts in the province or railway under whom they may desire to be employed.

8. The Civil Engineering College acts, solely as an examining body in reference to admission to the 4th grade of Accountants, Public Works Department.

9. Candidates for the 4th grade Accountantship Examination, who are not Government servants and over 25 years of age, are allowed to appear at the examination of the Sibpur College centre only, but even if successful, they are debarred from employment in the service of Government, and their names will be excluded from the list of passed candidates which is furnished to the Comptroller and Auditor-General.

10. Candidates over 25 years of age not in Government employ should apply in writing to the Principal of the Civil Engineering College not later than 30 days previous to the examination ; the application to be accompanied by a Treasury receipt for Rs. 10, and the registration statement prescribed in rule 2 (4).

NOTE (1).—The question papers of previous years are not published separately. Those of the preceding year are printed in the Civil Engineering College Calendar— price, annas 12 and annas 3 postage, which must be prepaid.

NOTE (2).—Candidates for the examination are not provided with accommodation in the College barracks, but arrangements for their meals can be made on payment in advance of annas 4 per meal to the Assistant Superintendent of the Mess.

NOTE (3).—As for qualifications for admission to the examinations, candidates should refer the matter to the Accountant-General of their province.

NOTE (4).—There are no classes at the Sibpur College for teaching Book-keeping.

B. HEATON,

Principal, Civil Engineering College, Sibpur.

CALCUTTA UNIVERSITY.

NOTICE.

The Syndicate of the Calcutta University will appoint an officiating Registrar to act for Dr. Brühl during his absence on leave for four months on a salary of Rs. 800 per month. Applications for the post are to reach the undersigned on or before the 20th of March, 1918. Candidates are requested to send printed copies of their testimonials along with their applications.

Canvassing will be considered a disqualification.

The officiating Registrar must be a Graduate of position with experience of University affairs. He may be a Member of the Senate, but not of the Syndicate.

The duties of the Registrar are as follows :—

(a) To be the custodian of the Records, Library, Common Seal, and such other property of the University as the Syndicate will commit to his charge.

(b) To act as Secretary to the Syndicate and to attend all meetings of the Senate, Faculties, Syndicate, Boards of Studies, Board of Accounts, Boards of Examiners, and any Committees appointed by the Senate, the Faculties, the Syndicate, or any of the Boards, and to keep minutes thereof.

(c) To conduct the official correspondence of the Syndicate and the Senate.

(d) To issue all notices convening meetings of the Senate, Faculties, Syndicate, Boards of Studies, Board of Accounts, Boards of Examiners, and any Committees appointed by the Senate, the Faculties, the Syndicate, or any of the Boards.

(e) To perform such other work as may be, from time to time, prescribed by the Syndicate, and generally to render such assistance as may be desired by the Vice-Chancellor in the performance of his official duties.

In case of misconduct or neglect of duty, the Registrar shall be liable to suspension, by the Syndicate, and to dismissal by the Senate on the report of the Syndicate.

The selected candidate will be required to join his post before the 30th of April, 1918.

P. BRÜHL,
Registrar.

CEMETERY NOTICES.

Jubbulpore, the 8th March 1918.

Notice is hereby given that the monument to the memory of Grace Madeline Ellison in the Residency Cemetery at Sitabuldi, Nagpur, has fallen into ruinous condition, and that, unless it is restored in the meantime, the monument will be treated at the next repairs in such manner as the officer in charge of the Cemetery may decide to be necessary for the maintenance of the Cemetery in decent order.

C. PRICE,
Archdeacon of Nagpur.

Dated the 9th March 1918.

So that the two old Cemeteries at Chhiria Jhul, Lucknow, may be maintained in decent order, it is proposed to level certain masonry monuments which are past repair, subject to the conditions laid down in Rule 10, Appendix X 10, P. W. D. Code, Vol. III.

Any relatives of deceased persons buried in either of the above Cemeteries who may wish to renew such monuments are hereby invited to communicate with the undersigned officer in charge.

No. 1812.—Whereas it appears to the Chief Commissioner of Delhi that an article of commerce, namely, petrol is being unreasonably withheld from the market, the Chief Commissioner of Delhi under the powers conferred under Section 6 of Ordinance IX of 1914 published in the Gazette of India on the 30th November 1914 is hereby pleased to declare under the aforesaid Section of that Ordinance, that petrol is being unreasonably withheld from the market in Delhi,

The 9th March 1918.

No. 1881 C. & I.—In exercise of the powers vested in him by rule 32 of the rules published with his Notification No. 1327-C. & I., dated the 16th February 1918, and with reference to rules 17, 25, 27 and 28 of those rules, the Chief Commissioner is pleased to prescribe the following forms and conditions for the grant of licenses for the vend of morphia drugs and of permits and passes for the import and transport of those drugs, referred to in the rules hereinafter cited of the above Notification, and to direct that they shall have effect from the 1st of April 1918:—

(1) Any licensed dealer or licensed chemist, who desires to import morphia drugs under rule 13, must obtain from the Collector, Delhi, a permit in form B attached to the Chief Commissioner's Notification No. 862-C. & I., dated the 2nd February 1917. The permit shall be in triplicate, one copy shall be given to the person in charge of the consignment, one forwarded direct to the Collector of Customs at the port through which the morphia drugs are to be imported, or the Collector of the district of export, as the case may be, the third copy being retained in the office of the Collector, Delhi.

(2) Any licensed dealer or licensed chemist, who desires to transport morphia drugs under rule 16, must obtain from the Collector, Delhi, a transport pass in form O-19 annexed. Every transport pass shall be in duplicate, one copy shall be given to the person in charge of the consignment and the other copy retained in the office of the Collector, Delhi

(3) The licenses for the vend of morphia drugs by a licensed dealer or a licensed chemist, referred to in rules 19 and 20, shall be in forms O-17 and O-18, respectively, annexed, and shall be granted by the Collector. Such licenses shall ordinarily be granted for one year commencing on the 1st April, but shall, in any case, expire on the 31st March following their issue. A fee of Rs. 5 shall be payable for every chemist's license in form O-18.

2. The Chief Commissioner is further pleased to direct, with reference to rule 30, that all morphia drugs confiscated under the Act or delivered to the Collector under rule 29 shall be sent to the Civil Surgeon, Delhi, for examination and report.

Chief Commissioner's Notification No. 1726-C. & I., dated the 5th March 1917, is hereby cancelled.

Place of business of licensed dealer________________

The licensed dealer, named above, and hereinafter called the licensee, is hereby authorised by the Collector of Delhi to possess and sell morphia drugs from the date of this license up to the 31st day of March 19 , subject to the following conditions:—

CONDITIONS.

1. The licensee shall be bound by the provisions of the Opium Act and any general or special rules prescribed or which may, from time to time, be prescribed thereunder.

2. This license is not transferable.

3. The licensee shall obtain the drugs either by direct importation from a foreign country, or from a licensed dealer in the Delhi Province or in another province of British India, or by manufacture from opium or morphia drugs lawfully possessed by him, and shall not receive or have in his possession the drugs otherwise obtained. The importation of the drugs by means of the post is absolutely prohibited.

4. The licensee shall not keep or sell the drugs in any place except the premises described above.

5. The licensee shall sell, otherwise than on prescription, to—

(a) A licensed chemist or dealer of morphia drugs in the Delhi Province, or in any other part of British India, holding passes for the transport or export of the drugs,

(b) An approved practitioner,

(c) An approved practitioner in managing or supervising charge of a hospital or dispensary, who has been authorised by the Collector, with the sanction of the Chief Commissioner, by a general or special order, to possess such quantity of morphia drugs in such manner as may be specified in such order,

(d) A person holding a pass granted by a Resident or Political Agent in any Native State or foreign territory, duly countersigned by the Collector of Delhi, morphia drugs not exceeding the quantity which such dealer, chemist, practitioner or person may lawfully possess.

6. The licensee shall maintain correct accounts of all transactions; such accounts to show, in respect of each receipt, the source of supply and the quantity received and, in respect of each issue, the quantity issued and the name and address of the person to whom it is issued.

7. The licensee shall be responsible for the acts and omissions of every person employed by him in carrying on his business and of all his servants, as if the said acts and omissions were his own.

8. The licensee shall file in support of his accounts of receipts the customs receipts for duty paid or invoices of supplies obtained otherwise than by import by sea, and, in support of his accounts of issues, receipts from the persons to whom the issues are made or the orders on which they are made.

9. The licensee shall, on requisition by the Collector or by any officer duly authorised by the Collector, deliver up his license for amendment or for the issue of a fresh license.

10. The licensee shall submit to the Collector, on the 1st day of every quarter, correct quarterly statements showing the quantity of morphia drugs received by him during the quarter, the quantity sold by him and the quantity remaining in his possession.

11. On the demand of any officer specially or generally authorised by the Collector or by the District Excise Officer, the licensee shall at once produce and submit, for inspection, his license and his stock of morphia drugs and the books and papers referring to his transaction in morphia drugs under the license.

...TE.—Compared with the corresponding fortnight of the preceding year, the rise in the price of wheat, in the Central Provinces and Berar, Burma, and Bihar and Orissa, of barley in Sind and Baluchistan, of maize in the Punjab, Delhi, and Sind and Baluchistan, of gram in Sind and Baluchistan and the Bombay Presidency, is noteworthy, as well as that of arhar dál in the Madras Presidency, and of jawar in all the reporting provinces, except in Burma. The increase in the price of salt continues, the marked increase being in Delhi (103 per cent) and in the United Provinces (78 per cent). The fall in the price of rice in Assam and Bengal, and of arhar dal in Bihar and Orissa is also noticeable.

REGISTERED No. L. 848.

The Gazette of India.

EXTRAORDINARY.

DELHI, FRIDAY, MARCH 22, 1918.

Speech of the Honourable Finance Member

INTRODUCING THE BUDGET FOR 1918-19.

I rise to present the Budget of the Government of India for 1918-19. The preliminary estimates which I laid before the Council on the 1st March have been revised in the light of our latest information. The Financial Secretary's Explanatory Memorandum has also been checked and brought up to date.

2. The final figures of the Revised Estimate for 1917-18 and of the Budget Estimate for 1918-19 are given in separate formal statements. The broad results of the revenue account are brought out in the table below in which I have also shown in brackets for convenience of comparison the figures (now superseded) which were given in the corresponding table appearing in paragraph 54 of my speech introducing the Financial Statement.

[In millions of pounds.]

	Budget, 1917-18.			Revised, 1917-18.			Budget, 1918-19.
	Imperial.	Provincial.	Total.	Imperial.	Provincial.	Total.	Imperial.	Provincial.	Total.

3. The more important alterations in our figures occur under the entirely provincial or the 'divided' heads of revenue and expenditure. Thus, owing to the unsatisfactory conditions of the paddy market in Burma the Local Government has had to postpone land revenue collections to a considerable extent with the result that these are now expected to fall short of the previous estimates for the current year by £500,000, of which we anticipate that £400,000 will be realised during the course of next year. This affects both the Imperial and the Provincial estimates in each of the two years. There has been a similar postponement of a smaller amount, namely, £67,000, in Bombay. In the latter province, however, a large increase of £233,000 is now expected in the excise revenue for next year, against which we have allowed proposals made by the Local Government for additional expenditure mainly on education and sanitation. Under purely Imperial heads the largest changes in our estimates are an increase in the Customs revenue of about £76,000 in the current year, and £100,000 in the next year. I need not refer to other alterations as these are of relatively minor importance.

4. The net result of the above changes, in so far as the Imperial position is concerned, is to reduce the surplus for 1917-18 by £114,000 and to increase that for next year by £291,000, the surplus for 1918-19 now standing at £2,582,000. Of this latter improvement, however, about £183,000 represents revenue thrown forward from the current year, and £108,000 a real improvement.

5. These results would, so far as the ability to provide funds is concerned, permit the fulfilment of the conditional promise I made on the 9th instant with reference to a Resolution by my Hon'ble Friend Mr. Sarma, that if our final Budget figures justified it, we should be prepared to make a supplementary grant of £200,000 for technical and agricultural education. But, as I indicated on that occasion, the sanction of the India Office was also required, and though that has just been received, it has arrived too late to allow of the alteration in figures which the allotment of this sum would require. But I assure the Council that we shall make a supplementary allotment as soon as possible, and thus furnish substantial evidence of the reality which we attach to our new procedure in respect of discussion of the Financial Statement.

6. In the case of the provinces there will be a reduction in the surplus for 1917-18 of £418,000, but on the other hand the estimated deficit of £95,000 for 1918-19 will be converted into a surplus of £131,000, there being thus an improvement of £226,000 Concurrently with this conversion of the collective provincial deficit into a surplus, provision has been made for increased provincial expenditure next year to the extent of £313,000, this increase occurring mainly in Bombay where, as already stated, we have allowed the Local Government to apply the anticipated increase of £233,000 in excise receipts next year to beneficent expenditure, including £100,000 on education, £67,000 on sanitation, and a like amount for grants to local bodies for other purposes. We have also allowed them to draw on their provincial balances during the current year to the extent of £80,000 for the last mentioned object. This is a very early fulfilment of the undertaking which I gave in connection with a resolution moved in the Council a short time ago to the effect that if later an improvement occurred in the provincial revenues we would consider very sympathetically the possibility of allowing the provinces to increase their outlay.

7. Turning to ways and means, recent heavy demand for Treasury Bills in Bombay warrants an increase of £1,333,000 on our previous estimate for 1917-18, involving a corresponding increase in the estimated repayments of the same from fresh bills next year. There has also been an improvement in savings bank deposits, and a falling off in payments on account of foreign money orders. On the other hand, we expect to have to meet during the current year additional military outlay, mainly on stores, to the extent of £660,000; a considerable part of this will probably be recovered later, and the expenditure is meanwhile shown provisionally under the suspense head. As the net result of these and other less important alterations, we now expect that our cash balance in India at the end of the current year will be £16,522,000, or an increase of £553,000 on the figure adopted in the Financial Statement; while our closing balance for next year will stand at £12,273,000, being an increase of £1,153,000 over that previously taken and practically equivalent to the normal closing balance we look to.

As regards England, the Secretary of State expects that his balance will be larger by £1,745,000 at the end of the current year and next, owing to additional and more prompt recoveries from the War Office and the Admiralty.

8. This is the last occasion on which I shall address this Council as I shall have relinquished office before it re-assembles at Simla. I desire therefore to reiterate my heartfelt acknowledgment of the generous tribute to my work which fell from the lips of my non-official Colleagues in the general debate on the Financial Statement. Tributes such as these, giving the assurance that I am held to have done good service to India, are an ample recompense for my heavy and anxious labours. And, though I shall presently cease to serve her, my love for India will continue as long as my life lasts. I shall always hope and pray for her welfare, and follow with the keenest interest the developments that the coming years may have in store for her. I shall also follow with sympathetic attention the careers of my friends, official and non-official, with whom I have been associated in the Legislative Council. To those of them whom I shall not see again, I beg now to extend a cordial God-speed, and to wish them, each and all, a full measure of happiness and prosperity in the future.

W. S. MEYER.

DELHI,

MEMORANDUM EXPLAINING THE DETAILS OF THE ESTIMATES.

Introductory.

In this memorandum the variations between the Budget and the Revised estimates of the current year, and between the latter and the Budget estimates of next year, are explained in detail for the major heads of account. Under most of the heads details by provinces have been given, and it may be explained that the figures shown against "India General" represent the transactions of the Central Government, including all expenditure directly controlled by it, of the minor administrations of Ajmer-Merwara and Coorg, and of the convict settlement in the Andamans. The Budget estimates of Provincial and "Divided" expenditure in 1918-19 generally represent the allotments proposed by the several Governments and Administrations with whom regular provincial settlements have been concluded. More detailed information regarding the figures will be found in the Financial Statements presented by the Local Governments to their respective Councils.

2. The figures for the province of Delhi have been entered separately and explained under each major head of account. A pro formâ account of expenditure on Delhi and the Delhi province is also appended to this memorandum (Appendix I), together with a prefatory note explaining the scope of the pro formâ account and the relation between it and the regular accounts.

3. A statement is added to the memorandum (Appendix II) bringing together for each province and for the Home treasury of the Government of India the actual revenue and expenditure under each major head during the last year, the Revised estimates of the current year and the Budget estimates of the next year. The statement takes the place of a return which was formerly presented separately to Parliament and will serve as an expansion of the totals of revenue and expenditure exhibited in the Budget Statements proper (Statements A to E) and as a summary of the figures shown for each province under the several heads in this memorandum.

General results.

4. The broad totals of revenue and expenditure for the last year, the current year and the ensuing year, are as follows:—

	Accounts, 1916-17.
Revenue	98,050,430
Expenditure charged to Revenue	90,572,260
Imperial surplus	7,478,170

	Revised, 1917-18.
Revenue	109,924,300
Expenditure charged to Revenue	104,212,700
Imperial surplus	5,711,600

	Budget, 1918-19.
Revenue	109,190,300
Expenditure charged to Revenue	106,608,800
Imperial surplus	2,581,500

These figures exclude all capital, debt and remittance transactions.

[Acc]ounts, 1916-17.

5. The Accounts of 1916-17 are not discussed in this memorandum, but according to our usual practice in the past a brief explanation is given below of the principal divergences between the Revised estimates of revenue and expenditure as submitted to the Council twelve months ago, and the actual accounts of the year as closed, audited and compiled by the Comptroller and Auditor-General.

6. The broad results are brought out in the following table :—

	REVISED, 1916-17.			ACTUALS, 1916-17.
	Imperial.	Provincial.	TOTAL.	Imperial.	Provincial.	TOTAL.
	£	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue	64,837,800	31,936,700	96,774,500	65,687,300	32,363,100	98,050,400
Expenditure	58,849,100	30,329,700	89,178,800	58,209,100	29,965,800	88,174,900
Surplus	5,988,700	1,607,000	7,595,700	7,478,200	2,397,300	9,875,500

7. The Imperial revenue exceeded the Revised estimate by £849,500 while the Imperial expenditure fell short of it by £640,000, with the result that the surplus was £1,489,500 more than was anticipated. The principal items contributing to this improvement are mentioned below. There was an increase of £381,700 in the gross traffic receipts from railways, mainly on the Great Indian Peninsula, Bombay, Baroda and Central India, Madras and Southern Mahratta and North Western lines; the traffic conditions in January and February 1917 were depressed owing to difficulties in regard to coal supplies, but they recovered sooner than expected, and there was a general rise in earnings during the last few weeks of March. With a small excess of £39,000 in the working expenses, the betterness in the net receipts of Railways amounted to £342,700. The Imperial share of Major Irrigation revenue and Income-tax collections showed improvements of £92,800 and £95,300 respectively. A decrease of £363,200 occurred under Political expenditure by reason mainly of the fact that the adjustment of the Indian share of the expenditure on the South Persia Rifles for which the Revised estimate included a provision of £300,000 had to be postponed to the accounts for 1917-18. The net Military expenditure showed a saving of £161,200 owing principally to larger realisations from the sale of dairy produce, provisions and stores. There were lapses of £114,200 in the grant for the Postal and Telegraph Department and of £99,000 under Opium expenditure, due in the latter case to a reduction in the payments for the purchase of Malwa opium. The improvement of £790,300 in the Provincial section was the result mainly of better collections of income-tax, irrigation, forest and excise revenue and of savings in the grants for expenditure on civil works, education, sanitation and land revenue establishments.

Authors of Memorandum.

8. Paragraphs 205 to 220 of the memorandum have been communicated by the Honourable Mr. G. B. H. Fell, C.S.I., C.I.E., Financial Adviser, Military Finance, and paragraphs 165 to 174 and 230 to 233 by Mr. H. N. Heseltine, C.I.E., Accountant General, Railways; the rest of the memorandum has been drafted by Mr. A. V. Venkataramana Aiyar, B. A., Assistant Secretary in the Finance Department.

9. The Imperial expenditure shown against "Other Provinces" in the table on the preceding page represents the cost of survey and record-of-right operations on a large scale in Bengal and in Bihar and Orissa, undertaken more for administrative than for fiscal purposes. The expenditure is of a temporary and varying character and was accordingly not considered suitable for inclusion in the financial settlements with the two provinces. Three-fourths of the charges are eventually recovered from landlords and tenants for the protection of whose rights the operations are primarily undertaken; and the recoveries are shown in the table as Imperial revenue against "Other Provinces".

REVENUE.

(a) Wholly Imperial.

Revised, 1917-18.

10. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 is less than the Budget by R4·86 lakhs. The reduction occurs almost entirely in the recoveries of survey and settlement charges in Bengal (R3·20 lakhs) due to excess recoveries effected in 1916-17, and in Bihar and Orissa (R1·50 lakhs) owing to less rapid progress with the programme of operations. There is also a small decline in the land revenue collections in Baluchistan and Delhi, but it will be counterbalanced by the recovery of arrears in the North-West Frontier Province.

Budget, 1918-19.

11. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 falls short of the Revised estimate for 1917-18 by R9·51 lakhs. A decrease of R10·80 lakhs is anticipated in the receipts on account of survey and settlement charges in Bengal and Bihar and Orissa as the result of a reduction in the programme of recovery operations. Provision has been made for normal collections of land revenue.

(b) Divided and wholly Provincial.

Revised, 1917-18.

12. The total collections in 1917-18 will fall short of the Budget estimate by R86·04 lakhs. There will be a considerable decline of R72 lakhs in Burma owing to a postponement of collections as a result of the unsettled condition of the paddy market. Decreases of revenue are also expected to the extent of R15·89 lakhs in Bombay in consequence of suspensions necessitated by excessive rainfall in certain districts, a change in the dates for instalments in the Broach district, and a low inundation in parts of the Sind division; R5·10 lakhs in the Central Provinces owing to unfavourable crops in certain districts; R2·18 lakhs in the United Provinces as the result of improved collections in 1916-17 and a consequent reduction in the demand which remained outstanding at the end of that year; and R3·84 lakhs in Bengal and R1·72 lakhs in Madras due to a retardation of collections by late harvests. On the other hand, there will be a large rise of R15·34 lakhs in the Punjab as the rabi harvest proved to be much better than anticipated when the Budget was framed.

Budget, 1918-19.

13. The total Budget estimate for 1918-19 is more than the Revised estimate for 1917-18 by R1,96·95 lakhs. The estimates have been framed as usual on the basis of normal monsoon conditions in the ensuing year, and an increase in revenue is expected in all the provinces. It is expected that the bulk of the revenue, the collection of which has been deferred in Burma in the current year, will be realised in 1918-19. Provision has been made for recoveries of arrears also in Bombay, Madras, the Central Provinces and Bengal, for an extensive wheat crop in Sind, for enhanced assessments and an extension of canal irrigation in the Punjab, and for normal growth in the revenue demand in other provinces.

EXPENDITURE.

(a) Wholly Imperial (India and England).

Revised, 1917-18.

Budget, 1918-19.

14. The saving of R3·27 lakhs on the Budget estimate for 1917-18 is chiefly due to lapses in the grants for survey and settlement expenditure in Bengal and Bihar and Orissa. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 is taken at R4·68 lakhs more than the Revised for the current year. The increase is almost wholly due to a larger provision for the same item of expenditure.

(b) Provincial.

15. The total expenditure in the current year will fall short of the Budget estimate by R14·84 lakhs, the reduction being distributed over all the provinces. The temporary transfer of officers to military duty and to other departments and the reduced rates for exchange compensation allowance introduced in the latter part of the current year contribute to part of the saving in most provinces. Among other causes may be mentioned— Revised, 1917-.

(1) The total or partial non-utilization of grants for the revision of village establishments in Madras and land record establishments in the Central Provinces, and for grain compensation allowance in the Punjab,

(2) The non-introduction of the revised scale for Deputy Collectors in its entirety in the United Provinces,

(3) Smaller outlay on commission on revenue collections in Burma and on the improvement of Government estates in Bengal and Bihar and Orissa, and

(4) The earlier completion of certain settlement operations in Assam than anticipated in the Budget.

There will be an increase of R2·49 lakhs in Bombay owing to the grant of grain compensation allowance for which no provision was included in the Budget, but it will be more than covered by savings under other items of expenditure.

16. The total Budget estimate for 1918-19 exceeds the Revised for the current year by R19·83 lakhs. The increase is distributed over all the provinces with the exception of Assam and Bihar and Orissa. Provision has generally been based on existing sanctions and commitments. The largest increase occurs in the Punjab and is due to provision for additional survey and settlement operations (R2·37 lakhs), charges connected with the formation of a new district (R1·33 lakhs), increased pay to menial establishments and the reorganisation of district office establishments (R2 lakhs) and larger outlay on grain compensation allowance (R·75 lakh). Special allotments have also been made for the revision of village establishments in Madras (R1·09 lakhs) and Bombay (R·84 lakh) and land record establishments in the Central Provinces (R1 09 lakhs), for a larger programme of settlement operations in Madras (R1·44 lakhs), for charges connected with the settlement of criminal tribes in Bombay (R·60 lakh), and for increased outlay on grain compensation allowance in the same province (R·59 lakh) and on the improvement of Government estates in Bengal (R1·41 lakhs). Budget, 1918-1

REVENUE.

(i) Provision and medical opium.

Revised, 1917-18.

17. The Budget estimate for 1917-18 provided for a revenue of R4,49·90 lakhs from the sale of 16,870 chests of opium for consumption outside India, of which 7,000 chests were to be disposed of at the monthly auctions held at Calcutta, and the balance was to be supplied to the Governments of the Straits Settlements, Hong Kong and the Netherlands Indies or sold in England for medicinal purposes. As a result of difficulties connected with freight and exchange and the large stocks which the dealers had in hand, only 530 chests, out of 2,915 offered for sale, were disposed of at the first five auctions of the year. It is expected that 4,264 chests will be sold by auction during the year and that they will fetch a revenue of R1,39·34 lakhs, i.e., an average of R3,268 a chest, or slightly more than the upset price of R3,200 which has been in force throughout the year. Arrangements have also been made for the direct supply of opium to the Governments of Siam and British North Borneo on the lines of those entered into with the other Governments named above, and the demand from the Straits Settlements has been larger than contemplated in the Budget. Taking into account opium supplied to these countries and sold in England for medicinal purposes, it is expected that about 15,700 chests will be disposed of in the current year, the proceeds amounting to R4,01·07 lakhs.

Budget, 1918-19.

18. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 anticipates a revenue of R4,10·27 lakhs from the sale of about 15,700 chests of provision and medical opium, of which 5,600 chests will be sold by public auction and the balance will be supplied to the countries named in paragraph 17 or sold in England for medicinal purposes.

(ii) Excise opium and other revenue.

19. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 does not differ materially from the Budget. Only the amount charged to local Governments on account of the cost of production of opium consumed in India is credited under this head, the difference between the actual price of issue and the cost of production forming an item of excise revenue. Owing to the increase from Rs. $7\frac{1}{2}$ to Rs. 9 a seer recently made in the price paid to cultivators for crude opium, it has been decided to raise the cost price at which opium is supplied to local Governments from Rs. 11 to Rs. 13 a seer with effect from the 1st April 1918. This accounts for the increase of R9·29 lakhs in revenue in the Budget for 1918-19 as compared with the Revised estimate for 1917-18.

Revised, 1917-

Budget, 1918-1

EXPENDITURE.

20. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 falls short of the Budget provision by R30·87 lakhs. A reduction of R22·90 lakhs is anticipated in the payments to cultivators in the United Provinces owing to the area brought under cultivation in the current year having fallen short of original expectations, and the Budget provision for the purchase of mature Malwa opium will not be utilised to the extent of R12·30 lakhs. On the other hand, there will be an excess of R2·74 lakhs in the advance payments to cultivators in certain Native States in Central India, with which arrangements have been made for the special cultivation of opium, commencing from the current year, for sale to Government in order to supplement the supply of Bengal opium. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides for an expansion of the area cultivated with poppy in the United Provinces and, in the case of the Central India States, for final payments on account of the current year's crop and for advances in respect of the cultivation in 1918.

REVENUE.

Revised, 1917-18.

21 With a view to secure the prior right of obtaining salt heavy advance payments of duty were again made by traders in Northern India from July to November 1917. Owing to the excessive accumulation of indents awaiting compliance and a reduction in output which resulted from damage to the salt sources caused by abnormal rains, it was decided in the last week of November 1917 to stop the receipt of duty and of further indents. At the same time, in order to check an acute rise in prices which had occurred in several provinces, local bodies, co-operative credit societies, native states, etc., were permitted to obtain supplies in preference to the ordinary traders and to open depôts for the sale of salt at fair prices. These measures were accompanied by an offer to refund to traders in Northern India the duty paid by them in advance of the issue of salt, provided that applications for refunds are presented before the 31st March 1918. Allowing for these factors, the revenue in Northern India in 1917-18 is expected to exceed the Budget estimate by R2,28·12 lakhs.

There will also be an increase of R20·56 lakhs in Madras owing mainly to the sale of Government salt by auction in certain factories in which stocks were low, but it will be more than set off by a decline in Bengal (R20·86 lakhs) due to a contraction of imports in consequence of freight difficulties, and in Bombay (R6·25 lakhs) as a result of the stoppage, in the latter part of the year, of the removal of Baragora salt for consumption outside the Presidency.

Budget, 1918-19.

22. The total issues of salt in 1918-19, imported as well as locally manufactured, are taken at 513 lakhs of maunds. In estimating, however, the net receipts of duty during the year allowance has been made for the advance payments made in Northern India up to November 1917 and for claims for refunds, payment of which is likely to be thrown forward from the current year. Inclusive of sale-proceeds of Government salt and other miscellaneous receipts, the Budget estimate of revenue for 1918-19 has accordingly been placed at R5,23·83 lakhs.

EXPENDITURE.

Revised, 1917-18

23. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 exceeds the Budget by R2·60 lakhs. The increase occurs in all the areas of local manufacture, viz., Northern India (R1·84 lakhs), Madras (R1·12 lakhs) and Bombay (R1·02 lakhs). It is due generally to measures undertaken to extend the salt works and improve their output in view of the present situation in regard to the supplies of salt. The extra expenditure in Madras arising from this cause is partly counterbalanced by savings in the grants for other items of expenditure. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 is more than the Revised estimate for the current year by R10·61 lakhs. The rise is attributable to further measures for extending the salt works and improving their output and to larger purchases from licensees to increase the stocks of Government salt. Provision has also been made in Northern India for an expenditure of R3 lakhs on raising and strengthening the Kayar embankments at Sambhar in order to reduce the liability of the salt works to damage from rains.

Revised, 1917.

25. The total Revised for 1917-18 is less than the Budget by R31·41 lakhs. The latter provided for a moderate increase over the revenue of the preceding year, but the considerable growth which occurred in 1915-16 and 1916-17 has been followed by a set-back in the current year in all provinces except Bombay, Bihar and Orissa and Assam. The decline is largest in Bengal (R22 lakhs) and Madras (R5·50 lakhs). The only material rise in revenue occurs in Bombay (R4·50 lakhs) and is attributed to good conditions in regard to the local industries and to large business transacted in real property. Of the total reduction of R31 lakhs, R11 lakhs are expected in the revenue from court-fee stamps, and R20 lakhs in that derived from non-judicial stamps.

Budget, 1918-1

26. The Budget for 1918-19 provides for a moderate growth in revenue in all the provinces and is taken at R28·95 lakhs higher than the Revised estimate for 1917-18.

EXPENDITURE.

27. The cost of all stamps and stamp paper supplied from England is charged under this head, and an adjustment is made in India transferring to Posts and Telegraphs the cost of stamps used for postal and telegraph purposes. Similarly the cost of revenue stamps supplied to Local Governments and Administrations is debited to them in the Provincial section of the accounts by per contra credit in the Imperial section under this head. The credits on both these accounts are shown against item I (ii) under expenditure in the table on the preceding page.

(a) Wholly Imperial (including outlay in England).

Revised,

28. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 exceeds the Budget by R3·43 lakhs. The rise is due to larger outlay in England on the manufacture of stamps and to higher prices of plain paper purchased in India for use with court-fee stamps, partly set off by an increase in the credits mentioned in paragraph 27. The decrease of R·84 lakh in the Budget for 1918-19 as compared with the Revised for the current year occurs almost entirely in the outlay in England on the manufacture of stamps.

Budget, 1918-.

(b) Divided.

Revised, 1917-18

29. The Revised estimate for the current year exceeds the Budget by Rs. 1·86 lakhs owing to a rise in the cost of manufacture of stamped paper supplied to local Governments and to provision being made for packing and freight charges on post cards, the demand for which is now met partly by local manufacture. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 does not differ materially from the Revised for the current year.

REVENUE.

(a) Wholly Imperial.

30. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 exceeds the Budget by R8·17 lakhs. The increase occurs mainly in Ajmer, Bangalore and Baluchistan, and is due partly to a rise in duties. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 does not differ materially from the Revised for 1917-18.

Revised, 1917-18.

Budget, 1918-19.

(b) Divided and wholly Provincial.

31. The favourable agricultural and economic conditions of the current year and the prohibitive prices prevailing for imported liquors have resulted in a considerable expansion of the revenue from Excise, and the Revised estimate is now taken at no less than R1,04·11 lakhs more than the Budget. The increase is shared by all the provinces except the Central Provinces and Assam, but is largest in Bombay and Madras. Part of the increase in Bombay arises from the change in the system of sales of country spirit referred to in the following paragraph.

Revised, 1917-18.

32. The total Budget for 1918-19 exceeds the Revised estimate for the current year by R85·01 lakhs. Nearly half of the increase is expected in Bombay owing to the substitution of triennial auction sales of country spirit for the present system of sales for fixed fees. The estimates allow for a moderate growth of revenue in all the other provinces, and in several of them, for an enhancement in the issue price of opium in consequence of the increased price payable by local Governments for opium obtained for internal consumption—vide paragraph 19. A special receipt of R1 lakh is also anticipated in Assam from the sale of machinery in the Jorhat distillery.

Budget, 1918-19.

EXPENDITURE.

(a) Wholly Imperial.

33. The figures show little variation.

(b) Divided and wholly Provincial.

34. The expenditure in 1917-18 does not differ materially from the Budget. An increased outlay of R1·21 lakhs in Bengal mainly on rewards is nearly counterbalanced by minor lapses in grants in several provinces. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides for normal charges of sanctioned establishments. Provision has been made for additional expenditure on the reorganisation scheme in Bengal, for revision of excise preventive establishments in the Punjab and for a special payment in Assam (R1·25 lakhs) on account of compensation to the owners of the distillery at Jorhat. The distillery will be closed from the 1st April 1918, and the contract under which it is worked provides for the plant being taken over by Government; the expenditure on this account will however be nearly set off by the receipt anticipated from the sale of machinery—vide paragraph 32.

(a) The actuals for 1914-15 and 1915-16 have, for facility of comparison, been recast in accordance with the revised classification of tariff heads introduced from the year 1916-17. The figures for these years are therefore approximate.

E

ised, 1917-18.

36. The Revised estimate of Customs revenue in 1917-18 amounts to R16,80·63 lakhs or R2,71·41 lakhs more than the Budget estimate. The effect on the import trade of war restrictions and freight difficulties has been more than counterbalanced by the general rise in the level of prices. This cause is responsible for the large receipts under cotton manufactures under which nearly half of the improvement occurs (R1,21·74 lakhs). A strong demand for rice, jute and tea from the United Kingdom and the allied countries results in an enhanced revenue from the export duties. The tariff heads other than cotton manufactures which show important excesses are manufactured articles (R20·07 lakhs), tobacco (R15·86 lakhs), sugar (R14·20 lakhs), silver bullion and coin (R12·30 lakhs), articles of food and drink (R12·18 lakhs), excise duty on cotton manufactures (R32·73 lakhs) and the export duty on rice (R15·40 lakhs).

37. The Budget estimate of Customs revenue in 1918-19 is taken at R16,22·16 lakhs, or R58·47 lakhs less than the Revised estimate for 1917-18. There will be a loss of revenue under silver bullion and coin (R17·30 lakhs) owing to the prohibition imposed during the course of 1917-18 on the import of silver into India on private account, but it will be more than set off by an increase under jute (R21·86 lakhs) by reason of the fact that receipts in 1917-18 were affected by the exemption of forward contracts from the enhanced rate of duty introduced in March 1917 and that this will not be the case in the coming year. It is assumed that while scarcity of tonnage and restrictions in regard to imports from particular countries will continue to impede the import trade, the loss of revenue arising from these causes will be set off to some extent by larger imports from other countries and an increase in the yield of our ad valorem duties owing to a further rise in prices. Apart from silver bullion and coin, the revenue from the import duties in 1918-19 is accordingly taken at R54·13 lakhs less than the Revised estimate for the current year. Important decreases occur under cotton manufactures (R26·74 lakhs) and spirits and liqueurs (R8·75 lakhs), while an increase of R7 lakhs is expected under sugar owing to the higher tariff valuation which will be in force throughout the coming year; the revenue under the first head has been specially high in the current year and it is not considered safe to assume the same scale of revenue for 1918-19.

EXPENDITURE.

Revised, 1917-18.

Budget, 1918-19.

38. The expenditure in 1917-18 is expected to be less than the Budget by R·65 lakh owing mainly to the non-utilisation of the grant for strengthening the preventive establishment in Bombay. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 includes lump grants for a general revision of the customs establishment in Karachi and for strengthening the preventive establishment in Bombay and Karachi and a larger provision for overtime allowances in Calcutta.

Revenue.

(i) Super-tax—Imperial.

39. It is anticipated that a portion of the collections in Bombay in respect of 1917-18 will be thrown forward into the following year, but in spite of this the Revised estimate for the current year falls short of the Budget by only R13·66 lakhs. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 exceeds the Revised for the current year by R12·74 lakhs. A large increase of R50·56 lakhs is expected in Bombay owing partly to the recovery of outstandings in respect of the current year's demand, but this will be largely counterbalanced by a falling off in Bengal.

(ii) Ordinary income-tax.

get, 1918-19.

40. The Revised estimate for the current year exceeds the Budget by R11·98 lakhs. The increase arises from very favourable trade conditions and the employment of additional establishments by Government for work arising out of the war, mainly in the Military Department. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 does not differ materially from the Revised for the current year.

(b) Divided.

ised, 1917-18.

41. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 is more than the Budget by R1,43·65 lakhs. The bulk of the increase is expected in Bombay (R69 lakhs), Bengal (R31 lakhs) and Madras (R15·96 lakhs), and arises from abnormal profits which have been realised in certain trades as the result of war conditions. Part of the excess in Madras represents collections of arrears. There will be minor increases of revenue in all the other provinces.

udget, 1918-19.

42. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 is taken at R24·77 lakhs more than the Revised for 1917-18. Of this increase, R16 lakhs are expected to accrue in Bombay as a result of the continuance of the prosperity of local industries. Provision has been made for a moderate growth in revenue in the other provinces, with the exception of Madras and Burma.

Expenditure.

(a) Imperial.

43. The figures show little variation. The expenditure shown against Bengal relates to temporary establishment for the collection of super-tax.

(b) Divided.

Revised, 1917-18.

Budget, 1918-19.

44. The expenditure in the current year is not expected to differ materially from the Budget grant. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 includes provision for revision of establishments in several provinces, mainly in the Punjab and Bombay.

Revised, 1917-18.

Budget, 1918-19.

45. The increase of R2·17 lakhs in the revenue in the current year as compared with the Budget estimate occurs mainly in Port Blair (R1·76 lakhs), due to better prices realised for timber, and in the North-West Frontier Province (R·87 lakh) owing to the supply of various articles of forest produce to the Military Department and the Indian Munitions Board. The Budget for 1918-19 anticipates a rise of R·52 lakh, mainly in the North-West Frontier Province, over the receipts obtained in the current year.

(b) Provincial.

Revised, 1917-18.

46. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 is more than the Budget by R55·04 lakhs. All the provinces contribute to the improvement, but it is largest in the United Provinces (R13·15 lakhs), Madras (R11·45 lakhs), Bombay (R11·07 lakhs) and Burma (R9·70 lakhs). The rise is due to increased demands for timber, resin, turpentine, tanning bark and other forest produce, mainly from the Military Department, the Munitions Board and Railways, and to the higher prices that have been realised.

Budget, 1918-19.

47. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 is R4·91 lakhs more than the Revised for the current year. Provision has been made for increased receipts in the United Provinces from the superior quality of resin which will be manufactured at a newly opened factory, for anticipated supplies to the Munitions Board, mainly in Bengal, the United Provinces and the Punjab, for a decline in Madras as compared with the high revenue obtained in the current year, and for normal receipts in the other provinces.

EXPENDITURE.

(a) Imperial (including outlay in England).

Revised, 1917-18.

Budget, 1918-19.

48. The decrease of R 2·17 lakhs in the Revised estimate for the current year as compared with the Budget is due to a lapse in the grant for the extension of departmental working in Port Blair. The Budget for 1918-19 exceeds the Revised estimate for 1917-18 by R2·69 lakhs. The grant for departmental working in Port Blair has been repeated for the next year, and provision made for some increase in ordinary expenditure.

(b) Provincial.

Revised, 1917-18.

49. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 is more than the Budget by R6·77 lakhs. The excess occurs in Bombay (R4·49 lakhs), Burma (R1·53 lakhs), the United Provinces (R1·05 lakhs) and Bengal (R·78 lakh) and is partly set off by minor savings in the other provinces except Assam. The increase in Bombay is mainly due to the construction of a forest railway, while the growth in expenditure in the other provinces is a concomitant of the larger revenue obtained from the sale of forest produce.

Budget, 1918-19.

50. The total Budget estimate for 1918-19 exceeds the Revised for the current year by R14·02 lakhs. The bulk of the increase occurs in the Punjab (R4·73 lakhs), the United Provinces (R4·34 lakhs) and Bombay (R2·93 lakhs). Provision has been made for various measures of development in view of the growing demands for forest produce. Grants have been allotted, among other objects, in Bombay for the construction of a railway line and for additional staff including a Chief Conservator and a Forest Engineer; in the Punjab for the purchase of a tramway and motor lorries and for an additional Conservator; and in the United Provinces for enhanced outlay on resin operations. There will also be minor increases in the other provinces except Assam, where the grant for the next year is taken at about the same amount as the probable expenditure in 1917-18.

Budget, 1918-19.

52. The total Revised estimate for 1917-18 is R3·25 lakhs less than the Budget forecast. There has been a check to the growth in the fees for the registration of documents in Bengal (R2·50 lakhs) and Madras (R1·13 lakhs). The estimates for 1918-19 are generally based on the revenue expected to be realised in the current year. The total Budget exceeds the Revised by R1·40 lakhs, owing mainly to provision for some recovery in Madras.

54. The revenue recorded under this head represents tributes received from the protected States, in several cases as a result of exchanges of territory and settlement of claims, and contributions made chiefly in lieu of former obligation to supply or maintain troops. The figures do not ordinarily show any important fluctuations from year to year except for advance payment of sums falling due in the ensuing year, or arrears and their recovery. The variations between the Budget and Revised estimates for the current year and between the latter and the Budget for 1918-19 are unimportant.

(a) Imperial.

Revised, 1917-18.

Budget, 1918-19.

55. The wholly Imperial expenditure shown against "Other Provinces" represents refunds and drawbacks in respect of wholly Imperial revenue (e.g. Opium, Salt, Super-tax, Customs and Tributes). The bulk of the increase of R16·76 lakhs in the Revised estimate over the Budget for 1917-18 occurs under Customs refunds and is due to drawback allowed in Bombay on imports of sugar and other articles purchased by the Military authorities for shipment overseas, and to the refund of duty on exports of jute in Bengal in connection with the exemption of back commitments from the enhanced duty introduced from March 1917. There was also a special income-tax refund of R·92 lakh to the Hyderabad State in connection with the conversion of Government securities held by it into the special form of notes mentioned in Article 214-A of the Civil Account Code. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides for some decrease in the refunds of Customs revenue and is R7·19 lakhs less than the Revised for the current year.

(b) Divided and Provincial.

Revised, 1917-18.

Budget, 1918-19.

56. The expenditure fluctuates considerably from year to year and is difficult to estimate. In 1917-18, the Budget will be exceeded by R3·56 lakhs owing chiefly to higher refunds of excise and land revenue in several provinces. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 follows generally the Revised for the current year.

(a) Imperial.

57. The wholly Imperial expenditure shown against "Other Provinces" represents Opium, Salt and Customs compensations paid to Native States and Foreign Governments, as well as Miscellaneous compensations (i.e., those of a general character and not intended to indemnify against loss of a particular kind of revenue) in provinces other than Bombay. The variations between the Budget and Revised estimates of the current year and between the latter and the Budget of next year are generally due to the fact that the salt royalty payable to Jaipur and Jodhpur and the customs compensation payable to Travancore and Cochin fluctuate respectively with reference to the actual sales of salt and the actual realisations of customs revenue. Provision has been made in the Revised estimate for the current year for a payment of R·27 lakh to the Sirohi Durbar for the lease of the Abu area.

(b) Divided and Provincial.

Revised, 1917-18. Budget, 1918-19.

58. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 exceeds the Budget by R·64 lakh owing mainly to arrear payments in Bengal. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 does not differ materially from the Revised for the current year. Provision has been made in Bengal for a payment of R·81 lakh to the Bhutan Durbar on account of compensation for the removal of liquor shops, but this is partly set off by omission of the arrear payments included in the Revised.

(a) India—Imperial.

Revised, 1917-18.

59. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 is less than the Budget by R6·76 lakhs. There is a decrease of R10 lakhs in the interest on the securities of Railway companies' provident funds recently taken over by Government, as a portion of the interest on investments was realised by some of the companies before the date of actual transfer. On the other hand, a special receipt of R3·75 lakhs is anticipated under Miscellaneous items, made up of (1) the difference between the discounted value at which British Treasury Bills were accepted as subscription to the Indian war loan in England and the value realised on their maturity and (2) the interest realised on the accumulated balance of the Trust Fund recently constituted for the pensions payable to the Surat Nawab's family.

Budget, 1918-19.

60. The total Budget for 1918-19 is taken at R3·57 lakhs more than the Revised for the current year. Provision has been made for a full year's interest on securities taken over from provident funds of Railway companies, and the special receipt in the current year in connection with the tender of Treasury Bills as subscription to the war loan has been eliminated.

(b) India—Provincial.

Revised, 1917-18.

61. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 is R·52 lakh more than the Budget for the current year. Increased recoveries in Bombay and the United Provinces in respect of agricultural loans granted in previous years will be partly set off by a decline in Assam, where it has been necessary to postpone recoveries in respect of loans granted in the last two years in connection with agricultural distress caused by floods. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides for an increase of R1·19 lakhs in Assam for the reason just stated and elsewhere for normal recoveries based on the current demand.

Budget, 1918-19.

(c) England.

Revised, 1917-18.

62. The gross interest receipts in England in 1917-18 are likely to exceed the Budget estimate by £441,200 owing to increased investments on behalf of the Paper Currency Reserve and to a rise in the interest realised from investment of the cash balances of the Home treasury, which have been larger than was anticipated in the Budget. Part of the increased receipts (£250,000) will however be utilised for raising the appropriation for the Paper Currency Reserve Depreciation Fund (vide paragraph 72 of the memorandum explaining the details of the estimates for 1917-18) from £200,000, the provision included in the Budget, to £450,000. It is estimated that with this appropriation the fund will be brought up to the full amount required for making up the deficiency in the present value of the consols held in the Paper Currency Reserve as compared with their purchase price. Allowing for this expenditure, the net receipts in the current year will exceed the Budget by £191,200.

Budget, 1918-19.

63. The interest receipts are taken in the Budget estimate for 1918-19 at £2,619,600 or £1,297,200 more than in the Revised for the current year. The Budget includes a receipt of £855,000 in respect of the special reserve of £20 million which it has been decided to constitute in the current year by investment in Treasury Bills or other short-term securities of the British Government. The balance of the increase is due to the omission of the appropriation to the Paper Currency Reserve Depreciation Fund included in the Revised estimate and interest on further investments which it is proposed to make in the ensuing year on behalf of the Paper Currency Reserve, partly set off by a smaller provision for interest on the investment of the cash balances of the Home treasury.

* Exclusive of War debt of the Home Government to be taken over by India during the year 1917-18.

Interest on ordinary debt.

Revised, 1917-18.

64. The expenditure in 1917-18 on account of interest payable on the public debt as a whole will exceed the Budget estimate by R97·05 lakhs (£647,000). The increase represents mainly the discount (R90 lakhs= £600,000) on Treasury Bills, the issue of which commenced in India on the 16th October last. The total sales of these Bills during the current year are expected to amount to R43 crores (£28⅔ million); as in the case of the ordinary loans raised in India, the face value of the bills payable on maturity is treated as debt incurred and the discount charged as Interest expenditure. Part of the increase is also due to the interest (R2·75 lakhs=£18,300) payable in respect of a temporary loan of R4 crores (£2⅔ million) obtained from the Bank of Bombay and to an increased investment in England on behalf of the Discount Sinking Fund (R5·04 lakhs=£33,600) owing to the realisation, not contemplated in the Budget, of securities of the 4½ per cent. British war loan already held in the fund.

The charges for the service of the Indian war loan for which the Budget included a provision of R90 lakhs (£600,000) are now expected to amount to R2,77 lakhs (£1,847,000) owing to a large increase in the proceeds of the loan. The larger payment to His Majesty's Government from the proceeds of the loan will however result in a reduction in the amount of the British debt for which India assumes liability in connection with her contribution of £100 million towards the cost of the war, and the excess in Interest expenditure in India will be counterbalanced by a saving in the provision for dividends and sinking fund in respect of the British war debt taken over.

Budget, 1918-19.

65. In the Budget for 1918-19 provision has been made for a full year's interest on the Indian war loan raised in the current year and for a sinking fund appropriation of R41 lakhs (£273,300) in respect of the long term loan (1929-47). A sum of R1,00 lakhs (£666,700) has been set aside for the service of the second Indian war loan to be floated in the coming year, and a further sum of R1,05 lakhs (£700,000) for the discount on the Treasury Bills which it is anticipated will be sold during the course of 1918-19 in replacement of those issued in the current year. The proceeds of the second Indian war loan will also be made over to His Majesty's Government in part payment of the British war debt for which India has assumed liability in connection with her war contribution, and the payments in England in 1918-19 in respect of India's share of the British war debt will therefore be less than in the current year by £675,000.

66. The total provision of £6 million allotted in the Budget estimate for the current year for the service of India's contribution to the war will be applied in the current and next years as follows :—

ansfers to Railway and Irrigation accounts.

67. The amount of interest transferred to the Railway and Irrigation sections of the accounts depends, firstly, on the capital expenditure; secondly, on the actual payment of interest on that portion of the debt which has been incurred specifically on account of the construction or purchase of railways or irrigation works; and, thirdly, on the rate at which interest is charged on that portion of the debt which has not been specifically raised for the above or other purpose. Our practice is to adopt, for this adjustment, the average rate of interest actually paid in respect of the whole of the non-specific debt in the latest year for which complete accounts are available. The result is that the rate adopted in calculating the Revised estimate for a year is generally somewhat different from that used for the Budget estimate: and this usually leads to a difference between the two estimates apart from that caused by a variation in the capital expenditure itself.

Revised, 1917-18.

The decrease of R58·47 lakhs (£389,800) in the Revised estimate of total interest to be transferred in 1917-18, as compared with the Budget, is due to a reduction in the rate, as well as in the capital at charge at the end of 1917-18. The increase in the total amount of interest to be transferred in 1918-19 over the Revised estimate for 1917-18 is almost wholly due to the progress of capital expenditure.

Budget, 1918-19.

Transfer to Provincial.

68. A portion of the interest on Ordinary Debt appears in the Provincial section of the accounts. Provincial Governments are authorised to grant advances to cultivators (as well as to certain other people in special cases) under various Acts, to Native States, to landholders and notabilities apart from the provisions of any law and to municipalities and local bodies (other than Presidency Corporations), out of amounts annually placed at their disposal by the Government of India. The interest actually levied on such advances is credited as Provincial revenue. But interest at a fixed rate is charged to the Local Governments on the mean between the outstanding balances of the Provincial Loan Accounts at the commencement of the year and at its close; and this is done by transferring the amount so calculated from the Imperial to the Provincial section under Interest on Ordinary Debt. This rate was raised during the current year from 4½ to 5½ per cent. with reference to the rate of interest which the Government of India have now to pay on their own borrowings. Allowing for this alteration in rate, the differences between the Budget and the Revised estimates of the amount to be transferred to the Provincial Section in the current year, and between the latter and the Budget estimate of 1918-19, are explained by the variations in the outstanding balances of the Provincial Loan Account as shown in the table under head XII.—Interest receipts.

Interest on other obligations.

Revised, 1917-18.

69. The total expenditure in 1917-18 is likely to fall short of the Budget provision by R10·82 lakhs (£72,100). There will be a reduction of R4·96 lakhs in the interest payable on the Savings Bank balance owing mainly to the present anticipation of a net withdrawal of R55 lakhs from post office savings banks during the year instead of a net deposit of R75 lakhs as contemplated in the Budget; and of R5·17 lakhs in the interest payable in respect of the provident funds of railway companies owing to some delay in the actual transfer of the funds to Government. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides for an increase of R11·39 lakhs (£75,900) over the Revised for 1917-18. It is attributable (i) to an anticipated growth in the deposits in State provident funds, (ii) to an increase in the interest creditable to the accounts in railway companies' provident funds and (iii) to a provision of R5 lakhs for bonus on post office cash certificates issued in the current year which are likely to be encashed in 1918-19.

ised, 1917-18. 70. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 exceeds the Budget by R19·35 lakhs (£129,000). An improvement of R15·90 lakhs is expected in India owing to the activity of internal trade and an increase in the revenue from state messages owing to war conditions. There is also a rise of R3·45 lakhs in England in the receipts from the Home Government under the Morley award in connection with the Eastern Mail Service.

dget, 1918-19. 71. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides for a further advance of R36·35 lakhs in the collections in India. An increase of R4·05 lakhs is also expected in England during the next year in connection with the Eastern Mail Service.

(b) Indo-European Telegraph Department.

vised, 1917-18. dget, 1918-19. 72. The small rise of R2·61 lakhs (£17,400) in the revenue in the current year as compared with the Budget estimate is due to an increase in the traffic owing to the war. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides for a small growth of R3·21 lakhs (£21,400) in the revenue.

EXPENDITURE.

(a) Indian Postal and Telegraph Department.

evised, 1917-18. 73. The expenditure in 1917-18 is likely to fall short of the Budget grant by R10·83 lakhs (£72,200). The reduction is mainly due to increased credits for the value of stores supplied to the Indian Expeditionary Forces, a lapse in the provision for conveyance of mails owing mainly to a reduction in special train services, and a smaller outlay on stores in England; partly counterbalanced by an increase in the pay of establishments owing to war conditions and in the cost of stationery and printing owing to a rise in prices.

udget, 1918-19. 74. The Budget grant for 1918-19 exceeds the Revised estimate for the current year by R48·90 lakhs (£326,000). The credits on account of the value of stores supplied to other departments will be less by R5 lakhs in consequence of smaller supplies to the Indian Expeditionary Forces and a larger provision of R7 lakhs is necessary with reference to the increase in the pay of establishments owing to war conditions. The outlay in England will also be higher by R20·67 lakhs owing to a rise in the cost of stores and a larger demand. Apart from these special items, the Budget estimate provides for sanctioned establishments and normal working expenses, together with a margin for the development of the operations of the department which are generally remunerative in character.

(b) Indo-European Telegraph Department.

Revised, 1917-18. 75. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 exceeds the Budget by R10·40 lakhs (£69,300), the rise being mainly due to the outlay on hire of, and repairs to, steamers employed on cable maintenance, an increase in the cost of establishments owing to a development of traffic, and a reduction in the net receipts in England in connection with the Joint Purse arrangement, etc. Budget, 1918-19. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 is taken at R·96 lakh (£6,400) more than the Revised estimate for the current year. An increase in the capital outlay on the construction of telegraph lines will be nearly covered by an improvement in the net receipts in England in connection with the Joint Purse arrangement, etc., and a reduced provision for repairs to the steamers employed on cable maintenance.

Revised, 1917-18.

76. The Revised estimate for the current year exceeds the Budget by R58·74 lakhs. Of this increase R44 lakhs are contributed by the seignorage on the coinage of rupees from purchased silver. There will also be a rise of R7·50 lakhs in the profit on the circulation of nickel and bronze coins, the demand for which has exceeded anticipations, and a receipt of R3 lakhs will accrue in respect of coinage executed for the Egyptian Government. The coinage of new rupees will result in an increase in the operative gains included under "other items" in the above table, but this will be counterbalanced by an increase in the debits on account of operative losses.

Budget, 1918-19.

77. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 is taken at R23·21 lakhs less than the Revised estimate for 1917-18. A moderate provision is made for seignorage on new coinage of rupees and for profit on the circulation of nickel and bronze coins.

EXPENDITURE.

Revised, 1917-18. Budget, 1918-19.

78. The excess of R10·69 lakhs in the expenditure in the current year over the Budget estimate arises from the heavy coinage of rupees from purchased silver. The Budget for 1918-19 provides for a moderate expenditure on this account and includes a lump grant of R2 lakhs for the construction of a building for the branch of the Royal Mint to be established at Bombay and for establishment and other charges for the coinage of gold.

Revised, 1917-18.

79. The expenditure in 1917-18 is likely to exceed the Budget grant by R4·83 lakhs. The increase is due to (a) a rise in the charges of the civil account department (R1·61 lakhs) owing mainly to the cost of advertising the Indian war loan, for which provision was included in the Budget under "Interest on debt," (b) the expenses of coinage and shipment to India of gold which was tendered in Australia on behalf of the Government of India instead of in India for acquisition under the Gold Import Act (R1·15 lakhs), (c) an excess in the allowance payable to the Presidency Banks owing to increased public debt work (R·85 lakh) and (d) larger expenditure on account of the Secretariats owing to the employment of officers on special duty in the Home, Army and other Departments in connection with the war and the question of constitutional reforms (R·84 lakh). The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides generally for sanctioned establishments and normal charges. The decrease of R3·10 lakhs as compared with the Revised estimate for the current year is due to the omission of the special items of expenditure included in the latter for the coinage and shipment of gold, for officers on special duty in the Secretariats and for the advertisement of the war loan. Provision for the last item has been included, along with other charges for the loan, under "Interest on debt".

Budget, 1918-19.

(b) Provincial.

Revised, 1917-18.

80. The total Revised for 1917-18 will exceed the Budget grant by R2·02 lakhs. Increases of R1·50 lakhs and R·72 lakh respectively are expected in Burma and Bihar and Orissa; in the former province owing to the deputation of officers on special duty in the Secretariats, and extra expenditure necessitated by the Viceregal visit, and in the latter on account of the cost of furniture for the new Secretariats. There will also be a rise of R·38 lakh in the Central Provinces and R·32 lakh in Madras owing to the deputation of officers on special duty, but minor savings are anticipated in the Punjab and Bengal, due in the former case to the record under Police of the salary and other charges of the officer employed in connection with the reclamation of criminal tribes, for whom provision was included under General Administration in the Budget. The variations in the other provinces are unimportant.

Budget, 1918-19.

81. The total Budget estimate for 1918-19 is only R·22 lakh more than the Revised for the current year. There will be decreases in Burma (R1·31 lakhs), Madras (R·42 lakh) and Bihar and Orissa (R·42 lakh) due to smaller outlay on officers on special duty, the omission in Burma of special expenditure incurred in the current year on account of the Viceregal visit and a reduced provision in Bihar and Orissa for the furnishing of the Secretariats. An increase of expenditure is anticipated in all the other provinces. Provision has been made for revision of Secretariat establishments in the Punjab (R·35 lakh), for a Controller of Prices in Bombay (R·50 lakh) and for additional establishment for the inspection of the accounts of police offices and Government schools and the creation of a new Department in the Secretariat in the United Provinces.

(c) England.

Revised, 1917-18.

82. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 exceeds the Budget by £120,500. The cost of stores supplied to India will be exceeded by £86,200 owing to the manufacture of currency notes for Re. 1 and Rs 2½ and a rise in the price of paper, and an expenditure of £8,800 arises in connection with the visit of the Secretary of State to India and the establishment of a Trade Commissioner's office in London. There will also be a rise of £25,500 in the charges of the Secretary of State's establishment due mainly to higher salaries necessitated by the exigencies of the war, larger payments for professional inspection of stores, an increase in the wages of labourers at the India Store Depot and the addition of a new storey to the India Office building. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 exceeds the Revised for the current year by £59,600, owing mainly to increased provision for the cost of currency notes, partly set off by the omission of the expenditure in the current year in connection with the Secretary of State's visit to India.

EXPENDITURE.

(a) Imperial.

83. The decreases against "India General" in the Revised estimate of the current year as compared with the Budget and in the Budget for 1918-19 as compared with the current year's Revised arise from the provincialization and transfer to the Government of Bengal of the charges of the Administrator General and the Official Trustee, Bengal, from the 1st October 1917.

Revised, 1917-18

Budget, 1918-19

(b) Provincial.

84. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 falls short of the Budget by R7·69 lakhs. The saving occurs in all the provinces except Madras and Bihar and Orissa where there are unimportant excesses, due in the latter to the cost of special tribunals in connection with riot cases. Among the general factors which have contributed to the decrease in expenditure may be mentioned the deputation of officers to military duty, vacancies in the sanctioned scales and the reduced rates for exchange compensation allowance. A portion of the saving is also due to the partial non-utilisation of the grants for compensation for dearness of food in the Punjab, for pleader's fees in Bengal and Bombay and for revision of establishments in the Central Provinces. The reduction in Bengal and Bombay would have been higher but for expenditure on grain compensation allowance for which there was no provision in the Budget under this head, and in the former province the charges of the Administrator General and the Official Trustee which were transferred to Provincial revenues in the current year.

Revised, 1917-18

85. The Budget for 1918-19 is R10·66 lakhs more than the Revised estimate for 1917-18. The excess is distributed over all the provinces except Bihar and Orissa. Provision has generally been made for the normal charges of sanctioned establishments. Allotments have been included for revision of pay of process-service establishments and for temporary subordinate courts in Madras (R·98 lakh); for revision of process-service and chief court establishments and other minor reforms in the Punjab (R·78 lakh); for various additional appointments in Bombay (R1·69 lakhs); and for two additional Judges for the High Court (R1·04 lakhs) and the charges of the Administrator General and the Official Trustee for the whole year (R1·08 lakhs) in Bengal.

Budget, 1918-19.

REVENUE.

(a) Imperial.

86. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 falls short of the Budget by R·22 lakh and the Budget for the next year is less than the current year's Revised by R·83 lakh. The decrease in both years is due to the provincialisation of the receipts realised by the Administrator General and the Official Trustee.

Revised, 1917-18.

Budget, 1918-19.

(b) Provincial.

87. The total revenue in the current year is likely to exceed the Budget estimate by R2·56 lakhs. The improvement occurs mainly in Bengal (R2·25 lakhs) due to an increase in magisterial fines and to the receipts of the Administrator General and the Official Trustee from the 1st October 1917. There will also be special receipts of R·35 lakh in Bihar and Orissa from the new High Court and of R·49 lakh in Madras on account of the value of unclaimed Goverment promissory notes in the hands of the Administrator General; the notes will be endowed to a hospital, their value being credited as judicial receipts and charged per contra as medical expenditure. These receipts will however be absorbed by a decline in magisterial fines in several provinces. The Budget for 1918-19 provides for a full year's receipts by the Administrator General and the Official Trustee in Bengal and for normal receipts in the other provinces.

88. The figures show little variation.

(b) Provincial.

Revised, 191

89. The total expenditure in 1917-18 is likely to exceed the Budget grant by R1·80 lakhs. A large excess of R7·24 lakhs will occur in the purchase of raw materials, mainly in Bengal (R2·71 lakhs), the Punjab (R1·48 lakhs), Bihar and Orissa (R1·26 lakhs) and Madras (R1·25 lakhs), due to increased orders from the Military and other Departments for jail-made articles and to a rise in prices. On the other hand, there will be a saving of R5·44 lakhs in the ordinary charges of jails, mainly in the Punjab (R1·80 lakhs), the United Provinces (R1·24 lakhs), Bengal (R·96 lakh) and Madras (R·69 lakh) as the result of a decrease in dietary expenses owing to the prices of food-grains having been less than anticipated in the Budget, and in some provinces to a fall in the jail population. An additional cause for the saving in the Punjab is the transfer of convicts for the formation of a labour corps in Mesopotamia. The variations in the other provinces both under manufactures and ordinary charges are unimportant.

Budget, 191

90. The Budget for 1918-19 exceeds the Revised of the current year by R2·08 lakhs. The grant is generally based on the sanctioned scales of establishment, the probable jail population and the estimated outlay on raw materials with reference to supplies anticipated to the Military and other Departments. Provision has generally been made for a rise in dietary charges and for an increase in the jail population in Bihar and Orissa in consequence of the recent riots.

REVENUE.

(a) Imperial.

Revised, 191 / Budget, 191

91. The excess of R1 16 lakhs in the Revised estimate for the current year as compared with the Budget occurs mainly in the receipts from the S. S. "Maharaja". The Budget estimate for 1918-19 closely follows the Revised for 1917-18.

(b) Provincial.

Revised, 191 / Budget, 191

92. The increase of R8·39 lakhs in the revenue in the current year over the Budget estimate is mainly due to heavy supplies of jail-made articles to the Military and other Departments in Bengal, Madras, the Punjab and Bihar and Orissa Special receipts have also accrued in the Punjab and Bombay from the supply of convict labour to arsenals, etc. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 is based on present information in regard to demands for jail-made articles from other departments. Allowance is made for some decline in Madras and Bengal from the high receipts of the current year.

93. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 is more than the Budget by R·36 lakh. There is an excess of R·95 lakh in the North-West Frontier Province owing to the entertainment of additional forces and the revision of the constabulary, but it will be nearly set off by the lapse of a grant in Bangalore for initial outlay in connection with a contemplated reorganisation scheme. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 exceeds the Revised for the current year by R3·30 lakhs. Provision has been made for the full sanctioned strength in the North-West Frontier Province, and for a revised scale of pay and a reorganisation scheme in Bangalore. There is also a minor increase in expenditure in Baluchistan.

Revised, 1917

Budget,

(b) Provincial.

94. The expenditure in the current year is expected to fall short of the Budget grant by R27·94 lakhs. The saving occurs in all the provinces except in Bihar and Orissa where there is an increase of R2·05 lakhs from the entertainment of additional police in connection with the recent riots. A substantial portion of the reduction in expenditure occurs in Bengal (R11·54 lakhs) due mainly to the non-utilisation of the lump grants included in the Budget for additional police and reforms. Among the general causes of the decrease in other provinces are the non-filling up of vacancies in the executive forces, partly on account of difficulties in recruitment, and the deputation of officers to military duty. A portion of the saving is also due (1) to the recoveries in respect of police supplied to the Port Trust, Municipalities and other bodies in Bombay being taken in the Revised estimate in reduction of expenditure instead of to the receipt head (R2·53 lakhs), (2) to a lapse in the grant for reclamation of criminal tribes in the Punjab and (3) the postponement till the 1st April 1918 of a reorganisation scheme in the Central Provinces for which provision was included in the Budget. The saving in Bombay and the United Provinces has been partly absorbed by the grant of grain compensation allowance in the former province and by an increase in the pay of constables introduced in the latter from the 1st January 1918.

Revised, 1917-

95. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 is taken at R44·78 lakhs more than the Revised for the current year. The excess is distributed over all the provinces and provision has been made for the full cost of sanctioned establishments and of the various schemes already introduced including in the Central Provinces the reorganisation scheme which has recently been sanctioned and will be given effect to from the 1st April 1918. A considerable increase of R15·01 lakhs is anticipated in Bengal owing to allotments for various schemes including the completion of the reorganisation of the subordinate and river police, the raising of the reserve of constables and head constables in the province and an increase in the pay of the Calcutta force. Allotments for urgent improvements have also been made in the other provinces, e.g., for the reorganisation of the District Police in Bombay (R2·25 lakhs), for the introduction of new schemes in Burma (R1·42 lakhs), and for additional force including armed police and for a military camp in Bihar and Orissa (R2·20 lakhs). Provision has been made for larger grant of grain compensation allowance in Bombay (R1·11 lakhs) and the Punjab (R1·01 lakhs) and for increased outlay on the scheme for the reclamation of criminal tribes in the latter province (R1·35 lakhs).

[Revi]sed, 1917-18.

97. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 falls short of the Budget by R·71 lakh. There will be a decrease of R2·32 lakhs in Bombay owing mainly to the adjustment in reduction of expenditure of the recoveries in respect of police supplied to the Port Trust, Municipalities, etc., but it will be largely set off by minor increases in almost all the other provinces including recoveries on account of punitive police in Burma and Bihar and Orissa. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 exceeds the Revised of the current year by R6·12 lakhs. The increase is due to recoveries on account of punitive police in the parts of Bihar and Orissa affected by the recent riots, partly set off by smaller recoveries on the same account in Burma and the Punjab.

EXPENDITURE.

98. The total Revised estimate for 1917-18 does not differ materially from the Budget. A decrease of R1·80 lakhs in Bengal due mainly to a reduction in the charges of pilot establishments as a result of the present trade conditions is nearly counterbalanced by an increase of R1·65 lakhs in Burma due to a larger outlay on stores owing to a rise in prices and to the higher cost of maintenance of light houses and light ships. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides for an increase in the charges of pilot establishments in Bengal and is taken at R·99 lakh more than the Revised for the current year.

Budget, 1918-19.

REVENUE.

99. The falling-off of R1·83 lakhs in the revenue in 1917-18 as compared with the Budget estimate is chiefly due to the unfavourable conditions of sea-borne trade. Credit has been taken in Bengal for the value of a launch made over to the Military Department. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 does not differ materially from the Revised for the current year.

Revised, 1917-18

100. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 is less than the Budget by R3·27 lakhs. The latter included a reserve provision of R2·90 lakhs, from which R1·78 lakhs have been allotted to Provincial Governments for non-recurring outlay, while R·19 lakh has been applied to expenditure on sundry objects such as model school buildings at Ajmer, etc., which is recorded under "45—Civil Works." The balance of the decrease in expenditure is due to lapses in the reserve and in ordinary grants.

101. The reserve of R2·90 lakhs provided in the Budget for 1917-18 out of the recurring appropriation of R154 lakhs made from Imperial revenues up to the end of the current year for the improvement of education, will be utilised as shown below to the extent of R2·47 lakhs and the balance of R·43 lakh will lapse:—

	Lakhs of R.
(i) Assigned to Provincial Governments for non-recurring expenditure	1·78
(ii) Allotted for non-recurring expenditure in minor administrations, etc.	·29
(iii) Balance which is likely to be allotted to definite objects before the close of the year	·40
Total	2·47

Budget, 1918-19.

102. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 exceeds the Revised for the current year by R4·17 lakhs, the increase being mainly due to provision for grants to certain schools in the North-West Frontier Province and Bangalore; for expenditure in minor administrations from the fresh Imperial grant for development of primary education referred to below; and a reserve of R2·77 lakhs.

103. Of the special appropriation of R154 lakhs mentioned in paragraph 101, R149·87 lakhs have already been distributed among the various provinces, etc., to meet recurring expenditure. The balance of R4·13 lakhs has been allotted as follows in the Budget estimate of the ensuing year:—

	Lakhs of R.
(i) Assigned to Provincial Governments for non-recurring expenditure	2·13
(ii) Allotted to minor administrations	·23
(iii) Reserve	1·77
Total	4·13

It is proposed to make a further recurring appropriation from Imperial revenues of R30 lakhs from the year 1918-19 for expenditure on the development of primary education. This amount has been allotted as follows:—

	Lakhs of R.
(i) Assigned to Provincial Governments—vide distribution by Provinces in paragraph 225	28·50
(ii) Assigned to minor administrations	·50
(iii) Reserve	1·00
Total	30·00

(b) Provincial.

Revised, 1917-18.

104. The total expenditure in 1917-18 is expected to be R32·68 lakhs less than the Budget estimate. The latter included special allotments under this head, aggregating about R138 lakhs, from the recurring and non-recurring assignments made from Imperial revenues in recent years for the development and improvement of education. These allotments are expected to be utilised to the extent of about R135 lakhs, R116 lakhs of the expenditure being recorded under Education, and the balance under Civil Works. Under the former head, there is thus a decrease of R22 lakhs as compared with the Budget provision in the outlay from special Imperial grants; and the expenditure from other Provincial resources will accordingly fall short of the corresponding Budget provision by about R10½ lakhs. This decrease is chiefly due to lapses in ordinary grants in Bombay, Bengal and Madras, partly counterbalanced by increased expenditure in the Central Provinces.

Budget, 1918-19.

105. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 exceeds the Revised for the current year by R121·50 lakhs, of which R28·50 lakhs represent expenditure from the fresh appropriation of R30 lakhs for the development of primary education. The expenditure in 1918-19 from the previous Imperial assignments will be about R30 lakhs more than in 1917-18, the provision made in the Budget under Education amounting to R146 lakhs against a probable outlay of R116 lakhs in the current year. The provision in the Budget for 1918-19 for expenditure from ordinary Provincial resources is thus about R63 lakhs more than in the Revised of the current year. The increase is distributed over almost all the provinces, but is largest in Bombay (R33 lakhs) and Madras (R13 lakhs). Provision has generally been made for an expansion of the expenditure on education in various directions, chiefly by grants to schools. Special allotments have been made of R2·87 lakhs in Madras on account of grants to local bodies for buildings for secondary and elementary schools; R2·00 lakhs in the Punjab for grants to local bodies for new schools; and in Bombay of R15 lakhs for grants out of the extra revenue which will be obtained from a change in the system of sales of country spirit (vide paragraph 32), R2·00 lakhs for the introduction of compulsory primary education in municipal areas, R3·00 lakhs for grants to local and municipal boards for increased pay and staff, and of R1·93 lakhs for grants to municipalities for primary schools maintained by them.

106. The following table shows the progress made by the Provincial Governments in utilising the various non-recurring grants given from Imperial revenues in recent years. To simplify the position, it has been assumed that the whole of the recurring grants for any year are fully utilised before any expenditure is debited against the non-recurring grants.

Owing to the need for economy, no material progress with the spending of these grants is likely to be made in the ensuing year. As stated above, however, a substantial provision is being made for further expenditure from ordinary Provincial resources during the next year. The minus figures against some of the provinces indicate that it will not be possible to utilise fully the recurring grants from Imperial revenues for educational expenditure.

108. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 exceeds the Budget by R2·56 lakhs A special credit of R3·50 lakhs is expected in Bombay owing to the refund of a grant made to the Victoria Jubilee Technical Institute in 1915. The Budget included a provision of R·89 lakh in Madras for fees from private secondary schools to be taken over under Government management; no receipts on this account will be realised as the scheme has not been brought into effect in the current year. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 is less than the Revised for the current year by R1·49 lakhs. The special receipt in Bombay included in the Revised for 1917-18 has been omitted and the provision for fees from secondary schools in Madras to be taken over under Government management has been repeated. Allowance has been made generally for a further growth in receipts in the other provinces.

109. The saving of R1·77 lakhs in the Revised estimate for the current year as compared with the Budget arises from the decision to debit to the Military Department the cost of additional chaplains for war hospitals and hospital ships in Bombay for which provision was included in the Budget under "Ecclesiastical" (R1·09 lakhs) and from minor savings in some other provinces.

EXPENDITURE.

(a) Imperial (India and England).

Revised, 1917-18.
Budget, 1918-19.

110. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 does not differ materially from the Budget. The Budget for 1918-19 includes provision for a new women's hospital in Baluchistan and for some increase in grants to hospitals in Delhi.

(b) Provincial.

Revised, 1917-18.

111. The expenditure in 1917-18 is expected to be less than the Budget by R·71 lakh. There will be excesses of R1·61 lakhs in Bengal due to an increased grant to the Belgatchia Medical College and the record under Medical of contributions to nursing associations for which Budget provision was included under Miscellaneous; and of R1·07 lakhs in Bihar and Orissa owing to the charges of the newly constructed European Lunatic Asylum and to grants made to hospitals and dispensaries from the reserve provision included under Miscellaneous. On the other hand, a saving of R2·15 lakhs is anticipated in the Punjab owing to the record under Civil Works of a contribution to the King Edward Memorial Fund for which provision was made in the Budget under Medical, and to a lapse in the allotment for extensions of certain hospitals. Minor variations in the other provinces will result in a further saving as compared with the Budget.

Budget, 1918-19.

112. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 is taken at R9·92 lakhs more than the Revised for the current year. Provision has been made for the cost of sanctioned establishments and for normal charges generally; for expenditure in connection with the transfer of headquarter hospitals to Government management (R2·50 lakhs) and for grants to local bodies for medical buildings (R1·50 lakhs) in Madras; for quarters for medical subordinates and improvement of hospitals in the Central Provinces (R1·85 lakhs); for a grant to the Bombay Municipality for the construction of an infectious diseases hospital (R1·78 lakhs); and for the establishment of new dispensaries in the Punjab (R1 lakh).

REVENUE.

113. The figures show little variation.

(b) Provincial.

Revised, 1917-18.

114. The increase of R1·76 lakhs in the Revised for the current year over the Budget arises from larger receipts from college fees and paying patients in several provinces. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides for an increase of R·72 lakh in Madras on account of contributions from local bodies in connection with the transfer of headquarter hospitals to Government management.

EXPENDITURE.

(a) Imperial (India and England).

ised, 1917-18.

115. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 is less than the Budget by R5·02 lakhs. The decrease is largely nominal and is due to the assignment to Provincial Governments of R4·55 lakhs out of the reserve of R5·67 lakhs for sanitary expenditure, provision for which was included in the Imperial section in the Budget estimate. There will be increases of R1·57 lakhs in Delhi due mainly to allotments for sanitary improvements, of which R·89 lakh was from the reserve provision mentioned above; and of R·96 lakh in the charges of the Central Research Institute at Kasauli, owing to a large purchase of chemicals. These excesses will be more than set off by a saving of R1·50 lakhs in the grant to the Indian Research Fund and by minor lapses in other grants.

116. The reserve of R5·67 lakhs provided in the Budget for 1917-18 out of the recurring appropriation of R51 lakhs from Imperial revenues for the improvement of sanitation will be utilised as shown below:—

[Lakhs of rupees.]

(i) Assigned to Provincial Governments for non-recurring outlay as follows:—
(a) to the United Provinces for the improvement of the pilgrim route to Badrinath and Kedarnath	1·00
(b) to Bengal for water-supply in Midnapore .	1·00
(c) to the Punjab for various sanitary measures .	1·20
(d) to Bombay (·75) and the Central Provinces (·60) for the relief of certain congested areas	1·35
		4·55
(ii) To Delhi for sanitary improvements, etc. . .		·89
(iii) To Coorg for drainage schemes		·23
TOTAL .		5·67

Budget, 1918-19.

117. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 exceeds the Revised for the current year by R9·92 lakhs. Provision has been made for the cost of sanctioned establishments and normal charges generally; and for a reserve of R8·08 lakhs. The reduction of R1·47 lakhs in the expenditure in Delhi is due to the absence of the special outlay mentioned in paragraph 115.

118. Out of the special appropriation of R51 lakhs referred to in paragraph 116, R37·92 lakhs have been assigned permanently to Provincial Governments or allotted for outlay in minor administrations. From the balance of R13·08 lakhs, R5 lakhs will be paid in 1918-19 to the Indian Research Fund; and R8·08 lakhs will be held in reserve to meet pressing demands that may come forward during the ensuing year.

(b) Provincial.

Revised, 1917-18.

119. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 does not differ materially from the Budget. The latter included special allotments aggregating about R36 lakhs for outlay from recurring and non-recurring grants made from Imperial revenues for the development of sanitation. The corresponding expenditure is now estimated at R39 lakhs inclusive of expenditure from the assignments made during the current year as stated in paragraph 116. Of this amount, R36 lakhs only are recorded under Sanitation, the balance being shown under Civil Works. It is therefore expected that the provision for expenditure from ordinary Provincial resources will be fully utilised. The Revised estimate in Madras includes a payment of R1·50 lakhs to the Madras Corporation for water-supply and drainage works for which there was no provision in the Budget.

Budget, 1918-19.

120. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 exceeds the Revised for the current year by R20·44 lakhs. The provision under Sanitation for expenditure from special Imperial grants amounts to about R43 lakhs against a probable expenditure of R36 lakhs in the current year. Provision has generally been made for the full cost of sanctioned establishments as well as for an expansion of outlay in aid of sanitary schemes in several provinces, Madras, the Central Provinces and the Punjab being the only provinces which provide for a material decrease in the total expenditure. A considerable increase (R16·37 lakhs) is anticipated in Bombay owing to allotments proposed for sanitary schemes from the extra revenue which will be obtained from a change in the system of sales of country spirit—vide paragraph 32. Allotments have also been made in Bengal for measures for combating malaria.

121. The following table shows the progress made by the Provincial Governments in utilising the various non-recurring grants made from Imperial revenues in recent years (beginning from 1911-12) in aid of sanitation. To simplify the position, it has been assumed that the recurring grants are fully utilised before any expenditure is debited against the non-recurring grants; and the minus figure in 1917-18 and 1918-19 against some of the provinces indicates that the recurring grants will not be spent in full during the year.

No material expenditure from the special grants is expected in the current and next years. Only three of the provinces expect to utilise in 1918-19 a portion of the unspent balances of the non-recurring grants; while in Assam, the recurring grant will not be spent in full.

Revenue.

(a) Imperial.

122. The increase of R1·20 lakhs in the Revised estimate for the current year as compared with the Budget is mainly due to heavy war demands for anti-sera and vaccine. The Budget for 1918-19 provides for some decrease in the revenue now estimated for the current year.

Revised, 1917-18.

Budget, 1918-19.

(b) Provincial.

123. The variations between the Budget and Revised estimates for the current year and between the latter and the Budget for the next year occur mainly in the receipts from the sale of quinine in the Punjab.

124. The Imperial outlay shown against "Other Provinces" consists of the charges of the Political Residency at Aden and certain other expenditure—mainly in connection with political refugees and State prisoners—in several provinces.

(a) Imperial—India and England.

Revised, 1917-18.

125. The expenditure in 1917-18 is likely to exceed the Budget estimate by R65·67 lakhs. The latter included a provision of R45 lakhs on account of the South Persia Rifles, a corps raised to assist the Persian Government in maintaining order in tracts in which British interests are specially concerned with reference to present war conditions; the expenditure is borne in moieties between the Home and Indian Governments and the Indian share is now estimated at R1,35 lakhs inclusive of R32·25 lakhs for outlay which was incurred in 1916-17 but which will be brought to account in the current year. On the other hand, other political expenditure in Persia arising from war conditions will be less than the Budget by R26·73 lakhs. There is also a lapse in the North-West Frontier Province, part of which arises from the record under Police of the charges for the revision of the Frontier Constabulary for which Budget provision was included under Political; but it will be more than covered by increases under other items.

Budget, 1918-19.

126. The total Budget for 1918-19 is more than the Revised for the current year by R51·92 lakhs. An increase is expected in the political expenditure in Persia, but it will be counterbalanced to some extent by a reduction in the Indian share of the outlay on the South Persia Rifles owing to the omission of the expenditure in 1916-17 included in the Revised estimate for the current year.

(b) Provincial.

Revised, 1917-18.

Budget, 1918-19.

127. The saving of R5·91 lakhs in the Revised estimate for the current year as compared with the Budget occurs mainly in the special expenditure in Burma in connection with the administration and proper control of the North-East Frontier. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 exceeds the Revised for the current year by R5·24 lakhs owing to the inclusion of normal provision for the same item of expenditure.

(a) Imperial (India and England).

...ed, 1917-18.

128. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 is less than the Budget by R1·39 lakhs. Part of the saving is due to an assignment of R1 lakh made to the Punjab Provincial revenues by transfer from an allotment from the wheat profits included in the Budget for direct Imperial expenditure by the Agricultural Adviser. There will also be a lapse in the North-West Frontier Province in the provision for outlay from the wheat profits and in the grant for the creation of a separate Veterinary Department. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 is more than the Revised for the current year by R·99 lakh. The grant for the Veterinary Department has been repeated in the North-West Frontier Province and provision made for the expenditure of the unspent balance of the share of the wheat profits allotted to that province.

129. The total Revised estimate for 1917-18 is less than the Budget by R23·98 lakhs. Of this decrease, R17·94 lakhs occurs in the allotments made from the profits of the wheat scheme, the local Governments concerned expecting to spend R4·26 lakhs only in the current year against a Budget provision of R22·20 lakhs. Unimportant lapses are also expected in the ordinary grants in several provinces. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 exceeds the Revised for the current year by R20·85 lakhs of which R9·84 lakhs represent increased expenditure proposed from the unspent balance of the wheat profits. Special allotments have also been made in almost all the provinces from ordinary Provincial resources for the expansion of the operations of the agricultural and allied departments.

130. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 does not differ materially from the Budget. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides for an anticipated supply of serum to Egypt and the Soudan; part of the increase in the Budget for 1918-19 as compared with the current year's Revised is also due to the fact that supplies to Government Departments of products of the Bacteriological laboratory at Muktesar are now charged for.

Budget, 1918-19.

131. The increases in the Revised estimate for 1917-18 as compared with the Budget and in the Budget for 1918-19 as compared with the current year's Revised occur mainly in the Punjab in connection with a scheme for the sale of wheat seed to cultivators through the Agricultural Department.

132. The figures of expenditure shown against "Other Provinces" in the table on the preceding page represent outlay incurred in the several provinces in connection with ethnographical survey and census operations, as well as the cost of the Archæological Department in Burma.

EXPENDITURE.

(a) Imperial—India and England.

Revised, 1917-18.

133. The total expenditure in 1917-18 will be less than the Budget by R1·54 lakhs. Savings are anticipated in the grant for the Survey of India (R4·17 lakhs) owing to a larger programme of work undertaken for other Departments and a consequent curtailment in the operations chargeable to this head, and in the outlay on stores in England (R1·36 lakhs). Part of the saving will be absorbed by the cost of the Wheat Commissioner and his establishment and special archæological expenditure. The increase of R1·51 lakhs in the Budget for 1918-19 as compared with the Revised for the current year is due to a higher provision for the purchase of stores in England.

Budget, 1918-19

(b) Provincial.

134. The total Revised estimate for 1917-18 falls short of the Budget by R·81 lakh. A special expenditure of R1·32 lakhs is anticipated in Bengal on the purchase of quinine in Java in order to replenish the stocks which have fallen low, but it will be more than covered by savings in ordinary grants in several provinces, mainly Madras and Bengal The Budget estimate for 1918-19 is taken at R18·14 lakhs more than the Revised for the current year. Provision is made in Bengal for a further expenditure of R11·93 lakhs on the purchase of quinine in Java. Apart from this expenditure the excess in the Budget for 1918-19 over the Revised amounts to R7·53 lakhs, the bulk of which occurs in Bengal and Madras. Allotments have been made for the development of industries in the former province and in the latter for increased expenditure on industrial schools, for the establishment of a large soap factory and for minor increases in expenditure on other objects.

Revised, 1917-18.

Budget, 1918-19.

REVENUE.

(a) Imperial.

135. The figures show little variation.

(b) Provincial.

136. The Revised estimate for the current year exceeds the Budget by R16·64 lakhs. An improvement of R18·29 lakhs is anticipated in Bengal owing to larger sales of sulphate of quinine for which there has been a heavy demand from the public and the Military Department, but there will be a decline of R2·01 lakhs in Madras, mainly in the same item of receipt. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides for a decrease of R5·69 lakhs as compared with the Revised for the current year. A decline is anticipated in Bengal from the high revenue obtained in the current year, but provision has been made for normal scale of receipts from quinine and for proceeds from the sale of soap in Madras.

140. The figures of Imperial revenue shown against "Other Provinces" represent the receipts of certain abolished funds, the assets and liabilities of which were taken over by the Government, as well as the subscriptions paid by members of the Indian Civil Service for securing certain pensionary benefits for their families. The charges on account of such pensions as well as of the pensions of the abolished funds are recorded in the accounts as Imperial expenditure.

EXPENDITURE.

(a) Imperial—India and England.

Revised, 1917-

141. The expenditure in the current year will be less than the Budget by R3·74 lakhs, the decrease occurring in England in the pensions of retired officers of the Uncovenanted Service and in the annuities and pensions payable from the Indian civil, military and medical funds. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 closely follows the Revised for the current year.

(b) Provincial.

Revised, 1917-18

142. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 does not differ materially from the Budget, a rise in payments in Bombay owing to an increase in the amounts of new pensions sanctioned being set off by lapses in some other provinces. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides for the normal growth of the retired list.

REVENUE.

(a) Imperial.

Revised, 1917-1

143. The decrease of R·87 lakh in the Revised estimate for the current year as compared with the Budget occurs in England and is due to smaller payment of leave allowances and a consequent reduction in the recoveries of subscriptions towards the Indian Civil Service family pensions. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 closely follows the Revised for the current year.

EXPENDITURE.

(a) Imperial—India and England.

145. The total Imperial expenditure in 1917-18, exclusive of the charges of the commercial departments, is likely to exceed the Budget provision by R18·97 lakhs, the rise being due mainly to a larger purchase of stationery to meet an increased demand and higher prices. A small excess is also anticipated in the outlay on the Government presses. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides for some reduction of the expenditure on stationery.

Revised, 1917-.

Budget, 1918-1

(b) Provincial.

146. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 is less than the Budget by R·89 lakh as the result of variations in several provinces, mainly in the cost of stationery supplied from central stores. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides for sanctioned establishments and for an increase in the outlay on stationery in all provinces owing to continued high prices.

Revised, 1917-1

Budget, 1918-19

REVENUE.

147. The Imperial revenue shown against "Other Provinces" represents recovery of the value of stationery supplied to railways and to municipalities and other local bodies. The Revised estimate of Imperial revenue for 1917-18 provides for an increase in the recoveries for supplies of stationery with reference to present prices. The figures do not otherwise show any important variation.

148. This head normally records the comparatively small sums which have to be brought to account owing to the fact that the remittances from India to England by means of council bills and transfers, and the remittances in the opposite direction by sterling bills and transfers, are not effected exactly at the rate of 16 pence to the rupee. It may be mentioned that any gain derived from remittances on account of the Gold Standard Reserve is credited to the Reserve and not to general revenues.

Revised, 1917-18.

149. During the current year, Council drafts have been sold by the Secretary of State at fixed rates, which stood at 1*s*. $4\frac{1}{4}$d. per rupee in the case of immediate telegraphic transfers and 1*s*. $4\frac{5}{32}$d. per rupee in the case of deferred transfers and bills till the close of August, when they were raised to 1*s*. 5*d*. and 1*s*. $4\frac{29}{32}$d. respectively. These high rates realised by the Secretary of State for drafts on India result in a gain of R1,63 lakhs from exchange, apart from a small sum (R6·45 lakhs) creditable to the Gold Standard Reserve. The rate of 1*s*. 5*d*. per rupee has also been adopted in the latter part of the year for postal and money order transactions with countries having a sterling exchange, for recoveries in respect of funds supplied in India on behalf of Colonial Governments, and some other miscellaneous transactions. There will be a further gain of about R40 lakhs from these sources. On the other hand, a loss of R20 lakhs is anticipated from the provision of funds for political and military expenditure in Persia. It has also been decided to adjust under this head by deduction from the gain by exchange the actual loss sustained on some of our rupee coinage by reason of high silver prices. This loss, which arises when the outturn in rupees is less than the purchase price of the silver plus the cost of coinage, is estimated for the current year at R33 lakhs, the net gain from exchange thus amounting to R1,50 lakhs. In the Budget estimate for the next year no provision is made, following usual practice, for either a gain or a loss from exchange.

* Includes R75 lakhs on account of freight-tax which was shown in the Budget estimate for 1917-18 under "XXVI—State Railways—Gross Traffic Receipts."

150. Charges in connection with the remittance of Government treasure are Imperial in all provinces; so is the discount paid, or the premium levied, in connection with the sale of bills at treasuries and currency offices to facilitate trade remittances of funds. Extraordinary items of revenue realised, or of expenditure incurrred, under this head in the various provinces are also treated as Imperial, if they exceed R10,000 in amount. The proceeds of the freight tax on goods traffic by railways and inland steam vessels imposed in March 1917 are shown under Miscellaneous as Imperial receipts.

EXPENDITURE.

(a) India—Imperial.

Revised, 1917-18.

151. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 exceeds the Budget by R18·12 lakhs. A payment of R10·02 lakhs was made to the Mysore Durbar in respect of the surplus revenues of the Bangalore Assigned Tract for past years in consequence of a recalculation of education and sanitation charges in that area; provision for the payment was made in the Revised estimate for 1916-17, but it was deferred to the current year. An expenditure of R3·92 lakhs is expected on account of special commissions of enquiry, viz., the Industrial Commission, the Calcutta University Commission, the Sedition Committee, the Coal Committee, the Public Works Reorganisation Committee, and the conferences on English teaching in secondary schools and agricultural education. Charges for the remittance of treasure will show a rise of R1·58 lakhs owing to heavy demands for rupees for trade purposes and military requirements, and the movements of coin thereby necessitated. Expenses on the repatriation of hostile aliens and on the transport "Golconda" and other miscellaneous items connected indirectly with the war will cause an excess of R2·14 lakhs over the Budget, while an outlay of R1·60 lakhs will be entailed in connection with the Secretary of State's visit. On the other hand, the bulk of the reserve provision of R1·15 lakhs for unforeseen charges in Baluchistan and Delhi, which was provided in the Budget under Miscellaneous, has been appropriated to meet sanctioned outlay under other heads of account.

Budget, 1918-19.

152. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides for some reduction in the charges for remittance of treasure; for miscellaneous expenditure connected with the war likely to be incurred in the ensuing year; for the probable outlay of the commissions of enquiry mentioned in the preceding paragraph; and for normal expenditure on other items. A reserve provision of R·50 lakh has been entered in Delhi for unforeseen requirements.

(b) India—Provincial.

Revised, 1917-18.

153. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 is less than the Budget by R11·08 lakhs. The decrease is mainly due to the record under other heads of account of most of the expenditure incurred against the lump grants for grain compensation allowance and against the various other reserves which were included in the Budget estimates of several provinces under Miscellaneous; and to a lapse in the allotment for relief of distress in Bengal and for gratuitous relief in Assam. On the other hand there have been special charges in Bengal in connection with the write-off of loans (R1·45 lakhs) and in the Punjab (R8·19 lakhs) on account of grants to district boards in connection with a scheme of consolidated grants, the Budget provision for which was included under Civil Works.

Budget, 1918-19.

154. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides generally for normal charges and for the usual reserves for unforeseen expenditure in most provinces. In Bengal, the Central Provinces and the United Provinces, lump allotments have again been made for grain compensation charges, and in the last province for other indirect famine expenditure also. A special allotment of R2 lakhs has been made in the same province for a contribution to the Kumaon District Board on account of profits from the Kumaon forests which are intended to be applied to the benefit of the inhabitants of the locality.

(c) England.

155. The increase in the Revised estimate of the current year as compared with the Budget represents mainly the value of stores lost in transit between England and India. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 makes no provision for possible losses.

REVENUE.

(a) India—Imperial.

Revised, 1917-.

156. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 exceeds the Budget by R45·42 lakhs. The Revised includes a receipt of R96·55 lakhs from the freight-tax on goods carried by railways and inland steam vessels imposed in March 1917, for which a provision of R75 lakhs was included in the Budget under "State Railways : gross traffic receipts." There has also been a special receipt of R20·60 lakhs in connection with the acquisition of gold imported into India at the rate of R14-8 per £, the gain arising from the sale of raw gold in Bombay in the early part of the year and the provision of rupee credits in India in favour of Japanese merchants in return for a transfer of raw gold held in Bombay on behalf of the Bank of England. Apart from these special transactions, the increase occurs mainly in the special receipts from the sale of town sites in the Punjab, and in the receipts from the sales of bills owing to an increased demand for remittances of funds. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides for a growth of R4·02 lakhs in the proceeds of the freight-tax and for normal receipts in other respects.

(b) India—Provincial.

Revised, 1917-18

157. The total revenue in 1917-18 is likely to exceed the Budget estimate by R3·51 lakhs. The increase occurs in the credits to revenue on account of unclaimed deposits and under sale-proceeds of lands and houses in several provinces. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides generally for normal receipts.

Budget, 1918-1

(c) England.

Revised, 1917-18.

158. The increase in the Revised estimate for 1917-18 as compared with the Budget is due to compensation received from the owners of a vessel, which collided with another carrying a cargo of wheat shipped by Government, and to large recoveries on account of inspection of stores by the Store Department of the India Office for other Government Departments. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 omits the former item as well as the special receipt in the current year from the profits of the wheat scheme.

Revised, 1917-18.

159. The expenditure in the current year under the head Famine Relief is now estimated at R·98 lakh, the principal items being an outlay of (1) R·50 lakh in the Punjab in connection with fodder concessions, and (2) R·21 lakh in Bihar and Orissa and R·20 lakh in Assam on relief operations in certain districts.

160. The amount available for famine insurance in 1917-18 accordingly amounts to R149·02 lakhs of which R53·07 lakhs will be spent on protective works and R95·95 lakhs will be appropriated for the reduction or avoidance of debt.

Budget, 1918-19.

161. In the Budget estimate for 1918-19 provision has been made as usual for a total grant of R150 lakhs under this group head. Out of this amount, a sum of R6·06 lakhs will be required to meet expenditure debitable to the head Famine Relief in connection mainly with fodder concessions in the Punjab, and R60·92 lakhs have been allotted for the construction of protective works. The remainder, viz., R83·02 lakhs, will be utilised for the avoidance of debt.

Construction of Protective Railways.

162. The small minus figure entered in the Budget estimate for 1918-19 represents the excess in the sale-proceeds of surplus stores of the Dharmapuri-Hosur extension of the Morappur-Dharmapuri Railway over the outlay during the year. The small outlay in the Revised estimate for 1917-18 arises from a reduction in the sales of stores.

Construction of Protective Irrigation Works.

Revised, 1917-18.

163. In the Budget estimate for 1917-18 an allotment of R63 lakhs was made for outlay on Protective Irrigation works, the whole amount being met from the Famine Insurance grant. The probable expenditure, according to the Revised estimate, will amount to R53·06 lakhs owing mainly to slower progress of work on the Nira Right Bank canal in Bombay, the Tandula canal and certain tank projects in the Central Provinces and the Tribeni canal in Bihar and Orissa. The entire outlay will be recorded in the Famine Relief and Insurance section of the accounts.

164. In the Budget estimate for 1918-19, the allotment for Protective Irrigation works is taken at R61 lakhs, the whole amount being met from the Famine Insurance grant. The distribution of the grant of R61 lakhs is given in the table below.

Revised, 1917.

Gross Receipts.

166 The Budget estimate of Gross Receipts for 1917-18 was taken at R62 crores, exclusive of the receipts from Freight tax, or R20 lakhs lower than the probable receipts of the previous year as then estimated. It was based on the assumption that the reductions effected in passenger train services would result in some diminution of earnings and that the favourable circumstances of the year 1916-17 might not be wholly repeated. Allowance was however made for development of traffic on new lines and extensions of recent construction. The result has proved much more favourable than was anticipated, and the Revised estimate is now placed at R68·25 crores, or R6·25 crores higher than the Budget. This substantial improvement occurs on almost all the principal railways and is attributable mainly to larger receipts from the carriage of troops and military stores, and from wheat and coal traffic. The enhancement of fares and freights and the withdrawal of concessions have also contributed to a certain extent to the exceptionally good earnings of the current year. The balance of the increase in the Revised estimate of gross receipts as shown in the table on the preceding page occurs in the transactions of Railway Sinking Funds in England, and is set off by a corresponding excess in expenditure—vide paragraph 172.

Working Expenses.

167. The Revised estimate of Working Expenses for 1917-18 stands at R35 lakhs below the Budget estimate, a remarkable result considering that receipts are expected to exceed the Budget by R6 25 crores. The cause of the reduction is to be found in the increasing difficulty of obtaining railway material from England in consequence of which repairs and renewals of permanent-way and rolling-stock have been considerably restricted.

Surplus Profits.

168. The increase of R32 lakhs in the provision for payment of surplus profits to companies follows on the improvement in their net earnings in the last quarter of the preceding year.

Budget, 1918-19.

Gross Receipts.

169. The Budget estimate of Gross Receipts for 1918-19 is taken at R70·50 crores, or R2·25 crores higher than the Revised estimate of the current year. It is anticipated that the favourable conditions of traffic which have contributed so largely to the earnings of the current year will be fully maintained in the ensuing year and that the enhancements of fares and freights introduced for the most part during 1917 will in 1918-19 affect the receipts of the whole year and consequently add more to the total of receipts than they have done this year. Allowance has also been made for development of traffic and for additional earnings from new lines and extensions.

Working Expenses.

170. The grant for Working Expenses in 1918-19 is more than the Revised for the current year by R356·64 lakhs, the increase being due partly to the larger traffic anticipated and partly to a larger programme of special repairs and renewals than in the current year. It also provides for the temporary enhancement of pay of railway subordinates recently sanctioned.

Surplus Profits.

171. Under Surplus Profits paid to companies there is an increase of R11 lakhs due to the profits earned in the second half of the current year, payment of which will be made next year, being larger than those of the second half of 1916-17.

Interest Charges, etc.

Revised, 1917-18.

172. The decrease under Interest on debt is explained in paragraph 67. The excess under sinking funds is due to the realisation of 4½ per cent. War Loan and consequent purchase of India stock for cancellation.

get, 1918-19. The decrease in the total Interest charges in 1918-19 is due to smaller provision under Sinking Funds and Interest on capital deposited by companies.

Other receipts.

173. The receipts shown under this head represent recoveries from the Travancore Durbar of its share of the loss on the Travancore branch of the South Indian Railway; the Government share of the surplus profits of the Rohilkund and Kumaon, Southern Punjab, Amritsar-Patti and Hardwar-Dehra Railways, payable under the terms of their respective contracts, and dividends on certain shares of the Ahmedabad-Dholka Railway allotted to Government in repayment of expenditure incurred by it on behalf of the railway. The improvement of £10,600 on the Budget estimate of receipts in the current year and the decrease of £10,300 provided for in the Budget of 1918-19 are mainly due to variations in the recovery from the Travancore Durbar and in the Government share of surplus profits of the Southern Punjab Railway Company.

Revised, 1917-18.

Budget, 1918-19.

Other charges.

174. These consist of cost of land required by certain Companies, the contracts with which provide for the free supply of land wanted for the purposes of the railways undertaken by them, and of miscellaneous items such as surveys and controlling establishments (including the Railway Board). A share of the cost of control is charged to the working expenses of each Railway Company and the recoveries thus made are adjusted by deduction from the miscellaneous expenditure. The figures are:—

Revised, 1917-18. Land.—A lapse of R8·10 lakhs is expected in the Imperial Budget grant for the current year, due chiefly to short outlay on the Bengal and North Western, Mymensingh Bhairab Bazar and Darjeeling Himalayan Railways, to smaller payment of rebate to the Guzerat Railways and to the postponement of acquisition of land for the Chaparmukh Silghat, Tenali Repali and Bengal Duars Railways for which an aggregate provision of R·70 lakh was made in the Budget. These decreases have been partly counterbalanced by outlay on certain Railways for which no Budget provision was made. The principal allotments made in 1918-19 are for the Bengal and North-Western Railway and for the payment of rebate to the Guzerat Railways.

Budget, 1918-19.

Revised, 1917-18. Miscellaneous Expenditure.—The Revised estimate for 1917-18 shows a small lapse of R·60 lakh. The Budget for 1918-19 is made up as follows:—

175. Taking India as a whole, the net revenue derived from Major Irrigation works in 1917-18 will exceed the Budget forecast by £99,100 (R14·86 lakhs). There will be a rise of R4·54 lakhs in the Direct Receipts and of R·15 lakh in the share of Land Revenue. There will also be a saving of R10·17 lakhs in the expenditure, viz., a reduction of R12·73 lakhs in the interest charges, partly counterbalanced by an increase of R2·56 lakhs under Working Expenses. A further improvement of £63,600 (R9·55 lakhs) is expected in the net revenue in 1918-19. This allows for a rise of R22·84 lakhs in the gross revenue, made up of an increase of R13·51 lakhs in the Direct Receipts and of R9·33 lakhs in the share of Land Revenue. But a higher provision of R9·10 lakhs has been made for Working Expenses and there will also be a large growth of R4·19 lakhs in the interest charges. The net result under Minor Irrigation works in 1917-18 is better than the Budget estimate by £51,600 (R7·74 lakhs), the result of an increase of R2·72 lakhs in revenue and a saving of R5·02 lakhs in expenditure. The estimate for next year provides for a fall of R·98 lakh in the receipts and for a rise of R16·09 lakhs in expenditure.

DIRECT RECEIPTS.

(a) Imperial.

177. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 is less than the Budget by R2·78 lakhs. The decrease is mainly due to the receipts from the Upper Swat River Canal in the North-West Frontier Province and the Twante Canal in Burma, both of which were recently opened for irrigation, not having been as favourable as anticipated. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides for a development of irrigation in these provinces and on the canals in the United Provinces and Central Provinces, and is R3·46 lakhs higher than the Revised for the current year.

Revised, 1917-18.

Budget, 1918-19.

(b) Divided and wholly Provincial.

178. The rise of R7·32 lakhs in the Revised estimate for the current year as compared with the Budget is due mainly to a large increase in the area under irrigation in the United Provinces (R7·58 lakhs) during both the rabi and the kharif seasons. An improvement of R1·04 lakhs is also expected in the Punjab, an increase in the revenue from the Upper and Lower Bari Doab Canals due to the same cause being partly counterbalanced by a decline in the receipts from the Sirhind and Upper Jhelum canals owing in the former case to the damage done to the kharif crop by excessive rains. The receipts in Bombay will, on the other hand, fall short of the Budget by R2·27 lakhs owing to a postponement of collections to the next year.

Revised, 1917-18.

179. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 is based generally on the demand for rabi irrigation in the current year and on normal requirements in connection with the next year's kharif. Increases of R9·49 and R3·49 lakhs are expected in the Punjab and Bombay owing to an expected development of irrigation in the former case from the projects recently completed and in the latter to the collection of revenue thrown forward from the current year, but there will be a fall of R3·29 lakhs in the United Provinces in consequence of an anticipated reduction in the demand for canal water for the rabi cultivation in the current year.

Budget, 1918-19.

WORKING EXPENSES.

(a) Imperial.

180. The total expenditure in 1917-18 is likely to fall short of the Budget provision by R1·43 lakhs. The saving occurs mainly in the expenditure on the Twante canal in Burma in consequence of a reduced demand for irrigation. A minor lapse in the North-West Frontier (R·70 lakh) is nearly set off by an excess in the United Provinces (R·67 lakh).

Revised, 1917-18.

181. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 is R3·37 lakhs more than the Revised for the current year. It provides for normal charges in all the provinces and includes a reserve provision of R2·02 lakhs for unforeseen requirements.

Budget, 1918-19.

(b) Divided and wholly Provincial.

182. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 will exceed the Budget by R3·99 lakhs. There will be an increase of R2·64 lakhs in the Punjab and of R1·45 lakhs in Bombay owing to extensive repairs necessitated by an abnormal rainfall, and larger establishment charges in consequence of a revision of the method of allocating them between the revenue and capital heads. A minor excess in Bihar and Orissa will be met from savings in Madras and the United Provinces.

Revised, 1917-18.

183. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides for extensions and improvements of irrigation works in almost all provinces and is R5·73 lakhs more than the Revised estimate for the current year.

REVENUE.

[Rev]ised, 1917-18. [Bud]get, 1918-19.

185. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 exceeds the Budget by R1·47 lakhs owing mainly to more extended irrigation in the Punjab than anticipated. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides for normal receipts.

(b) Divided and Provincial.

186. The total Revised estimate for 1917-18 exceeds the Budget by R1·25 lakhs. The increase is distributed in small amounts over all provinces except Bombay and the Central Provinces. The Budget for 1918-19 does not differ materially from the Revised for the current year.

EXPENDITURE.

(a) Imperial—India and England.

[Rev]ised, 1917-18.

187. The Budget estimate of the current year included a grant of R3·45 lakhs in aid of special expenditure entailed by the recommendations of the Irrigation Commission. R·25 lakh out of this grant is being spent on certain minor projects in Baluchistan, while R·50 lakh has been allotted to the Government of the United Provinces for tank restoration works and placed at its credit by an assignment of Imperial revenue (vide paragraph 229). The balance of the special grant will lapse. With petty variations in the grants for Imperial expenditure in other provinces, the Revised estimate for the current year is expected to fall short of the Budget by R3·48 lakhs.

[Bud]get, 1918-19.

188. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 exceeds the current year's Revised by R1·74 lakhs. Provision for new works has been curtailed as far as possible. Allowance has been made in the Punjab for the regrant of a lapse in the current year, and a reserve of R·57 lakh has been entered to meet expenditure which cannot be foreseen at present.

(b) Divided and Provincial.

[Rev]ised, 1917-18.

189. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 falls short of the Budget by R1·54 lakhs. Lapses in grants are anticipated in Bombay, Bihar and Orissa, the Central Provinces and the Punjab. The savings in these provinces will be partly absorbed by expenditure on tank restoration works in the United Provinces which is being financed largely by a special assignment from Imperial revenues (vide paragraph 187) and by outlay on unforeseen works in Burma, Madras and Bengal.

[Bud]get, 1918-19.

190. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 is taken at R14·35 lakhs more than the Revised for the current year. Provision has generally been made for sanctioned establishments, for necessary repairs and for urgent works. Allotments have been made for capital works in the Madaripur Bhil route, for the creation of a spill in the Bidyadhari river and for schemes for flood protection in Bengal (R6·62 lakhs), for the formation of a reserve depôt for tools and machinery in the United Provinces (R3·31 lakhs), for dredging operations in the Irrawaddy delta in Burma (R3 lakhs) and for the construction of a distributary for the Tribeni canal in Bihar and Orissa. A reduction in expenditure of R1·08 lakhs is anticipated in the Punjab owing to the completion of certain projects now in hand.

EXPENDITURE.

(a) Imperial—India and England.

Revised 191

193. The total expenditure in 1917-18 is expected to fall short of the Budget by R26·12 lakhs. Of this decrease, R20 lakhs are nominal, being due to the transfer to the Army head of the expenditure on the Acetone factory for which provision was included in the Budget under Civil Works. The further saving of R6·12 lakhs under this head is due to a credit for sale-proceeds of sites acquired in past years for a new Currency office in Madras and to the partial lapse of the reserve provision of R8·30 lakhs included in the Budget. The balance of this allotment has been utilised for the provision of further temporary accommodation in Delhi; for a grant to the Delhi Municipality for the extension and improvement of the western part of the city; and for the acquisition and development of certain estates in Simla.

Budget, 1918

194. In 1918-19 the total Imperial grant has been fixed at R90 lakhs, exclusive of R7·09 lakhs allotted for expenditure in the Civil Department, mostly in the several minor administrations, and of sums aggregating R33·15 lakhs to be spent by the administrations of the North-West Frontier Province (R25 lakhs) and Baluchistan (R8·15 lakhs). The total Budget for 1918-19 is more than the Revised estimate for 1917-18 by R16·26 lakhs and less than the Budget grant for the latter year by R9·86 lakhs The grants for ordinary expenditure have been kept as low as possible in view of the present financial situation.

195. The purposes to which the grant of R90 lakhs mentioned in the preceding paragraph will be applied are shown below :—

196. The Budget grant for 1918-19 proposed for Baluchistan does not differ materially from the Revised estimate for 1917-18. The grant for the North-West Frontier Province is taken at R·91 lakh more than the Revised.

vised, 1917-18.

197. The total Revised estimate for 1917-18 is less than the Budget by R37·10 lakhs. The Budget provided for an outlay of R12 lakhs on Civil Works from the special Imperial assignments made in recent years for Education, Sanitation and other beneficent services, but the total expenditure of this class in the current year to be recorded under Civil Works is now estimated at about R23 lakhs. Eliminating this special expenditure as well as the Budget provision made for it, the Revised estimate under Civil Works falls short of the corresponding Budget grant by about R48 lakhs. Of this a decrease of R7·03 lakhs in the Punjab is nominal, being due to a change in the method of adjustment of grants to District Boards for special purposes, these being now classified under Miscellaneous instead of Civil Works. There is also a reduction of about R4 lakhs in Madras owing to a credit from the supply of stores to the Military Department. The balance of the saving is due to ordinary lapses in grants distributed over all provinces except Bombay, Bengal and the United Provinces. The saving is largest in Burma and Assam, the main item in the former province being a lapse of R2·50 lakhs in the provision for the acquisition of a site for the Rangoon University. The aggregate saving would have been larger but for increased grants made to local bodies in Madras, Bombay and Bengal.

198. The table below compares the details of the grants for 1918-19 in the various provinces so far as settled at present with the probable expenditure in the current year.

199. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 exceeds the Revised for the current year by R124·01 lakhs. The increase is distributed over all the provinces, but is largest in Bombay (R34·42 lakhs). Allotments aggregating R7 lakhs have been made for outlay on civil works from the special Imperial assignments made in recent years.

200. The total provision for original works in 1918-19 has been taken at R97·14 lakhs more than the probable expenditure in the current year. Provision has been made for a considerable expansion of outlay on buildings and communications in Bombay and the Punjab; for progress of work in connection with the Bankipore buildings and the Indian Lunatic Asylum and for the acquisition of a site for the Patna University in Bihar and Orissa; for expenditure connected with the partition of the districts of Midnapore and Mymensingh in Bengal; for regrant of lapses in the current year in Burma and the Central Provinces; and in the last-mentioned province for the acquisition of a site for the Nagpur University and a building for the Arts College at Amraoti.

201. The total provision for grants to local boards and municipalities in 1918-19 is about R2 lakhs more than the similar expenditure in 1917-18, as the result of minor variations in all provinces. The Budget estimate in Bombay includes an allotment of R10 lakhs for grants to local bodies from the extra revenue which will be obtained from a change in the system of sales of country spirit—vide paragraph 32. Of the provision under grants to local bodies R1·50 lakhs represent the grant from Imperial revenues to the Calcutta Improvement Trust.

202. The Budget grants for repairs and establishment charges are generally based on normal requirements and sanctioned scales. Provision has been made in Burma for a grant to District Cess Funds in the wolfram area for the upkeep of roads, and in the Central Provinces for a third circle of superintendence and the re-opening of a division. The Budget under the head "Other items" includes a reserve provision of R5 lakhs in Burma; the increase in Madras as compared with the Revised estimate for 1917-18 is due to the latter including credits from the supply of stores to the Military Department.

REVENUE.

Revised, 1917-18.

203. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 does not differ materially from the Budget, a decrease of R1·15 lakhs in Delhi owing to the receipts of the Imperial Delhi Committee being adjusted in reduction of capital outlay being set off by receipts from the sale of buildings in other minor administrations.

Budget, 1918-19.

The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides for normal receipts.

(b) Provincial.

Revised, 1917-18.

204. The Revised estimate for 1917-18 shows a rise of R5·02 lakhs over the Budget estimate, due to larger receipts on account of the Government share of the surplus profits of the Shahadara-Saharanpur Light Railway in the United Provinces and to increase in the sale-proceeds of old materials and tools and plant and miscellaneous items of revenue in Bombay and Madras.

Budget, 1918-19.

The Budget estimate for 1918-19 provides generally for normal receipts; provision has been made in the Central Provinces for a contribution of R1·50 lakhs expected from the public for the King Edward's College, Amraoti.

Revised, 191 compared Budget, 1917-.

205. The preceding statement indicates that the net expenditure under the Army head during the current year is likely to exceed the Budget estimate of R36,34·43 lakhs (£24,229,600) by R3,48·70 lakhs (£2,324,600), made up of R1,74·38 lakhs (£1,162,500) in India and R1,74·32 lakhs (£1,162,100) in England.

206. The following are the principal causes involving additional expenditure in India, which could not be foreseen when the Budget was framed in March last:—

	Lakhs of rupees.	£ Sterling.
(1) Additional expenditure on account of "War—India," chiefly in connection with port defences, mine-sweeping operations, and the North-West Frontier and Aden operations .	1,26 22	841,500
(2) Grant of increased pay to British soldiers .	55 50	370,000
(3) Increased Ordnance expenditure in connection with various measures, e g., increased scale of practice ammunition for Mobile Artillery and extension of the steel furnaces at the Ishapore Factory, etc.	15·03	100,200
(4) Increased railway charges	21·88	145,900
(5) Expenditure on account of the Indian Munitions Board	21·15	141,000
(6) Extended dairy farm operations . . .	14·14	94,200
(7) Larger travelling allowances and contingencies	15·50	103,300
(8) Larger purchase of horses and mules in connection with Machine Gun Squadrons, etc .	11 50	76,700
(9) Increased expenditure in connection with the re-organisation of Mechanical Transport Companies, Motor Ambulance Convoys, etc.	8·68	57,900
(10) Acquisition of land for the Ishapore Ordnance Factory	6·12	40,800
(11) Larger regimental pay and allowances on account of 5 additional Cavalry Brigade Signal Troops, reorganisation of Signal Companies, formation of Machine Gun Companies and Squadrons, additional Aeroplane flights, etc. .	16 35	109,000
	3,12·07	2,080,500

Other items account for an increase of about R36 lakhs (£240,000), making a total increase of about R3,48 lakhs (£2,320,000).

On the other hand, there have been considerable decreases amounting to about R47 lakhs (£313,000), of which the most important are smaller Army non-effective charges in India, lower food charges, smaller exchange compensation allowance payments, and smaller expenditure on the European section of the Indian Defence Force. The amount (£703,000) provided in the Budget as a reserve must also be set off against the increased expenditure, which has been partly met from this source: and finally there has been an improvement in receipts of R22 lakhs (£146,600), of which the chief items are R10¼ lakhs for departmental charges on supplies furnished by the Indian Munitions Board and R12½ lakhs on account of larger sales of dairy produce, partly counterbalanced by smaller receipts under other heads.

With regard to (2) above, the concession follows the increase of pay sanctioned at Home and has effect from the 29th September 1917.

In respect of (4), railway charges, which prior to the war averaged less than £300,000 a year, have been steadily rising. The actual expenditure in 1916-17 exceeded £700,000, and in the current year it is expected that the Budget provision of R105 lakhs (£700,000) will be exceeded by nearly R22 lakhs (£145,900). As explained in paragraph 218 of the memorandum explaining the details of the estimates for 1917-18, Indian revenues bear the cost of all movements of troops, animals, stores, etc., within Indian limits, other than movements to seaports for despatch overseas, which are debitable to the Imperial Government.

In connection with (5), it may be observed that while the outlay on the Indian Munitions Board is £141,000, about half of this sum is recouped in the way of departmental charges on supplies issued by the Board.

207. The increase of £1,162,100 at Home includes £900,000 on completing the supply of rifles and ammunition. The balance is chiefly made up of larger purchases of stores and increased payments to the War Office on account of retired pay of British forces for service in India, due to an over-estimate of the recoveries to be made from the War Office on account of war pensions, which are taken in reduction of the former charges.

[Bu]dget, 1918-19, [com]pared with [Re]vised, 1917-18.

208. The net Budget estimate for 1918-19 under the Army head amounts to R39,97·02 lakhs (£26,646,800), or R13·89 lakhs (£92,600) more than the estimated net expenditure in the current year. This increase is represented by a larger provision of R2,86·73 lakhs (£1,911,500) in India and smaller provision of R2,72·84 lakhs (£1,818,900) at Home.

[Bu]dget, 1918-19, [com]pared with [Re]vised, 1917-18.

209. The Indian increase is chiefly due to :—

	Lakhs of rupees.	£ Sterling.
(1) Reserve for unforeseen charges . . .	2,96·53	1,976,900
(2) Larger provision for increased pay to British soldiers	59·25	395,000
(3) Provision in connection with the scheme for expansion of ordnance factories . . .	37·50	250,000
(4) Larger provision for "war" non-effective charges (there is a corresponding decrease in the Home payments)	15·00	100,000
	4,08·28	2,721,900

These increases are partly counterbalanced by the following decreases :—

	Lakhs of rupees.	£ Sterling.
(5) Smaller provision under "War-India," chiefly owing to heavy expenditure in 1917-18 on active operations on the North-West Frontier .	74·34	495,600
(6) Smaller provision for purchase of horses and mules	14·70	98,000
(7) Smaller provision for exchange compensation allowance	10·41	69,400
(8) Exclusion of provision in 1918-19 for Ordnance expenditure incurred in 1917-18 on account of practice ammunition for mobile artillery units, extension of the steel furnaces of the Ishapore Branch of the Gun and Shell Factory, etc.	13·98	93,200
(9) Smaller provision for railway charges . .	6·88	45,900
	120·31	802,100

210. The saving at Home is mainly made up of a decrease of £104,300 in non-effective payments to the War Office, chiefly owing to larger recoveries for "war" pensions and gratuities payable in India and by the India Office on behalf of the War Office; of £26,700 in Indian Troop Service payments—the payments in 1917-18 included certain arrear charges; and of £1,700,200 on stores. In 1917-18, heavy payments amounting to £1,450,000 are being made for rifles and ammunition, which mainly account for the lower figure for stores in 1918-19.

Budget, 1918-19, compared with Budget, 1917-18.

211. Compared with the current year's Budget of £24,229,600, the net Army expenditure in the coming year's Budget, which is placed at £26,646,800, shows an increase of £2,417,200. This is represented by an increase of £3,074,000 in the Indian provision and a decrease of £656,800 in the Home provision. These variations have been already explained in the preceding paragraphs, which compare the Revised for 1917-18 with the Budget for that year, and the Budget for 1918-19 with the Revised for 1917-18.

Revised, 1917-18, compared with Budget, 1917-18.

212. The expenditure in India during 1917-18 is expected to be R2·34 lakhs more than the Budget, owing mainly to larger expenditure on stores and machinery. But for a reduction of R8·74 lakhs owing to readjustment of war charges provisionally compiled as Marine expenditure in 1916-17, the increase would have been about R11 lakhs over the Budget. Taking the improvement of R6·03 lakhs in receipts into account, the net expenditure in India becomes R4 lakhs, or R3¾ lakhs less than the R7¾ lakhs included in the Budget.

The decrease of £117,500 at Home is due chiefly to the lapse of the provision (£143,500) made for the construction of vessels; this, however, is merely a postponement, not a reduction, of expenditure. A credit of £13,600 afforded by the War Office for a dredger taken over by them further reduces the expenditure in 1917-18. The decrease is partly counterbalanced by increased expenditure on miscellaneous stores demanded by India.

Budget, 1918-19, compared with Revised, 1917-18.

213. The provision for next year, India and Home combined, is R32·42 lakhs (£216,100) in excess of the estimated net expenditure of £435,600 in 1917-18. Provision is again being made for the construction of the Marine vessels which could not be proceeded with in 1917-18. This accounts for £132,800 of the increase, while an additional sum of £54,700 has been allowed for imported stores from Home.

214. Expenditure, Ordinary Demands.—Many urgent measures necessitated by the war have been undertaken and in the aggregate account for an increase of R80½ lakhs (£536,600). Among the more important items may be instanced the provision of accommodation for No. 44 British General Hospital at Deolali, costing about R18½ lakhs; the provision of a new water supply at the same station, costing about R6½ lakhs; and the Acetone Factory at Nasik, involving an expenditure of about R12¼ lakhs.

Special Demands.—Here, too, a considerable increase is anticipated, i. e., of about R26½ lakhs (£177,000) over the budget allotment of about R64½ lakhs. An extra allotment of R10 lakhs (over the budget provision of R15 lakhs) has been made for improvements to frontier roads; the installation of electric lights in No. 44 British General Hospital, Deolali, will cost R2 lakhs; the construction of additional buildings at Simla to provide accommodation for the Army Headquarters offices and the Indian Munitions Board accounts for about R2½ lakhs; accommodation for a Gurkha Battalion at Almora will cost R1½ lakhs; the construction of certain works required at the Army Clothing Factory, Shahjahanpur, involves R1¼ lakhs; additional funds to the extent of R1 lakh have also been allotted for the supply of poles and frames for mosquito curtains to all regimental ranks of regular British and Anglo-Indian units; and R1½ lakhs more have been granted for the reconstruction of Indian troops' lines.

Budget, 1918-19 compared with Budget, 1917-18

215. Expenditure—Ordinary Demands.—For 1918-19, R136 lakhs (£906,700) have been allotted against R109½ lakhs in the current year. The principal cause of the increase is due to provision for accommodation for mechanical transport companies and armoured cars, for installation of electric lights and fans in barracks and hospitals, and for heavier repairs.

Special Demands.—The allotment for 1918-19 amounts to about R131¼ lakhs (£874,800); the most important measures provided for are—

R15 lakhs for Indian troops' lines, against R13 lakhs in the current year's Budget.

R40 lakhs for frontier roads, against R25 lakhs likely to be spent in the current year.

R8 lakhs for electric installations in barracks and hospitals for British troops; R2 lakhs have also been provided for this purpose under the ordinary head for works costing half a lakh and under.

R10 lakhs for improvements to British troops' hospitals in various stations in India.

R20 lakhs for improvements to Indian troops' hospitals.

About R33¾ lakhs have been provided for new works, and the balance for works in progress.

216. The variation in 1917-18 is unimportant.

This head has, with the approval of the Secretary of State, been abolished with effect from 1st April 1918, and any future expenditure and past re-adjustments will be included under the head "Military Works."

SCHEDULE.

217. In the Budget of 1917-18, a sum of R285·20 lakhs (£1,901,300) was included for "Schedule" measures. The probable expenditure is now estimated at R4,95·37 lakhs (£3,302,500), or an increase of R2,10·17 lakhs (£1,401,200)—about £763,000 in England and £638,000 in India. The increase in England includes £900,000 over and above the budget provision of £550,000 on account of new rifles and ammunition, and a lapse of £157,100 owing to postponement of the construction of the Marine vessels already mentioned, including a credit for a dredger taken over by the War Office. The increase in India includes £370,000 on account of increased pay to British troops, and R23 lakhs (£154,000) on Military Works, e.g., frontier roads.

The Schedule system is still largely in abeyance under the special circumstances of the war.

218. The Schedule for 1918-19 has been fixed at £2,171,800. The grant of increased pay to British troops in India alone accounts for £765,000. India's liability in connection with the expansion of Ordnance factories accounts for £250,000. For grant of pay of temporary rank to British officers of the Indian Army, £60,000 have been provided. For completion of the two Marine vessels about £133,000 have been allotted. Increased provision has been made for military works in progress, including £267,000 for frontier roads and £200,000 for improvements to British and Indian troops' hospitals at various stations in India.

219. The Budget for 1917-18 included a net provision of £25·9 million. The present estimate raises this figure nearly by £2·9 million. This increase may be briefly ascribed to the continuance of war conditions necessitating the purchase of rifles and ammunition, the grant of increased pay to British troops, the adoption of measures for the protection of our frontier and sea coasts, the improvement of frontier roads, and the construction of hospitals.

1918-19.

220. For the ensuing year, £29 million has been fixed as the net Military Budget grant, which is only £217,500 more than the anticipated expenditure in 1917-18. It is assumed that war conditions will continue; and the Budget includes a "reserve" for unforeseen demands of £1,977,000, as against £703,000 in the current year's Budget. This latter amount was completely utilised within a few months of the opening of the financial year.

221. The increase of R·36 lakh in the Revised estimate of the current year as compared with the Budget is made up as follows :— Revised, 1917-18.

	(Lakhs of rupees.)
(1) Increase in assignment to the United Provinces for loss of excise revenue on account of reduction of duty on rum issued to troops from distilleries in the province . .	+1·39
(2) Increase in the Punjab Government's share of sale-proceeds of sites for shops and residences in certain towns in that province (these receipts are credited in the Imperial section of the accounts, but the Local Government is entitled to a moiety)	+0·52

1918-19.

222. The Budget estimate for 1918-19 exceeds the Revised for the current year by R1·72 lakhs. The increase is due to the following causes:—

	Lakhs of rupees.
(1) Increase in assignment to Madras in connection with the remission of the village service cess in proprietary estates, due to progress in the resumption of inam lands of village servants	+1·26
(2) Petty adjustments of a recurring nature	+·46
Total	+1·72

(b) Recurring assignments from Provincial to Imperial in connection with the 1916-17 scheme of taxation.

1917-18.

1918-19.

223. The increases of (a) R53·65 lakhs in the Revised estimate over the Budget for the current year and (b) R2·35 lakhs in the Budget for 1918-19 over the Revised for 1917-18 relate to the revision of income-tax rates introduced in 1916. The head Income-tax is divided equally between Imperial and Provincial revenues, but as the taxation referred to was imposed for Imperial purposes, an assignment is taken from the provinces equivalent to the yield of the new taxation which is credited to the Provincial revenues under the ordinary division. The amounts of the assignments vary therefore with reference to the latest estimates of the proceeds of the taxation which are credited in the first instance as Provincial revenue. The increase in the assignments is distributed among the provinces as follows;—

	Lakhs of rupees.
	1917-18.	1918-19.
Madras	+6·00	—2·00
Bombay	+25·70	+2·80

Bihar and Orissa	+1·27	—·27
Central Provinces	+1·00	...
Assam	+·50	...
Total	+53·65	+2·35

(c) Special recurring grants for Education.

1917-18.

224. The small increase of R·30 lakh in the Revised estimate for the current year as compared with the Budget is due to a recurring assignment to the Punjab for the maintenance and equipment of science laboratories in the Islamia College, Lahore, sanctioned from the undistributed balance of the recurring appropriation of R154 lakhs made from Imperial revenues in recent years for the improvement of education (see paragraph 101).

225. The increase of R28·50 lakhs in the Budget estimate for 1918-19 over the Revised for 1917-18 relates to the recurring appropriation of R30 lakhs which it has been decided to make from Imperial revenues from the year 1918-19 for the development of primary education (vide paragraph 103). The grant of R28·50 lakhs will be distributed among the provinces as follows, the balance of R1·50 lakhs being reserved for direct Imperial expenditure or for future distribution :—

	Lakhs of rupees.
Madras	5·50
Bombay	4·00
Bengal	5·50
United Provinces	4·50
Punjab	2·00
Burma	1·50
Bihar and Orissa	3·00
Central Provinces	1·50
Assam	1·00
Total	28·50

(d) Non-recurring assignments for Education.

226. The following contributions will be paid for Provincial expenditure from the undistributed balance of the recurring appropriation of R154 lakhs made from Imperial revenues in recent years for educational expenditure :— Revised, 1917-18. Budget, 1918-19.

	Lakhs of rupees. 1917-18.	1918-19
(1) Additional grant to the Dacca University	1·00	1·00
(2) Contribution in aid of research work by Dr. Sir J. C. Bose	·34	·38
(3) Grant to the Hindu University, Benares	1·00	...
(4) Contribution for the Government training class at Sanawar (in the Punjab)	·50	·50
(5) Contribution for a training college for male teachers of the domiciled community in Madras	·25	·25
(6) Contribution to an institution for married Hindu ladies in Bombay	·01	...
Total	3·10	2·13

(e) Non-recurring grants for Sanitation.

227. The following allotments have been sanctioned during the current year from the undistributed balance of the special recurring appropriation of R51 lakhs made from Imperial revenues in recent years for the improvement of sanitation :— Revised, 1917-18.

	Lakhs of rupees.
(1) To the United Provinces, for sanitary improvement of the pilgrim route to Badrinath and Kedarnath	1·00
(2) To the Punjab, in connection with certain sanitary measures	1·20
(3) To Bengal for water-supply in Midnapore	1·00
(4) To Bombay (·75) and the Central Provinces (·60) for the relief of congestion in certain areas	1·35
Total	4·55

(f) Non-recurring grants for Agriculture and allied objects.

228. The increase of R1 lakh in the Revised estimate for the current year as compared with the Budget represents an assignment to the Punjab from the profits of the wheat scheme of 1915 by transfer from an allotment made in the Budget for expenditure by the Agricultural Adviser to the Government of India—vide paragraph 128. Revised, 1917-18.

(g) Miscellaneous non-recurring grants.

CAPITAL EXPENDITURE ON RAILWAYS AND IRRIGATION AND OTHER WORKS NOT CHARGED TO REVENUE.

RAILWAY CONSTRUCTION.

Revised, 1917-18.

230. In the Budget for 1917-18, a sum of R540 lakhs was allotted for expenditure on railway construction for which the Government of India undertake financial responsibility. During the course of the year an addition of R150 lakhs to meet the cost of the Dalbandin Mirjawa Extension was sanctioned, thus raising the total grant to R690 lakhs. The expenditure of the year is now estimated at R472·45 lakhs or R217 55 lakhs less than the grant. The lapse is due to the expenditure on the Dalbandin Mirjawa Extension not having progressed as rapidly as was expected, to the difficulties attendant on the supply of material from England, and to special credits anticipated from the supply of railway stores, etc., to the Military Department. For 1918-19 a grant of R630·35 lakhs has been provided, of which R198·62 lakhs is for rolling stock; allowing for a credit of R27 lakhs anticipated in the next year from the supply of stores for war purposes, the effective grant for capital outlay during the next year amounts to R657·35 lakhs.

Budget, 1918-19.

231. The distribution of the total expenditure on Railway construction between State and Companies' agency in each of the three years from 1916-17 to 1918-19 is as follows:—

ed, 1917-18. 235. The expenditure in 1917-18 is expected to fall short of the Budget by R34·14 lakhs. There will be a lapse of about R16 lakhs in the allotments for works in operation, owing to the credit to the Twante Canal project in Burma of the cost of certain dredgers taken over by His Majesty's Government for war requirements and to smaller outlay on the permanent head works of the Ganges Canal in the United Provinces and the Upper Bari Doab Canal in the Punjab; partly set off by increased expenditure on the Upper Swat River Canal in the North-West Frontier Province. There will also be a saving of about R14⅓ lakhs in the grant for works under construction, due to slower progress of work on the Toludur project in Madras owing to scarcity of labour, difficulty in obtaining steel materials and untimely rains and on the Mahanadi and the Wain Ganga Canals in the Central Provinces. The whole of the reserve provision of R3½ lakhs included in the Budget will lapse.

dget, 1918-19. 236. The Budget grant for 1918-19 has been fixed at Rs. 70 lakhs or about R14 lakhs more than the probable expenditure in 1917-18, with reference to the financial situation and after due consideration of the requirements of the various canals under construction most of which are nearing completion. The following table shows the distribution of expenditure in 1917-18 and the grant for 1918-19 :—

Name of Project.	Expenditure in 1917-18.	Expenditure in 1918-19.

Of the total grant of R70 lakhs, about R32 lakhs will be allotted to canals under construction; about R37 lakhs will be devoted to the completion and development of canals in operation, and a small sum of R1 lakh will be held in reserve to meet unforeseen requirements.

237. The figures mentioned above do not include expenditure on Protective Irrigation Works, whether financed from the Famine Insurance grant or from ordinary revenues outside that grant. Including this outlay, and also some small expenditure on works which were originally classed as productive but have since ceased to belong to that class, the total expected outlay on the construction of irrigation works in the three years ending 1918-19 is as follows:—

ised, 1917-18. 239. The expenditure in the current year will amount to R37·60 lakhs or R2·40 lakhs less than the Budget. The distribution of the expenditure now anticipated is as follows :—

	(In lakhs of R.)
(1) Works Expenditure	32·92
(2) Establishment and miscellaneous charges	4·68
Total .	37·60

Of the works expenditure about R3 lakhs are being spent on preliminary work; R5½ lakhs on the purchase of tools and plant and other stores; about R5 lakhs on sanitation; and about R17½ lakhs on work on the Government House and the Secretariat and the construction of certain residential buildings.

The provisional distribution of the Budget estimate of R40 lakhs in 1918-19 is given below—

	(In lakhs of R)
(1) Works expenditure	35·67
(2) Establishment and miscellaneous charges	4·33
TOTAL .	40·00

Of the grant of R35 67 lakhs for works outlay, R4 lakhs will be devoted to preliminary work and the further purchase of tools and plant and other stores. A sum of R6 lakhs will be spent on sanitation and R21 lakhs will be applied mainly to the construction of buildings on which work has already been commenced.

INDIA'S FINANCIAL CONTRIBUTION TO THE WAR.

240. The entry of £100 million in the Revised estimate for 1917-18 relates to the contribution made by India to His Majesty's Government towards the cost of the European war. It is made up of (a) £35,139,000 being the proceeds of the Indian war loan of 1917 (inclusive of cash certificates) paid to His Majesty's Government in cash and (b) £64,861,000 representing the amount of the British war debt which India has taken over in respect of the balance of the contribution—vide paragraph 253 and note (c) to the table in paragraph 243.

WAYS AND MEANS.

HOME TREASURY.

241. The bulk of the payments made in England on account of the Government of India consist normally of expenditure chargeable to the Indian revenues; and if such payments represented the only transactions, the Ways and Means programme would be a simple arrangement, as the whole of the expenditure would ordinarily be met by remittance of funds from India. The capital outlay on the construction of railways and irrigation works, however, necessitates heavy borrowing, and when practicable, a large portion of the money required is raised in England, either direct or through the agency of Companies. A further complication is introduced by the practice under which all payments made in England to Railway Companies working purchased lines, for purchase of stores and other capital purposes, as well as all moneys raised by them, and paid into the Home treasury, are brought to account under the appropriate heads in this country and are treated in the Home accounts and estimates as remittances to or from India, respectively. Operations connected with the Gold Standard and Paper Currency Reserves, and with the replacement of one particular form or item of direct or indirect debt by another, also largely swell the receipts and charges of the Home treasury without affecting ordinarily the general Ways and Means programme.

242. The items mentioned in the preceding paragraph constitute the bulk of the transactions of the Home treasury in normal years The conditions created by the war have led to certain abnormal transactions which have affected the Ways and Means position to a continually increasing extent from 1915-16 onwards and will continue to affect it next year. Large sums are being received in England from the Imperial Government and the East African Protectorate in repayment of expenditure incurred on their behalf in India. These indirect remittances from India have very largely increased the resources of the Home treasury and removed the need for direct remittances by Councils to finance its requirements.

243. The following are the details of the transactions appearing in the Budget and Revised estimates of the Home treasury for 1917-18 and in the Budget estimate of 1918-19.

*The heads marked with an asterisk appear on both the receipt and payment sides. As the receipt and corresponding disbursement in each case are generally equal, they do not affect the Ways and Means of the year to any material extent.

(a) Of these amounts £6,000,000 represents funds of the Gold Standard Reserve.

(b) Of this amount £6 001 900 represents funds of the Gold Standard Reserve.

(c) The proceeds of the Indian War Loan of 1917-18 amounting to £35 139,000 have been paid to His Majesty's Government in part payment of India's contribution to the war and appear under the head "India's Financial Contribution to the War." India has assumed liability for British war debt in respect of the balance of the contribution, viz., £61 861,000, and this amount is shown as debt incurred by per contra charge to the contribution head. The proceeds of the Indian War Loan to be floated in 1918-19 will be paid to His Majesty's Government in discharge of part of the British war debt taken over, and the estimated proceeds, viz. £20 million, appear therefore under the head "Discharge of debt."

1917-18.

244. The table in paragraph 243 shows that there will be a net disbursement of £20,868,800 from the Home Treasury in 1917-18, and that the receipts from Council Bills drawn against treasury balances in India will amount to £25,258,000. There will thus be a surplus of Council bill drawings over the net disbursements amounting to £4,389,200, and this will go to raise the cash balance of the Home treasury from £11,391,900 at the beginning of the year to £15,781,100 at its end. The transactions of the Home treasury in the current year include, however, the following special items:—

(i) There will be a net recovery of £63,954,000 from His Majesty's Government on account of disbursements connected with war requirements made on their behalf in India, and a sum of £2,776,700 will be recovered on the same account from the East African Protectorate and the Commonwealth of Australia.

(ii) A sum of £35,139,000 representing the actual receipts from the Indian war loan inclusive of post office cash certificates will be paid to His Majesty's Government in part liquidation of India's contribution of £100 million towards the cost of the war.

(iii) In view of the large transfer of cash balances from India to England by outlay on behalf of His Majesty's Government and the payment of Council bills, and the large volume of temporary debt which it has been necessary to incur in India to meet these disbursements, the Secretary of State has decided to constitute a special reserve by the investment of £20 million from his cash balances in Treasury Bills or other short-term securities of the British Government.

(iv) There will also be a payment of £13,500,000 on account of silver purchases for the Government of India.

245. The foregoing items result in a net payment of £1,908,300, and eliminating this amount the net disbursements from the Home Treasury will stand at £18,960,500 against £28,196,300 the corresponding estimate adopted in the Budget for the current year. This improvement of £9,235,800 is the net result of the following variations from Budget anticipations:—

(i) Increased recovery in respect of money orders issued on India by other countries. (The issues of money orders on India have been on an abnormal scale owing to the difficulties in effecting remittances through the ordinary channels in consequence of the present exchange position)	5,293,[illegible]
(ii) Recovery in respect of funds supplied from India to Ceylon and Jeddah consisting mainly of funds provided for the purchases of tea for the War Office in Ceylon and for the purchase of food-stuffs in India by the Ceylon Government. (These transactions were not anticipated in the Budget)	1,476,300
(iii) Proceeds of British Treasury Bills deposited in London on account of subscriptions to the Indian War Loan .	1,004,000
(iv) Larger realisation of opium revenue in England (some countries which obtain opium from India having been permitted to pay for it in London)	676,100
(v) Increased recovery in respect of coinage executed in India for Egypt	564,100
(vi) Savings in total grants for capital expenditure on railways, irrigation works and Delhi (inclusive of the net outlay of the various railway companies) . . .	1,455,300
(vii) Improvement under miscellaneous deposit and remittance transactions inclusive of petty variations in other items	354,900
Total increase in receipts or decrease in outgoings	10,818,300
(viii) Discharge of debentures of railway companies . . .	1,582,500
Net improvement .	9,235,800

246. The principal items working up to the improvement of £354,900 under miscellaneous deposit and remittance transactions are: (a) an increase in the recoveries for advances in India on account of Protectorates, His Majesty's ships on the East India station, etc. (£168,000); and (b) larger receipts from the liquidation of hostile firms (£350,000); partly set off by (c) a fall in the receipts from the employment of enemy ships (£276,000); and (d) payment to His Majesty's Government in respect of the surplus revenue of the occupied territories in Mesopotamia (£350,000).

247. The total drawings of Council bills on India in 1917-18 are expected to amount to £35,336,600. Of this sum, £25,258,000 will be utilised, as already stated, to meet the disbursements of the Home treasury; while £1,420,000 will be appropriated as a remittance on behalf of the Gold Standard Reserve of the coinage profits which have accrued to the Reserve in India, and £8,658,600 as a remittance of the Paper Currency Reserve. The total figure mentioned for Council bill drawings and the appropriation to the Paper Currency Reserve include a sum of £1,371,100 which was placed at the disposal of certain firms in the early part of the current year in connection with purchases of wheat for the Royal Commission.

The cash balance of the Home treasury at the end of 1917-18, exclusive of the sum held on account of the Gold Standard Reserve, is now estimated at about £9·8 million against a Budget forecast of £5·4 million.

250. The following are the details of the Railway remittance transactions. As already explained, they occur almost wholly in connection with the capital account of the purchased lines worked by companies :—

251. The Budget estimate contemplated the replacement by fresh capital of £1,260,000 debentures of the South Indian Railway Company maturing during the year. Debentures of the value of £760,000 have been renewed and the balance of the value of £500,000 will be discharged before the close of the year.

252. In accordance with the Budget programme £500,000 India bonds have been discharged in the current year. There has also been a small discharge of India 4 per cent. stock of the value of £200.

253. The contribution of £100 million by India towards the cost of the war is recorded separately as "India's financial contribution to the war" and is made up of £35,139,000 paid in cash to His Majesty's Government in respect of actual receipts from the Indian war loan inclusive of post office cash certificates, and debt of the 5 per cent. British war loan (1929-47) to the value of £64,861,000 for which India has assumed liability. The latter amount is shown per contra as debt incurred during the year.

Budget, 1918-19.

254. The Budget estimate provides for a net receipt of £1,248,300. It includes however the following special items :—

(1) Payment of £20 million to His Majesty's Government from the proceeds of the second Indian war loan to be floated in 1918-19.

(2) Payments amounting to £12 million for the purchase of silver.

(3) A payment of £16,347,000 for the purchase of British Treasury bills for the Paper Currency Reserve with a view to afford assistance to the Indian treasury balances.

(4) A recovery of £71,300,000 from His Majesty's Government on account of disbursements in India on their behalf connected with war requirements and a similar recovery of £2,720,000 from the East African Protectorate.

255. Eliminating these items, the net disbursements in the Budget estimate for 1918-19 amount to £24,124,700 against the corresponding figure of £18,960,500 in the Revised estimate for the current year. The deterioration of £5,464,200 arises from the following variations :—

(i) Increase in grants for capital expenditure on railways, irrigation works and Delhi (inclusive of the net outlay of the various railway companies) . .	1,031,600
(ii) Larger discharge of debentures of railway companies	1,042,400
(iii) Reduction in receipts in respect of money orders issued on India by other countries (it is assumed that the issue of these money orders will be on a smaller scale during the next year) . . .	3,705,000
(iv) Allowance for the special receipts in the current year in connection with the deposit of British Treasury Bills for subscriptions to the Indian War loan .	920,000
(v) Absence in 1918-19 of the special receipts in the current year in connection with the supply of funds to Ceylon, Jeddah, etc.	1,470,300
(vi) Increase in special expenditure in Persia necessitated by war conditions about	1,000,000
(vii) Net deterioration under miscellaneous deposit and remittance transactions	188,100
Total increase in outgoings or decrease in receipts .	9,357,400
(viii) Decrease in net expenditure charged to revenue .	3,893,200
Net deterioration .	5,464,200
